"Satisfaction in Africa."

Read following testimonial as to quality I send out to customers:—Cape Town, South Africa (received here April 18th, 1909).—The Canaries arrived per s.s. "Buceros," last week, all in splendid condition, and I am highly pleased with same. With many thanks for your most careful attention, and prompt despatch to my orders.—L. C. Carrick to J. Taylor. Kindly note the above is a repeat order, and original, with full address can he seen here any time. During past week I have received scores of flattering testimonials, which are all filed for inspection. My huge business has not been made in a single season, but has now a ten years' reputation, which cannot be equalled by any advertiser, for value, honest dealings, and prompt despatch. Don't be led astray by copyists, whose advts. are full of empty bounce, and keep no stock on hand, and have to seek them, as they get orders, but place your orders with the old reliable firm, and avoid disappointment and waiting. I can offer you extra good value in Yorkshires, in clears, ticked, green marked, and cinnamon marked, at half their value for a quick clearance. All ready to nest, cold rooms bred, and feathered to perfection. Yellow or buff cocks, at 6/-, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each. All on full song and standard length. Pairs carefully matched to breed winners at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- per pair. Fine racy yellow hens, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6 each. Buff hens, 3/-, 3/6, 4/-, 5/6, 6/-, 7/-, 8/6 each. Inspection invited at any hour, and best stock in Bradford to select from. Travelling cages 3d. extra. Seven days approval at my risk.

EASY PAYMENT SYSTEM.

Birds sent off at once, on receiving your first payment. Show and stock birds in Yorkshires, Crests, songsters, Sih. bred hens, feeding hens, etc. State wants and send for full particulars, etc., post free. Please note.—This is my "original" system, so beware of imitators. All on 7 days' approval, and satisfaction guaranteed. Only address,

CLUB REPORTS.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

Usual meeting held in the Miners' Hall, on April 17th. The treasurer submitted the balance sheet for the past season. It showed a very substantial sum in favour of the Association. It was thought advisable, owing to work being so scarce in the district, not to hold an open show this year. A new cup has been purchased for competition among the members, which should help to make the members' show of greater interest. The election of office-bearers; ensued, and the following were duly elected. President, Mr. J. Rundell; vice-president, Mr. R. McEwan; treasurer, Mr. D. Clarkson; sec., Mr. Jas. Pollock, 30, Marshall Street; and a large committee.—JAS. POLLOCK, Hon. Sec.

FALKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held in Oddfellows Hall, President Robert Dickson presiding. The judges for annual show were elected as follows: Messrs. McLay (Norwich section), D. J. Gardner (British and Foreign sections), and R. Lambie (Border Fancy section). A table show was also held. There were two classes—one for Greenfinches, and one for A.O.S. British. Mr. Eadie judged. It was agreed to hold another table show of British birds at next meeting. Members are reminded that yearly contributions are due next meeting all communications to be sent to me at 28, Union Road, Camelon, Falkirk.—ROBERT HAMILTON, Sec.

EAST BOWLING AND DIS. B.F.A.

Monthly meeting held on April 10th, Mr. J. Firth in the chair. Mr. Wm. Richmond (Rodley) gave his lecture on "Pairing and the Rearing of Young Birds" before a good gathering of members and friends. The lecture was much appreciated by the company, and some discussion ensued. Several of our members were very quick at asking questions, all of which were well handled and ably answered by Mr. Richmond. A most successful meeting was brought to a close, after a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Richmond, moved by our chairman and seconded by Mr. Sharpe.—L. BOOTH, Hon. Sec.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand) C.B.S.

Our ramble to Pailton, on April 18th, for the purpose of moss gathering, turned out a complete success, the weather being all that could be desired. A fair muster turned out. Travelling by Great Central to Lutterworth, we went thence on foot to our destination. After the four-mile walk we did ample justice to a good breakfast provided by our host, Mr. Harry Dickins, who also had a plentiful supply of moss ready gathered, leaving us the whole morning to roam the country round about. Several Thrushes' and Blackbirds' nests were found containing eggs, and Swallows were quite plentiful. We also had the pleasure of hearing a Nightingale within a few yards from the place where we were standing. The perfume of the violets was a thing to be remembered. Altogether, we had a very pleasant morning, and with a hearty handshake and many thanks to our host and hostess, we started home in time for dinner.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At a special meeting of committee, recently held, the handsome silver challenge trophy presented by the President (G. A. Touche, Esq.) for competition at annual shows, was allotted for best unflighted Canary Mule or Hybrid in show, bred by exhibitor. The silver cup presented by Messrs. Trower and Co. was allotted for best British or Foreign bird in show. It was also decided to purchase the silver cups, one for each section, novice, amateur, and champions, for best unflighted Canary Mule or Hybrid bred by exhibitor. This makes six solid silver cups to be competed for at our next annual show. It was further decided that £7 10s. be spent on purchasing specials, such as teapots, clocks, etc. Our radius is open to the world, but no member joining after the June meeting will be eligible to compete for the silver cups or trophies.—G. H. NEAL, Hon. Sec.

KILMARNOCK O C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held in the Ossington Hall, on April 17th. The balance sheet was read and unanimously adopted. The following gentlemen were elected office-bearers:—Hon. Presidents, Police-Judge Munroe, R. Findlay, Esq., and M. Jamieson, Esq.; Hon. Vice-Presidents, W. C. Cunningham, Esq., and J. Middleton, Esq.; President, Mr. J. Noble; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. J. Cram and W. Watson; secretary, James B. Y. Murdock, 9, Burnside Street, Kilmarnock; and the following strong committee:—Messrs. G. F. Adamson, J. Breadon, W. G. Muir, J. Johnston, A. Mackie, J. Smillie, R. McCallum, R. McCaw, H. Train, G. Blair, J. Calderwood, J. Jamieson, A. Gardiner, W. Guthrie, W. Strathearn, R. McDowall, R. Findlay, and G. Alston. Messrs. W. G. Muir and G. Blair, were elected auditors. After a good deal of discussion as to the best days to hold show, it was unanimously agreed that it be held on Nov. 19th and 20th, this being a fortnight earlier than usual, as our old date was too much taken up with club shows. This being all the business, the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—JAMES B. Y. MURDOCH, Secretary.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual meeting held April 17th, at Fawcett-street Cafe, Mr. J. Farrar presiding. The auditors gave their report, showing that we had a small balance in hand. A long discussion took place as to whether we should hold our usual nest feather show this year or hold a series of table shows for young birds. It was ultimately decided that we have three young bird shows at our meeting room on June 26th, July 10th, and July 24th, 3d. an entry for each bird. The whole of the entrance fees will go for six prizes for the six highest points throughout three shows, only the first, second, and third birds to count for points, and the first three birds in each class to be debarred from competing again at following shows. The following classes will be provided: Norwich, A.V., Crest or Crestbred, A.V., Border Fancy, A.V., Yorkshire, A.V., Lizard, A.V., Cinnamon, A.V., Mules, A.V., and British bird, A.S. It was decided that Mr. J. Clark judge each show. Now is the time for new members to join us.—W. REID, Hon. Sec.

Through advertising in CAGE BIRDS I have had fifty orders that I cannot fulfil, writes Mr. W. Leeson (Rushden).

The date of our open show, writes Mr. Joseph Brown, secretary of the Derwent Valley C.B.S., will be October 30th.

Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield), we hear, is engaged to judge at Wolverhampton on October 28th, and at Windhill on December 11th.

Kindly thank all who replied to my advertisement in your last week's issue, writes Mr. E. A. Wright (Watford), as I had too many to answer individually.

The Stockport B.F.A. members' First Feather Show will be held on June 17th and 18th, when Mr. H. W. Battye, of Huddersfield, will judge, writes Mr. W. Stafford, tho secretary.

The quarterly statement of accounts of the City and Suburban A.C.B., to hand from the hon. secretary, Mr. Wynn, shows a cash balance on the right side of £24 16s. 9d.

I am pleased to say, writes Mr. R. P. Shipcott (Bristol), that through my advertisement in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, I could have disposed of my Crested hens seventy times over.

We have fixed November 10th and 11th for our annual show, writes Mr. E. L. A. Crow, hon. secretary of the Lowestoft F.S., and have engaged Mr. W. E. Greaves to judge the Canary section.

I have through pressure of business, writes Mr. J. Woodhouse, been compelled to relinquish the post of secretary to the Portsmouth C.B.S. The new secretary is Mr. Hawes, 125, Commercial Road, Portsmouth.

I am pleased to inform you that I have had a lot of sales through my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. I only wish I had advertised in it before as it is a grand medium. —JOHN MARTIN (Castle Douglas).

We have elected Mr. W. Turner (Rotherham), as judge for the cage-bird section of the Vaynol Park Show (Port Dinorwic), writes Mr. W. T. Davies, the secretary, which is to be held under C.B.U. rules on August 14.

All correspondence in connection with the Yeadon, Guiseley and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. Hy Hardaker, must be addressed in future to me as hon. secretary, my address being 23, Leafield Place, New Scarboro', Yeadon.

I consider CAGE BIRDS a splendid paper, writes Mr. W. Sherrington (Preston). It has been the means of conveying a volumo of knowledge to me on Canary-keeping, and I look forward to receiving it each week.

I have to thank you on behalf of the Association, writes Mr. Jas. Pollock, hon. secretary of the Larkhall C.B.A., for the publication of our club reports; and I beg to say that these have been the means of raising our membership.

Kindly thank those who wrote making offers for the two birds which I advertised in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. C. Sargent (Launceston). They were sold before I got my copy of the paper on the Saturday morning, which speaks well for CAGE BIRDS as an advertising medium.

The North Manchester C.B.S. have, writes Mr. John Davey, the hon. secretary, engaged the services of the following judges for their shows: First Feather Show, June 19th, Mr. W. A. Cowgill; Novices Show, November 13th, Mr. A. Wellings; January Show, January 29th, 1910, Mr. C. Houlton.

Kindly thank all who replied to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS last week, writes Mr. Jas. Mathieson (Motherwell), as I am unable to thank all individually, they being so many. The postman remarked that I would need a man specially for the delivery of my post. I wish "C.B." every success.

At a meeting of the Deans and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. J. Kay, the hon. secretary, the first annual show was fixed to be held on November 13th, and the following well-known judges were elected: for the British bird section, Mr. J. Strachan (Bathgate), other sections, Mr. Geo. Brown (Leith).

We have elected Mr. J. Hands, of Ryton-on-Tyne, to judge our Members' F.F. Show on July 3rd, and Mr. R. S. Bewick, of Newfield, for our Annual Members' Show on December 4th, writes Mr. Matt. Mason, secretary of the Dipton and Dis. C.B.S. We have received a good few more members, and shall be pleased to see other fanciers throwing in their lot with us.

Mr. B. Hollins (9, George Street, Hull), forwards us his latest illustrated price-list, replete with fanciers' requisites, and containing a very lengthy list of the birds stocked by him. Our readers should send a posteard for one, and note the favourable prices and terms on which Mr. Hollins does business.

It may interest you to know, writes Mr. W. Rudd, the well-known bird specialist, of Norwich, that on April 6th I sent 108 consignments of Canaries away in one day, and on April 13th, I sent away 116 consignments (not cages, etc., which were extra), and the latter is, I think, my record lot for one day.

I have taken in CAGE BIRDS ever since I started in the Fancy four years ago, writes Mr. Wm. Woollett, assistant secretary of the Choppington and Dis. C.B.A., and I have found that by following the advice given in it ono is bound to meet with success sooner or later. I hopo that the journal may continue to prosper.

The replies to my advertisements in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. W. Spooner (Eltham), have exceeded my expectations, for I had quite sold out my Canaries before the last of the "ads." appeared. I could have sold dozens more if I had had them. I even had to return money orders because I had no birds to supply. This shows what an excellent circulation your paper, CAGE BIRDS, must have. I wish it further good luck and every success.

The 1908 show balance-sheet of the Sligo O.A. discloses a balance on the right side of 9s. 9d., which, considering the heavy expenses in connection with the hiring of a suitable hall, must be regarded as very satisfactory, and reflects every credit on Mr. C. J. Mulligan, the hon. secretary, and the other officials.

Kindly note, writes Mr. J. Gibbons, hon. secretary of the Wolverhampton C.B.S., that we have engaged Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield), to judge the Canary section of our show on October 28th and 29th, and Mr. R. J. Howe (Wellingboro'), the Mules and the British and foreign birds. The show will be held under C.B.U. rules.

OBITUARY

We regret to have to record the sad loss sustained by our Mr. G. E. Weston. whose only child died suddenly on Wednesday last, April 21st, at a very tender age.

I write to let you know of our loss, writes Mr. A. T. Power, jun. (Tottenham). Mr. W. Power passed away just recently; and I take this opportunity of thanking all friends for their kind sympathy.

I am sorry to have to inform you, writes Mr. Robt. H. Turner, secretary of the Morley and District C.B.S., of the death on April 17th, after a short illness of Mrs. Kinder, the beloved wife of Mr. John Kinder, one of the founders of our society. I am sure that all fanciers will join with us in our sympathy with him and his family.

I am sorry to have to report that a very regrettable misfortune has befallen one of our officials, Mr. J. Park, well known as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Canary, writes Mr. E. Shelly, hon. secretary, Dalton and Dis. C.B.A. I refer to the loss of a son aged 21 years, who was buried on Easter Monday. A large muster of Mr. Park's old clubmates turned up to do homage and show their respect for him in his time of trouble. A beautiful wreath given by tho members of the club showed the esteem in which Mr. J. Park is held. During the time we were waiting for the cortege to leave the house at Stainton, another trouble occurred, viz., the death of his wife's father. Some consolation, however, may be found in the fact that on Easter Monday morning he was presented with "an Easter egg" in the form of another fine son, who we hope will grow up into a bird fancier of as much repute as his respected father.

We hear from all parts of the country that young birds are doing exceedingly well on our "Egg and Biscuit Food," write Messrs. Fox Bros., and the users consider it far preferable and more palatable than the old-fashioned, home-made egg-food. This is extremely gratifying to us. Fanciers appreciate our candour in calling it egg and biscuit and giving the proportions.

We learn that Messrs. Witherby and Co. (High Holborn, W.C.), have in preparation an important and authoritative work on the "Birds of Kent," by Dr. Norman F. Ticehurst, who has for many years been well-known among ornithologists as a close observer of the avifauna of the county. The work is to be published by subscription, and only a limited edition will be issued.

I am pleased to tell you, writes Mr. W. J. Edwards, secretary of the Six Bells (Abertillery) and Dis. F.S., that on the day of our last show (April 13), no fewer than five cage-bird fanciers joined us. Previously none of our members, excepting myself, were interested in the cage-bird Fancy. One of tho new members is Mr. A. W. Hill, of Abertillery, who made a name for himself last show season in the exhibition of Norwich Canaries which he bred himself, and who, if he has any luck at all, will, next season, open the eyes of Norwich breeders. Our open show will be held on December 8th.

We are holding a smoking concert at the Forresters' Hall on April 28th, at 8.15 p.m., writes Mr. A. E. Allen, hon. secretary, Ramsgate and Dis. F. and F.S., Councillor C. Price in the chair. It being the ladies' night a specially good programme has been arranged. Our annual show will be held on November 10th and 11th, at the Royal Victoria Pavilion, one of the finest halls in the provinces. Having gone to the great expense in engaging this, we appeal to all fanciers to help us in our enterprise, as we mean to make this show a topper. We have engaged judges for each section, so as to give equal fairness to all.

A Very Curious Story.

A curious sight can now be witnessed near the Catherine Wheel Inn, at Sutton (according to "The Standard") where in a bush is a nest which is shared by a Thrush and a Blackbird. The former has four eggs and the latter three. During the time the Thrush is on the nest the Blackbird perches on a branch near, and as soon as the Thrush leaves the nest the Blackbird takes her place.

The Thrush's Caprice.

The Thrush's caprice in her choice of a nesting place is well known. She may build in a lonely bush or in a thick-set hedge, in a holly tree or in a fir; and sometimes on the rafters of an out-house. Once, says a writes in the "Newcastle Journal," I took the late Mr. Thomas Thompson, of Winlaton, to see a Thrush's nest on the ground. Now Mr. T. Bowden writes to me from the Post Office, South Charlton, saying that a Thrush had her nest built on a post 4 feet high, in his lambing shed. This nest being blown down, she commenced to build afresh on the same post.

F. CARL,

154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

The balance-sheet of the Poplar and Dis. C.B.S. for the year ending March 25th, is a very satisfactory statement of the accounts of a society which has only been in existence about twelve months. The cash at the bank after paying all liabilities is £4 8s. 9d., and the assets, in the form of prize-cards and staging, are valued at £3 12s. 3d.; the Young Stock, Finch, and Annual Shows all resulted in balances on the right side. The management of the society, therefore, is in capable hands, and Mr. H. W. Cook, the hon. secretary, and the other officials are to be congratulated on the excellent results of the first year's working.

Habits of Ringed Plovers.

The male Ringed Plover takes his turn at sitting upon the eggs, while the female is having exercise and food. When the young ones are hatched they leave the nest almost immediately. Meanwhile the mother bird hatches out the remaining eggs.

Fire!

Sparrows' nests under eaves of the roof, through which passed an iron flue-pipe, were the cause of a fire which broke out in St. George's Road, Forest Gate, on April 13th. The firemen were engaged for two hours on the outbreak, says the "Times," which entirely destroyed the upper part of the house and spread to the next house.

Pied Flycatcher in London.

Following up my communication of last week respecting the migrants I had been enabled to identify during my Easter rambles, writes "Nemo," I may say that I have had another opportunity of a splendid view of Kingfishers. I have also had an excellent view of the Pied Flycatcher and the Reed Bunting.

My First Swallows.

I saw my first Swallows on April 18th, about five miles from the outskirts of Newcastle, writes Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside). A pair of them were hawking for food around a farmstead, but I rather think they would find more work than insect-life, as although the sun was up in all its glory, a very cold wind was blowing at the same time. As yet I have not seen any of our summer migrants here. But I expect I shall do so this week, this being about the date for the Wheatear, etc. The outside bird-life with the change of weather is progressing rapidly.

The Canary and the Wren.

A correspondent writes to "The Globe":—Some years ago a friend of my family was making the voyage to Australia in the "Underley" sailing-ship, which was wrecked off Luccombe Chine, Isle of Wight. Poor Charlie Groves was the only person drowned, losing his life in an attempt to save a pet Canary. He was emerging from the companion way with his Canary and cage, when a huge sea swept over the vessel, washing him overboard. A very pathetic funeral, the cost of which was borne by public subscription, followed. On visiting Bonchurch some time after, the grave was pointed out to me by the caretaker, who said that ever since tho funeral a Wren had built her nest regularly over the grave. and added, "we never allow it to be disturbed because it is such an interesting sight for those who remember the poor man who lost his life for a Canary."

HAMILTON (Cadzow Oak) O.S.

Mr. A. Malcolmson (Glasgow) gave his promised "Cage-making" demonstration at a meeting held April 3rd, in the Lesser Town Hall, Mr. D. Johnston (Vice-President) in the chair. The members who failed to attend missed a treat. Mr. Malcolmson, in opening, stated that he purposed making an all-wire breeding cage, such as was generally in use in Scotland. His cage, however, was made on the "improved principle"—all the wire work is made detachable from the wooden bottom, being secured to the latter by catches. The length of the cage is 22in., breadth 10in., height 15in., the wirework being 12in. high. The great advantage of the bottom being removable is the ease with which it can be cleaned. By having a spare clean one always on hand, said the lecturer, the dirty one can be removed and the other attached without so much as disturbing the sitting hen. The demonstrator also claimed that the cage being made of wire and having a detachable bottom, red mites could not possibly obtain such a footing as in a wooden box cage. Mr. Malcolmson gave a masterly demonstration, making a cage from beginning to end before the audience. A large number of questions were asked and answered, and the time went all too quickly. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Malcolmson. Mr. W. Hamilton's lecture on "Birds I have Kept" is held over until the show business is disposed of, as it is getting well on in the season.—A. CANT, Sec.

A Chat About Yorkshires.

By W. MUNDELL.

At a meeting of the London and Provincial O.S., held at "The Raglan," Aldersgate Street, on April 15th, Mr. W. Mundell was present to give a lecture on Yorkshires, he having journeyed from Bradford specially for the purpose. There was a large attendance and those present included Messrs. T. Heath (in the chair), Geo. Crabb, J. W. Ramsden, J. Dobson, H. J. Pearce, H. W. Cook, R. J. Pretty, G. F. Males, W. Hodson, R. L. Crisp, A. W. Curtis, J. E. Graves, F. J. Day, Geo. H. Conzens, H. Dixon (Merton, Surrey), F. S. Matthes, G. J. Warley, G. Pace, C. W. Baker, A. Goodwin, P. Brooks, A. Scott, J. Oldaker, F. Lathleiff, W. Large, S. Turner, W. J. Silverthorn, J. Burton, G. Vincent, H. Knight, J. Robson, W. A. Dickins, and H. E. Tringham, the hon. secretary.

The Chairman having introduced the lecturer, Mr. Mundell said he would preface his remarks by reading to his audience, with their permission, a paper which had been given him by the writer of it, the late John Henry Thaekrey, just before that fancier's death some two years ago. Mr. Thackrey, said the lecturer, was the greatest authority on Yorkshire Canaries who had ever lived. The paper to which Mr. Mundell referred, and which he read in his own inimitable style, was listened to very attentively, and was couched in the following terms :—

The Fancy Forty Years Ago.

"To trace back for the origin of the Yorkshire is certainly a bit of a puzzle. However, we will take our reminiscences from, say, 35 years ago, or going back into the late sixties. There were few bird societies in those days. The fanciers were mostly working men, who met at a public-house on Saturdays and exchanged ideas, passing a few pleasant hours discussing the main points in connection with the hobby. They were not all Yorkshire fanciers; a good many went in for Lancashires, Lizards, and Cinnamons, or, as they were mostly called, 'Drabs,' or 'Dun-coloured birds.' A Yorkshire was generally considered 'a good Common Canary,' and here is where the improvement began. A good Common was a nice, smart, close-feathered bird, well up on leg, and as long as possible. Understand, however, that length was the very first improvement required, and how to obtain length was the vital point. And, of course, breeders at once turned to Lancashire Plainheads, as this got both length and size. But a long, slim bird was the desire of most breeders.

"So a few fanciers who could get hold of a fair Belgian cock bird tried a cross of Belgian blood run into their stock. This proved a good move, as they were enabled to get a certain amount of style and quality, such as a neat, small head—a great improvement on the Lancashire Plainhead's heavy skull. Still, the drawback again was a frill on the chest. Many good birds were bred, it is true, with plenty of length, very straight, and of nice style: but this frill was a great stumbling block. Then Norwich blood was mixed in to shorten the feather, which it did, and also produced birds of excellent colour. The Norwich of those days were very short, hard-feathered birds, not of the present-day type, but more adapted for the Yorkshire breeder's requirements. Many good-coloured, close, hard-feathered Norwich were really too long and slim for their own class, so that these just fitted in well for the Yorkshiremen.

"So the breeders went on for years, picking and crossing to try and get a bird that would be long, straight, and close in feather, and standing on a pair of good legs. A few of the most enterprising fanciers paid many visits into Lancashire—Todmorden, Rochdale and Oldham being their hunting grounds—where they were to be found in quest of long, slim Lancashire Plainheads. And they got them, too, and staged them as Yorkshires, winning all along the line

The Shows of Thirty Years Ago.

"As we remarked at first, shows were not so plentiful over thirty years ago. A few fanciers would band themselves together at their meeting house, and arrange for a show, say, on a Saturday during the winter. This would be held in the showroom of some public house, where the fanciers were in the habit of meeting. The birds would be staged on the tables during Saturday and Sunday. Sunday was a great day for fanciers, who came some distance to meet with each other and talk things over. And rare old times they used to have. A judge was often selected out of the company present, after the birds were staged on the Saturday morning. His awards were final, although there were often differences of opinion; after a fair amount of beer had been consumed, those differences were sometimes very much in evidence. Still, a good-hearted lot of fanciers they were, who only differed to be friends again directly. The classes were not so numerous as now. They embraced such varieties as Belgians, Lancashire Coppies, Lancashire Plainheads, Lizards, 'Drabs,' clear yellow and buff Yorkshires; and as a rule two classes were provided for even-marked, or variety, now nearly extinct, although one of the most charming varieties of Canary. It seems strange that in those days there were so few shows; and no-one, moreover, would think of sending a bird to a show where he could not both take and fetch it himself, or get a friend to do so for him. We remember one show at a public-house not many miles from Bradford which a few fanciers had arranged to hold. There were only about four classes, and these were for clear and even-marked Yorkshires, about fifty birds being staged. The secretary put a ticket on each bird, as it was brought and entered on the Saturday morning. After all the birds had been staged, a judge had to be selected. So an old breeder was chosen; he was a very much respected old chap. He was given a long clay pipe, a quart jug of beer, and sent into the chamber to judge, where he was locked in to do his best and make the awards. After about two hours the secretary went to hear how he was going on, and the judge told him he had done long since—he had looked them all over, and they were put just as they should be. He said No. 1 in each class was the best, No. 2 the next, No. 3, third, and so on; and he thought that as they stood they could not be improved. And his awards were not at all well received.

"It would be a great astonishment for some of the old fanciers to come back and see the birds and shows of the present day. We can remember old breeders telling how that they could not sell the hens they had bred. One old fancier in particular has let many an one fly out of his birdroom window, as hens were not worth the keeping—only those they wanted to breed from. Many a good hen could be bought at about 1s. or 1s. 3d., which was considered a very fair price.

"We referred to the breeders fetching long, slim Lancashires to show as Yorkshires. We remember one bird in particular—a fine, long, clear yellow. He cost a (in those days) fabulous sum, viz., £1. The twenty shillings were actually paid for him. He measured nine inches. His tail feathers (outside ones) measured just 4½ inches. He was shown in a little village outside Bradford, and created a great sensation, winning first and a copper kettle for best bird in show.

"There were long (so-called) Yorkshires in those days, and length was always aimed at. There was no use for the birds unless they were long and small—the longer the better. At last a few towns, such as Middlesbrough, Darlington, Stockton, Bradford, Dewsbury, and others, possessed societies, and fanciers used to have shows and send out schedules. As the Fancy spread the Yorkshire variety began to get more popular, many good Yorkshire fanciers being found at Saltburn, Whitby, Scarborough, Marske, and away about Carlisle. So the Fancy spread until it found its way into the Midland Counties, and right away South, the Yorkshire having now become one of the most popular varieties.

Some Exhibition Foibles.

"A few words about the show cages in use for Yorkshires. We remember the old style of cage was a big wood and wire construction about 18 inches high and a foot square; they were heavy, massive affairs. Later were introduced some square cages just twice the size of the present-day show cage. Different fanciers had different ideas as to what constituted a suitable cage, and very funny ideas some of them were. We have seen a Yorkshire staged in a Lark cage, and remember that at one show the entries were taken up to judging time, and a certain fancier sent his son with his exhibit in a paper bag, the bird being eventually staged in a Linnet cage.

"Washing Yorkshires for exhibition was never dreamt of by lots of the old fanciers now passed away. We have seen birds so shown that one could hardly tell whether they were yellows or buffs. One old fellow, on seeing at a show some birds that had been well washed, and which looked grand, remarked that they were as clean as angels, and thought that they must have been moulted in heaven. He was astonished to hear that they had been washed by a fancier on this earth.

"The Crystal Palace was the first show South to introduce a single class for 'Yorkshire Canary.' For two or three years 'Cassell's Fanciers' Gazette,' through the influence of the late W. A. Blakston, Esq., guaranteed three or four classes, after which a firm footing was soon secured in the Crystal Palace show schedule for this variety.

"A few words in praise of the Even-marks. At least two classes should be added to the Yorkshire sections of shows for Even-marked yellows and Even-marked buffs. It is a most interesting hobby, breeding this variety. They can be bred, and good ones too. Skill and judicious selection and perseverance are certain to be rewarded."

UNDER THE WHITE ROSE.

THE C.M.Y.C.C. held their annual general meeting on Saturday last, the proceedings being very lively throughout, the three questions of ticks, even marks, and novice classes being the principal points of discussion. The novice members, and intending members, will be pleased to hear that it has been decided to give novice classes a trial, and it is hoped that the "backbone of the Fancy" will leave no loophole for their withdrawal another year, but that they will rally round and do their best to support the classes, more especially as it will be to the benefit of the club, the members deciding to refund half the loss to societies who will run the classes. Therefore, any society wishing for the patronage of the C.M.Y.C.C. must now provide four open and two novice classes. Of the open classes paying there is little fear. The entries during the past season came up exceptionally well, averaging throughout about fourteen per class, and no doubt the novice classes will also fill well.

THE ticked and even-marked question took up a long time, and eventually it was decided that both ticks and even-marks should be allowed to compete; much merriment was caused by the proposer of the motion for ticks to be included, saying that he preferred the motion to bar ticks from competing. Oh! What a long way to come to propose something you don't want, and then to vote for it!

THE subject of the method of counting for the competitions was also brought forward, and here a change takes place, the old style of "starring" the birds to count being ousted in favour of the highest birds of each exhibitor, three of which count for points. It is very gratifying to note that, although this club give such a magnificent array of prizes for an entry fee of 1s. 6d., the balance-sheet shows a slight balance in hand; also it was decided that the entry fee still remain the same.

THE Yorkshire County B.B. and M.C. secretary is very busy getting things in readiness for their annual general meeting, which takes place on Saturday, May 8th, at headquarters, Market Tavern, Bradford, at 7 p.m. He is circularising all exhibitors who are not members of the club and inviting them to attend the general meeting. Also note that a committee meeting is to be held on May 1st to prepare the business for the week following.

THE Y.C.C. also will be holding their annual meeting shortly, when much important business will have to be transacted. I supposo the question of "eup" competition will be the main point at issue. Many are already wondering whether another "challenge cup" will be forthcoming.

Nests of birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

Hints on Pairing Up Birds and Rearing Young Ones.

By J. C. BARNES.

Egg Binding.

A word or two on egg-binding may come in useful. Some hens are very obstinate in parting with their eggs, as it were, and become what is termed egg-bound. Should a case of this kind crop up, take the hen out of the cage; handle her very carefully. Drop a few spots of sweet olive oil into her vent, and place her back in the cage. If the case is of a severe character—if she fails to lay within an hour or two—get a cupful of hot water, place a piece of flannel over the same, hold the vent of the bird over the latter, and steam her for a matter of 15 minutes. Be careful not to scald her, of course. This will, in most cases, cause the egg to come away from her. Afterwards give the hen a little sponge cake soaked in sherry wine; this will stimulate her. If you find she is awkward afterwards in depositing her eggs, keep her in a warm room, as warmth will assist her; a little gin or whiskey in the drinking water is very stimulating and helpful (half-teaspoonful to two tablespoonfuls of water).

Removal of Eggs and Sitting.

As a hen lays her eggs, I remove them each morning, and place them in a box that is partitioned into squares, each square being numbered to correspond with my breeding cages. I replace them with a dummy egg. On the evening of the day on which the third egg is laid, I sit the hen, and book her to hatch 14 days afterwards. By following this plan most of the eggs hatch out at the same time, and the youngsters commence life on an equal footing, whereas if you leave the eggs in the nest as they are laid, some hens will commence to sit as soon as the first egg makes its appearance. Then the youngsters hatch out at various periods, and those that come out of the shell last often "go to the wall," through being the weaker and getting overlooked when feeding time comes round.

When a hen has been sitting four of five days, it can be seen whether the eggs are good or otherwise. If good, blood vessels will have made their appearance. This you can tell by holding the egg up to a strong light, when the egg looks dark. At the end of seven or eight days they are quite opaque. If transparent (or "clear eggs," as the Fancy terms them), they have not been fertilised, and are no use whatever.

Food for the Young.

Egg-food must be supplied to the parents when the youngsters are due to appear; also give a little hemp-seed, which is beneficial. The egg-food should be made up as mentioned in the former part of this article. To each pair of birds give as much as they will eat up; but try to give little and often. Hemp seed I give in goodly quantity, and find my birds will feed on this even better than on the egg-food.

Give no green-food until the young ones have attained the age of three days, then I place between the wires of the cage a small quantity of fresh watercress or dandelion twice a day; both are excellent green meats. Be careful not to let either egg-food or green-food become sour; if you do, great trouble will onsue, and death play a far more prominent part than will be at all appreciated.

Weaning Young Birds.

When the young birds reach the age of a month, very little fear need be entertained, as to removing them entirely away from their parents. Place them in either large flights or cages by themselves—flights for preference, as they will get more exercise and grow better. Continue with the egg and bread crumbs, also give crushed hemp seed and a little bread soaked in milk. You can, in the course of a few days, place inside their cages a little Spanish Canary seed for them to learn to crack, crushing it a little at first, if you think well. As regards giving water to drink, some fanciers do not supply it until the young birds are seven or eight weeks old, in most cases relying on the milk sop to supply the necessary moisture. I always give water from the first, but use discretion in administering it, and to each pint of water (or thereabouts) I add about two tablespoonfuls of Parrish's Chemical Food, which I find answers well for the purpose of keeping the birds from drinking too much; and at the same time it gives strength to them. If you give water alone, some young birds are very apt to drink to excess, which is far from good for them, bringing on bowel trouble, that in many instances ends their career.

By the time the youngsters have attained the age of six weeks, they will be able to crack whole seed fairly well, and once you get them on to this they will cause you very little trouble. Wean them from the soft food on to the hard by degrees; don't try to rush them, for fear of causing internal trouble. Let your motto be "slow and sure."

General Hints.

At about the pairing-up time, inga (often termed niger) seed should be given to the birds, especially the hens, as it assists to prevent egg-binding, and is of a stimulating nature. Give a little two or three times a week.

Should you find that at any time a cock bird is molesting the hen during incubation, out of the cage with him; the hen alone will bring up the youngsters all right in the majority of cases. Very few fail to do so. Place him back with her in a matter of 12 or 14 days, when, in most cases, he will be helpful; if he fails to come up to expectations, and still carries on his roguish games, keep him from her for a matter of three weeks altogether.

If you find that a bird is eating the eggs, give him or her a bad (rotten) one to have a go at. This very rarely fails to effect a cure.

Sawdust is very useful for the floor of the cage, as it keeps the birds' feet clean by absorbing the moisture of the excreta; again, should by mischance a youngster fall out of the nest, it is often saved from death by the soft, warm material that it falls upon.

At the end of the three weeks after the hatch, you can be on the look-out for a fresh lot of eggs being laid, if, indeed, not already laid, for hens vary very much. Leave both cock and hen together (if amicable) right through the season, as two feeders are better than one. Give a bath on nice, bright days, as this is a fine conditioner, and greatly appreciated by the birds. Do not part with a hen simply because she fails to rear her first brood; her second effort may be just the reverse. Should you find the birds at all backward in feeding their young, vary the food as much as possible.

When the hen has brought up her first batch of youngsters, see that her feet are not clogged (with dirt, etc.).

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

Author of "The World's Birds."

A Waggish Woodpecker.

A specimen of the Royal Woodpecker of Cuba (Melanerpes superciliaris), the first, so far as I know, to reach us alive, has recently been imported, and in connection with it I heard a curious little story illustrating a bird's love of a practical joke. When in the possession of the dealer who first had it—it is at the Zoo now—its cage was adjacent to one containing Budgerigars, and the Woodpecker's standing joke was to get one of these little Parakeets by the tail and hold on till the shrieks of the victim brought assistance. But the way in which this was done was most curious, for the Budgerigars' abode, being just under the Woodpecker's, he used to fish for any tail protruding from the bars with his long extensible tongue, until he could lick it into the reach of his bill!

This Woodpecker, by the way, would be better called the Zebra Woodpecker, for the most characteristic point about its appearance is the regular and elegant black and white barring of the upper plumage. It is in size rather superior to our Greater-spotted species.

Great Crested Grebe in Hyde Park

I have always maintained that London is an excellent place for the study of bird life, and one meets many more different species in our parks than is usually supposed; but I must admit that I was greatly astonished to see on Saturday, April 10th, a Great Crested Grebe in full plumage, swimming about in one of the fountain-basins at the end of the Serpentine.

It seemed quite indifferent to the presence of people, but the keepers told me that when it first appeared—it had been there several days, having merely moved from one basin to another—it was very nervous and constantly diving. Evidently the bird, unused to such narrow waters, felt itself trapped, as it were, and was uneasy; it so happened that I saw it pluck up heart and get away. About a quarter to four it made a start from about the centre of the basin, in the curious running flight characteristic of these birds when getting under way, first cleared the coping, and passed on over the adjacent balustrade to the Serpentine, where no doubt it settled, as it did not rise higher.

Keeping Bulbuls.

As there have been a good many of these birds in the market of late at low prices, a few notes on their management may be of use here. Out in the East one is fairly steeped in Bulbuls, as it were; they are the commonest and most conspicuous garden birds in the country; so that their habits are easily observed. Their favourite food is ripe fruit, but in default of that they can put up with green fruit or even buds; they also feed largely on insects, on which the young are brought up. Insects are often caught by them on the wing just as they are by our Flycatchers. The nest is an ordinary open one, placed in a bush.

In captivity, Bulbuls are about the easiest of Softbills to maintain; any decent soft food mixture will keep them, but plenty of fruit must be given as well, or, if fruit runs short, minced greenstuff. They are very greedy, but, being active birds, do not seem to fatten themselves to death like so many birds of this character.

Species Available.

The kind that has been most plentiful of late is about the prettiest of all—the Red-eared Bulbul (Otocompsa emeria). This is about the size of a Chaffinch, with the usual short legs and rather long tail of the Bulbul group, and a long peaked, black crest; this gives it a very smart appearance, which is enhanced by the scarlet patches on each cheek and under the tail, and the snow-white throat; the general hue of the plumage is brown, and the sexes are alike.

Another common species is the Bengal Bulbul (Molpastes bengalensis), which has a shorter and more bushy crest, but is a considerably larger bird, as big as a Lark. Its general colour is very dark—black, indeed, on the head—but it has a scarlet patch under the root of the tail and a white one above it, and its smart appearance and movements make it a most noticeable bird either at large or in the aviary. This is the commonest species about Calcutta, and is the kind which natives keep as a fighting bird.

Some Seasonable Greenfoods.

Now that spring is here it is as well to draw attention to some articles of raw vegetable diet, which seem to be a good deal neglected by bird-keepers. One is flowering grass—the ordinary short wayside grass which springs up absolutely anywhere where over an inch or two of soil is left undisturbed for a few weeks. This is, on the whole, the best of green-foods, and one which appeals to a wider variety of birdy palates than any other. It also possesses the great advantage of not going sour, but simply drying up when stale, in which state it comes in handy as nesting material. It is especially favoured by foreign Finches, and if people would only supply it daily, roots and all, to Waxbills, I am sure we should hear less of the delicacy of these little things.

Another good food is the buds of hawthorn, which any Londoner may see being greedily devoured by Wood Pigeons. There is nothing unpleasant about the taste of these sprouts; indeed, when I was a boy, in Kent we youngsters used to eat them, calling them "Cuckoo's bread and cheese." The good people of Kent, by the way, had some weird ideas about the Cuckoo's bill of fare, for I distinctly remember being told, when I was very juvenile, that I must not go out in the muddy weather of spring "till the Cuckoo had come and eaten up all the dirt!"

An Oriental Pet.

Speaking of Cuckoos reminds me that the other day I saw for sale a healthy—and highly spiteful—specimen of my old friend the Koel, or Black Cuckoo, of India (Eudynamys honorata). This species enjoys the distinction of being the only Cuckoo which is widely kept as a pet bird; a caged Koel is as common a sight in Calcutta as a caged Blackbird in London. Being a big, strong bird, as large as a Pigeon, and a fruit-eater to boot, the Koel is easily kept, and his beautiful rich notes and glossy Raven plumage, set off by ruby eyes and a yellow-green bill, both appeal to the native fancier. Indeed, the native lover habitually uses the bird as a symbol of comparison when he wants to pay a compliment to his sweetheart, comparing the lady's jet-black—and well-oiled—tresses to the bird's plumage, and likening her voice to its note. Personally, I am very fond of the bird's call, but he has a way of keeping it up at night which does not endear him to Europeans.

*A Dream that Came True.

Amongst my collection of birds last year I had a fine singing Skylark. This bird was my favourite, and I took much pains to keep him in health. One night I had a dream. It was this: whilst showing my prize to a friend the bird flew away, singing the popular song at that time, "Has anyone seen the German Bands? Yah, yah, yah." The next day I was cleaning out Jack's cage, when the door opened, and up in the air flew the bird, singing lustily. I stood watching him in dismay, and just when he had escaped, the popular air, "Yah, yah, yah," floated from an old barrel organ in the street, as if mocking and laughing at my bad luck.—Sent by David W. Williams (age 15), Thornbank, Caerphilly, Cardiff.

*A Wise Wagtail.

A pair of Wagtails built their nest in a railway carriage which stood on a siding at Cosham station. In the summer the carriage was used in a local train between Cosham and Fratton. For the first few days both Wagtails accompanied the train backwards and forwards; but afterwards the male Wagtail used only to come down and see the train off. And at 6.30 p.m., when the train returned, the station-master and the Wagtail were always there to welcome the female bird to Cosham again.—Taken from "Country Side," and sent by E. T. Wills (age 14), 102, Artizan Road, Northampton.

The Little Blind Linnet.

I have a Linnet small and brown,
And I to it am kind,
Because it must be sad at heart,
For it is quite, quite blind.

Oh! only think what it must be,
Never to see the flowers,
And never see the sky and trees,
In golden summer hours.

But still, my Linnet sweetly sings
A rippling, happy song,
As though its tiny heart o'erflowed
With joy the whole day long.

And so, whenever I am cross,
And tears fall like the rain,
Oh! when I hear my Linnet sing,
It makes me good again!

Hints on Hybrid Breeding with Bullfinch Hens.

By THOMAS SMITH.

The Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid.

Breeders have in the Goldfinch a bird of gorgeous plumage, and one which in health is full of vigour. His sweet song and lively antics, too, have made him a special favourite in the homes of fanciers and others. The British Goldfinch is hardy, and holds out well in confinement. The Siberian Goldfinch is larger in size and brighter in colour. He is generally chosen to breed with the Siberian Bullfinch hen, which mates readily with it. They may be put together later than some of the others used for Hybrid breeding.

Something may be gained, and certainly nothing will be lost, by putting the Goldfinch cock and the Bullfinch hen into the cage together. The Goldfinch may be observed in the month of April feeding the hen. She seldom nests before the end of May, so that as a pair they are much on the same footing as other Hybrid couples. The Goldfinch requires a daily supply of hemp, and this the Bullfinch becomes very fond of; but this and the sunflower, an indispensable food for the Bullie, are apt to put on too much flesh. A hen which is very fat is not to be depended upon for breeding to the same extent as a hen in normal condition.

The Goldfinch shows when he is ready for breeding by his bill losing the black colour and becoming clear, and also by his song, and by "shaking himself" from side to side on the perch, spreading out his tail the while. He is a most devoted mate, untiring in his devotion to his handsome dark wife.

On her ladyship starting to build her nest, he fusses about, and as a rule tears out the building material as quickly as it is put in. His movements give rise to the brightest hopes, and it is well to know that fertile eggs from a Goldfinch cock and a Bullfinch hen are not uncommon. The Goldfinch cock often destroys the eggs, so that the wisest course is to remove him in the evening and run him back in the morning after the egg has been securely put away. When the full clutch has been laid the eggs should be placed under a reliable feeding hen to be hatched and the young reared.

The young bird, on emerging from the shell, is fairly vigorous, and under the charge of suitable foster parents, develops with amazing speed, and leaves the nest when about fourteen days old. He is not long in fending for himself. For foster parents I recommend a large pair of feeders, such as cast-off Norwich Canaries, or cross-bred Canaries, with plenty of "backbone" and size. They are able to keep up the demand for food for which this Hybrid is noted. The young bird has a good appetite, which has to be considered and ministered to. The Hybrid reaches maturity sooner than some of the other varieties, but is rather soft, and has to be taken special care of. The moment any disposition to softness is evident the usual remedial measures should be adopted.

In the event of two or three being hatched in one cage, a difference in the size of the young is very apparent. The uninitiated fancier arrives at the conclusion that the largest is the male, whereas it is invariably the female that carries the size.

The colour-feeding (the colour-food should be of the best quality) should be commenced when the young are six weeks old, and be continued till the colour is thoroughly grounded. A right good specimen is a lovely exhibit. The parental characteristics are pronounced in the feathers, and properly colour-fed, the Siberian Goldfinch-Siberian Bullfinch Hybrid has no equal. Visitors to shows in England will remember the gem that was exhibited at the principal exhibitions somewhere between 1904 and 1907. He was so very outstanding in excellence that he defeated other Hybrids, such as Canary-Bullfinch, Redpoll-Bullfinch, and Greenfinch-Bullfinch. Those which, previous to his appearance had been regarded as good exhibits, were nowhere as compared with the Edinburgh-bred champion. He changed hands repeatedly, and was very greatly admired. He possessed great size and a brilliancy of colour.

At home this Hybrid should be kept in a roomy box cage. In an open wire cage he jumps on to the wires and damages his plumage. He feeds well on ordinary Canary seed, with a sprinkling of rape seed, and a little hemp. He is very fond of apple, which can safely be given twice a week.

The diet during the rearing is the usual egg and biscuit mixture; say, three times daily, taking care to remove once a day all old food. Green food, dandelion heads, and chickweed, in their season, should also be given. The Hybrid is very fond of the bath, and should have it at least once a week. A bright, warm morning should be chosen for this, and the bird should not be permitted to remain too long in the water, for fear he should catch a chill and break. Remember, prevention is better than cure. Every fancier who is fortunate in getting a champion ought to keep him in the pink of condition.

The Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrid.

Of all the Hybrid family, the Redpoll-Bullfinch is most sought after, no doubt by reason of its rarity. It is the rarest, in fact, of all the tribe. The Redpoll, as my readers know, is an attractive little chap, and most devoted and affectionate to his wife, whether she is a Redpoll, a Canary, a Linnet, a Goldfinch, or a Bullfinch.

The first thing to do when trying for the Redpoll-Bullfinch cross is to select a suitable hen. In my opinion, the British Bullfinch hen is the best adapted for the purpose, and yields the best results. The breeder, having decided to try this cross, and having secured a smart, tidy British Bullfinch hen, should cage the hen with the Redpoll for six months or so before the breeding season. Always afford them plenty of room to jump and fly about in, which keeps them in prime condition. In April, when the buds appear on the trees in the garden and on the common hawthorn, twigs should be placed in the wires in the cage. The birds are very fond of the buds, and will speedily strip the twigs of every vestage of green. Dandelion roots and the tender leaves of the plant may be given until the heads are in order; and while they last it is safe to confine the green food to the seeding heads. These past, chickweed follows. This has the advantage in certain parts of the country of being very plentiful. It is no uncommon thing to pass men carrying large bundles of it under their arms.

The Redpoll may be observed in May to feed the Bullfinch hen. His affection knows no bounds. He frisks about and jumps from end to end and side to side of the cage, and when the hen commences to build, to the owner's great joy, they give every evidence of being in real earnest. So much so, that the owner is positively certain that the eggs will be fertile. The Bullfinch, a day or two before she lays, may become sickly-looking, but there is no cause for alarm, it being the usual thing in the breeding operations.

If the hen deposits the eggs in the nest their safety is assured, but in case they should be dropped from the perch the bottom of the cage should be completely and deeply littered with moss or fine grass. The eggs should be removed as laid, and stored in bran until the full complement is laid, and then put under the foster mother to be hatched. The Bullfinch hen often inclines to sit, and she should be encouraged in this by putting china eggs into the nest. Should she fail to keep to the nest, the probability is she will have only an interval of a week between the clutches of eggs, which is too severe a strain upon the hen, and exhausts her for subsequent years. If the eggs are fertile, they ought not to be handled, as the handling may cause them to become addled, which will dash all one's hopes to the ground.

The young of this cross are small, and the most suitable foster parents for rearing purposes are Border Fancy Canaries, which are small and active, and naturally take to small young birds more readily than the large common feeder would. I have already said these Hybrids are rare; the breeder who secures a nice male may consider himself very lucky, as it may bring him a nice sum, or should he elect to keep it and exhibit it under a judge who has bred Hybrids and really knows from practical experience the relative worth of the various examples, he stands a good chance of doing a deal of winning. In booking for the shows, care should be taken to state correct price, as there are fanciers ready to pick up a rare exhibit even at a substantial catalogue price.

This Hybrid is of a soft nature, and requires to be well cared for. He has an inclination to sit on the perch and take it easy instead of romping about as the other Hybrids do. The male Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrid naturally has plenty of colour, but to keep pace with kindred competitors, he should be colour-fed with one-fourth hot pepper mixed with tasteless pepper and egg and biscuit mixture. He may be apathetic at first, but get him on to it, even though for a few days it should be at the cost of withdrawing the seed. Having acquired the taste, he will freely partake of the colour-food. It will vastly improve the depth of colour and the general lustre of the feather, which are matters of considerable importance in the exhibition arena.

Hitherto, it has been very rare for anyone to secure more than one Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrid, but I see no reason why a larger family should not be hatched and reared. Certainly that should be aimed at. The Canary-Bullfinch was until very lately equally as rare as the Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrid. The former became numerous as the result of perseverance, and why should the latter not come forward in equal strength?

The ordinary egg and biscuit mixture and green food used in the rearing of Canaries may be given with safety in the rearing of this valuable member of the feathered tribe.

SOUTH SHIELDS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held April 7th in Gregg's Cafe, Laygate, Mr. W. Thompson in the chair. We decided on the judges for our annual open show, and after some near voting, Mr. C. A. House was elected. The secretary was instructed to write Mr. T. Dixon (Bedlington) to be the other one. Our C.B. Union representative gave us the result of the District No. 1 meeting re the fixing of show dates, etc. The following gentlemen were elected as members of our society:—Messrs. F. Baker, M. Coltman (Hepburn), N. Blackburn (South Shields). Some more names are down for next meeting. The following alterations were made in the list of officers:—Messrs. W. L. Smith (vice-chairman), W. Duke and J. T. Carrick (auditors), and W. Howden (assistant secretary). Our first feather show was fixed for July, the date to be decided on at next meeting, May 5th. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed a very pleasant and interesting meeting.—JAMES BARRASS, Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Monthly meeting held April 6th at 2, Gothenburgh. The chair was taken by the president, Mr. Jas. Stenhouse. The business of the meeting was the discussion which arose between the cage-bird fanciers and the poultry fanciers. It was agreed that each variety have a society for itself. The formation of a club, to be run as a feeder for the open show, was left over till a more convenient time. Anent the formation of rules, a small committee was appointed to draw up same and submit them at the next monthly meeting. It was then agreed, seeing that we had got clear of the poultry section, to give every encouragement to the cage bird fanciers, as we have already got a fund of £10. I think we will be able to meet everything in a true fancier-like spirit. We have engaged the best specialist judges for all varieties. This brought a very interesting meeting to a close. Mr. Stenhouse was thanked for the able manner in which he presided.—J. FORD, Sec.

WILD BIRD LIFE.

The Capturing of Wheatears.

Of all the birds visiting these shores during the spring months, the Wheatear is doubtless the easiest to identify. He is, roughly speaking, about the same size as a Starling, with a ruddy tinted breast, grey blue mantle, black wings, and tail, with a large patch of pure white upon the rump. He is a bird of the open, frequenting the downs, fields, and commons; in manner he is alert and suspicious. Flying low, he alights upon a clod of earth, or heap of stones, turning to face the intruder. When travelling away, the white patch at the root of the tail shows up conspicuously. He has a peculiar habit of going in and out of any hole or crevice he may find in the grounds he loves to visit; and it is this peculiarity that was taken advantage of by some in years gone by to entrap him. In the later summer months, Wheatears arrive in hundreds along the south coast, and may be met with upon the seashore, across the marshes and all over the downs. The Wheatear harvest commences in July, extending well into September, many Southdown shepherds making nearly as much money out of the captured birds during this short period as they do by their ordinary hard work during the remainder of the year. It appears that the shepherds are more successful upon showery days, or when clouds continually crossed the sun, than on bright or dull days. The Wheatear dislikes the rain, and upon the first signs of a shower will dart under cover. Almost incredible stories were told of the numbers of birds captured in a single day by these methods. It is very doubtful if the birds are now even in good years anything like so plentiful as formerly, and it may have been the decrease in their numbers which caused the shepherds to discontinue catching them, although an inhabitant of the downs once told me that the practice was put a stop to by the farmers, who considered that the shepherds neglected their flocks during the time the birds were along the coast.

Bad for the Gulls.

It is calculated that not more than twenty young Gulls were reared from nearly three hundred pairs breeding at Walney Island, the bulk of the eggs being taken as soon as they were laid. The Black-headed Gull is a useful bird, especially on arable land, and should receive some protection.

Stone Curlew in the South.

Occasionally we hear of a pair or two of Stone Curlews nesting in the southern counties upon some of the uplands far removed from towns and villages. Last season several nested upon the Wiltshire downs, but there was a time when these grand birds bred pretty freely all along the south downs. The shepherds knew them well, for their uneasy flights and weird, mournful cries were always noticed before a storm or bad weather.

The Long-Tailed Tit.

The little flocks of Long-tailed Tits which have roamed the country during the winter months, have now been broken up. They are early breeders, and their nests may frequently be found long before there is sufficient vegetation to hide them. In point of beauty this wonderful home of these tiny creatures stands first among the beautiful structures to be found in our woods and hedgerows, and although one may find numbers during a lifetime, mostly spent in the open, each fresh find is as much an object to admire and marvel at as the first one, found many years ago in the half-holiday rambles of our school days.

CLUB REPORTS.

CRADLEY HEATH AND DIS. F.A

The first of a series of lectures dealing with the different sections of our hobbies was delivered on April 1st at the Anchor Hotel. The paper was on "Mule and Hybrid Breeding," by Mr. J. Tonks, of Wednesbury. It was listened to with much interest by the large number of fanciers present, under the chairmanship of Mr. G. R. Yates. A discussion afterwards followed, and a number of questions put to the lecturer were suitably answered. A hearty vote of thanks, proposed and seconded by Messrs. Roach and Broadbent, concluded a very enjoyable evening.

SPEN VALLEY C.B.S.

Annual prize distribution and supper, held at the Commercial Hotel on April 5th, when about twenty-six members and friends sat down, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. Mr. G. M. Greg presented the prizes, which were won by the following:—H. Jessop, B. Wood (84 each), gold medals: S. Grayshon (83), silver medal; Liley and Rothery (82), silver medal. For most points throughout show, S. Grayshon, silver enamelled medal; H. Jessop, gold centre medal; Liley and Rothery, silver medal; British Hardbills, S. Grayshon, medal; Softbills, Greg and Pearson, gold centre medal.—J. LEWIS, Hon. Sec.

ARDWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held April 6th at headquarters, where Mr. Downing (Manchester) gave a very interesting lecture on "The Breeding and Management of the Yorkshire Canary." For the benefit of the novices and to give them a more practical idea of what the Yorkshire Canary should be and of the way in which to match them for breeding, he brought with him four birds, one like the first one he started with himself, and one that won at the Palace show this year. Everyone seemed interested in his lecture. A few questions were asked, and he answered them in a straightforward manner. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Downing, which brought the meeting to a close.—J. SPENCER, Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

The following is the result of ballot regarding election of committee for the above:—Messrs. A. Hirst (Accrington), vice-chairman, A. Haigh (Buttershaw), D. Sunderland (Bradford), J. Wilcock (Eccleshill), A. H. Waters (Wombwell, nr. Barnsley), R. Halliday (Shipley), H. W. Battye (Huddersfield), Wm. Foxall (Ashton-under-Lyne), J. Mottram (Halifax), H. S. Naylor (Bradford), S. H. Jeffreys (Sowerby Bridge), J. F. Thackray (Halifax), A. Pickles (Hebden Bridge), T. Boyle (York), H. J. Chittenden (Bradford), W. A. Cowgill (Bradford), J. Moorhouse (Meltham), A. Grey (Morpeth), Edgar Marlor (Denton, nr. Manchester), and Pickering (York); Messrs. A. Spencer (Doncaster) and F. Coventry (Preston), tied for last place. Meeting of the committee will be held on April 24th at the Market Tavern, Godwin-street, Bradford, at 6.30 p.m.—O. MITCHELL, Hon. Sec.

ARBROATH SCOTCH FANCY C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held on April 7th, in Crockatt's Rooms, Catherine-street. There was a large attendance; eight new members were admitted. The undernoted office-bearers were elected for the ensuing season, viz.:—President, Mr. D. C. Lyall; vice-president, Mr. A. G. Murray; treasurer, Mr. James Black; auditors, Messrs. J. D. Watson and D. C. Craig; committee, Messrs. C. S. Crockatt, A. Mollison, J. Milne, F. Middlenton, G. Myles, Colville, and C. Barry; secretary, J. S. Napier, 52, St. Vigeans-road. It was also arranged to hold annual show on 30th October, in the Whyte Hart Hall. There were also added two more Norwich classes and six Border Fancy classes to the schedule for this year. The secretary was also instructed to write to several well-known judges with the view of securing their services to judge the show. A draft copy of rules was also submitted, but was sent back to committee to be revised and again submitted to a general meeting.—J. S. NAPIER, Hon. Sec.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

An Enjoyable Outing.

The members, along with their wives and friends, had a most successful outing on Easter Monday to Grassington, walking back via Burnsall and Barden to Bolton Abbey. The party altogether numbered 40, which is good proof that these outings are quite popular, and are eagerly looked forward to by the juvenile section of the party. On arrival at Grassington, the weather, which had been all that one could desire the week previously, took a turn for the worse, and we were treated to a steady downpour of rain. Here we had the pleasure of meeting many friends from Bradford and district (including Mr. R. Halliday), who were going to the same place by a different route. We took to the riverside, deeming it advisable to make for Burnsall, before we made a halt to replenish ourselves, and this afterwards proved a good move. The rain was not allowed to "damp" our feelings in the least, and the male section enjoyed themselves by kicking a ball about, which, somehow or other, would keep rolling into the river, and one could forsee that unless something providential happened, it would eventually lead to someone having a plunge into the river. The ladies were not kept waiting so long, for their turn, as a great outburst of laughter pointed to the fact that one of the members of the party, in his desperate efforts to reach the ball, had overbalanced himself, and had fallen into the water. However, he managed to reach land in safety, little the worse for his unpleasant experience. After this incident the party made their way to the swing-bridge which crosses the river, and plenty of amusement was caused by the various methods brought into use by which to cross over in safety. We had now to make haste to Burnsall through a very heavy downpour of rain, which place was reached without any further mishap. While the dinner was being prepared, a wringing machine was brought into action, and I cannot say for certain whether the gentleman who had been in the river was eventually put through or not, but I did see a pair of swimming drawers, and afterwards several garments drying in a oven. This kept the party in continuous laughter, and although I am afraid many of the ladies, who had not come prepared for wet weather, were feeling its effects, still I cannot but give them every possible credit, for they never allowed it to "damp" their spirits in the least. After dinner, the rain showing no signs of abating, the party decided to make their way back to Bolton Abbey, for the conditions hereabouts were very bad, and this walk, which, under ordinary circumstances, is a perfect treat, was reduced to quite a common one. Bonnie Burnsall, which has earned a name for itself second to none for beauty, looked commonplace in the extreme under these conditions. One of our members was here telling how a friend of his had been describing to him for the past three months what a beautiful place it was, but he says I shall be able to describe it in three minutes, and, as if in answer to his remark, and in order to keep its name unsullied, the sun shone forth in all his glory, the rain ceased, the dark clouds departed as if by magic, leaving a panorama of unrivalled beauty to gaze upon. The effect was marvellous, and the transformation was complete. I can safely say that Burnsall never, in my estimation, looked nicer, and many of the members said that it had been worth all the unpleasantness to look back upon the picture that then unfolded itself. The conditions now were better altogether, and we walked on to Barden, making a short stay here in order to allow several of the party (who had been gathering moss for nesting purposes) to catch up with the rest. After this we wended our way to Bolton Abbey, walking on the Barden side of the river, and after making a short stay at the Strid, went to the Abbey dining rooms for tea, which was highly welcomed by all. An hour and a half was spent here, and the male section indulged in a game of football, the effects of which will probably be felt afterwards; in fact, I can feel them rather bad while I am writing these notes. However, seeing that holidays were instituted for pleasure and recreation we derived both, therefore we must not grumble at after-results. The enjoyment was never allowed to flag throughout the whole day, and if the old adage is true that a good laugh is as good as a bottle of medicine, then the medical profession will have suffered from a financial standpoint.—H HILL, hon. sec.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

Members enrolled for 1909:—H. Crawford (Helensburgh), W. Hart (Paisley), R. Wright (Greenock), James Hogg (Oakley), E. B. Bullions (Glasgow), A. Porteous (Glasgow), W. Allan (Edinburgh), W. Montgomery (Corkeshill), J. Y. Miller (Govan), R. Johnstone (Musselburgh), A. Renfrew (Scotstonhill), and T. Smith (Glasgow). The secretary will be pleased to have further names and addresses of those wishing to join, and to supply tickets to any fanciers not yet reached in the distribution. We would like the current year to have the record membership.—THOMAS SMITH, Secretary, 56, Minard-rd., Crossmyloof, Glasgow.

DARLINGTON C. AND B.B.F.A.

Meeting held April 7th, Mr. J. Wildsmith in the chair. The secretary read a letter from Mr. J. W. Ramsden concerning a scheme which he had found it necessary to devise in giving specials to shows for birds fed on his pepper. The special prize given by our president (Mr. H. Pike Pease, M.P.) for our open show was on view, and it was arranged to decide how same should be competed for at our next meeting, when all members should attend to have a say in the matter. Two new members were proposed and seconded. Afterwards a table show of field-moulted British birds was held. Mr. T. Cleminson judged. 1, Sokell and Binks (Bullfinch); 2, c, Stephenson (Bramblefinch and Greenfinch); 3, vhc, Robinson (Linnet and Bullfinch). Result of Linnet singing contest held April 3rd: 1, H. Wilson; 2, J. Hutchinson.—R. S. BLACK, Sec.

GATESHEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual meeting held March 31st, at Lockhart's Cafe, High Street, Mr. T. Almond in the chair. The rain fell in torrents, which no doubt kept many away. But bad as it was, some of our Sunderland friends turned up, so rain does not seem to damp the spirits of true fanciers. New members still continue to join our ranks, nine being proposed and accepted on this occasion. It gave great satisfaction to see that prominent breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead, Mr. A. Grey, of Morpeth, join us again; also that old veteran, Mr. T. Irons, of Northampton. Mrs. Blair, of Newcastle, was also enrolled; she, I believe, is our first lady member; also Messrs. Kent (Newcastle), Blinkinsop (Low Fell), Taylor (Newcastle), Carr (Blaydon), and Dowson and Thompson (Gateshead). The balance-sheet, after some discussion, was accepted. The secretary read the correspondence from several Yorkshire judges, with the result that Mr. Halliday (Shipley) was elected to judge the Yorkies at our annual show; which seemed to give great satisfaction to all. Two of our Sunderland friends were booked to give a washing exhibition at a future time. We have a busy time in front of us. Mr. Crawhall had on view some of his fine nesting material. It was also proposed that we hold a nest feather show on the first week of July. At our next meeting, to be held on April 28th, Mr. Crawhall will lecture on "The Difficulties of the Breeding Season," when we hope to see many members and friends.—G. BUCK and H. JOHNSON, Secretaries.

ULSTER O.A.

Annual general meeting held in the Avenue Hall, Garfield-street, Belfast, on March 30th, Mr. S. Bamford (president) in the chair. The balance-sheet was presented, and, after some discussion, unanimously passed. Although it showed a decrease on the year's working of about £2 10s., the association is in a very sound financial position. The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, Mr. S. Bamford; secretary and treasurer, Mr. Jas. Stewart, 57, Donegal-avenue, Belfast; trustees, Messrs. Connell and Cummings; auditors, Messrs. Barclay and Thompson; committee, Messrs. Trimble, Gray, Carson, Cloke, Ronaldson, Neill, South, Fleming, Lavery, and Robert Tidford. It was decided that we hold our annual show on first Friday and Saturday in December in the Clarence Place Hall. Mr. Barclay proposed, and Mr. Thompson seconded, that the secretary's commission be reduced to five per cent. from 10 per cent. Mr. Trimble proposed, as an amendment, and Mr. Gray seconded, that provided the show pays expenses, the secretary's commission be the same as before. On a vote the amendment was passed. Mr. Barclay proposed that a new rule be added in case of an emergency to the effect that any member wishing to call a meeting of the association, on obtaining the signature of any five members can do so at any time. This was seconded by Mr. Thompson, and passed. Mr. Cloke proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Trimble for his past services, and said he was sorry Mr. Trimble could not see his way to continue the office of secretary, as he had worked in a way it would be hard to surpass. This was seconded by Mr. Barclay, and conveyed by the chairman. Mr. Trimble suitably replied. Mr. Barclay proposed that a report of the meeting be sent to the Fancy Press. This was seconded by Mr. Carson and passed.—JAMES STEWART, Secretary and Treasurer.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

An Interesting Meeting.

Monthly meeting, held in usual place on April 1st. Mr. Currah presided. There appeared to be about 70 members present. The following gentlemen were added to our increasing membership, viz., Messrs. J. Daere, C. Waters, R. Hutler, R. Blore, C. Alty, T. Jackson, C. Farrar, and M. Wigglesworth. The chairman said he was pleased to see so many present to hear Mr. Hutchinson read a paper on the "Cinnamon Canary," written by Mr. J. Robson. After the reading of the paper, which was by no means a short one, there was no small amount of discussion. Mr. Macdonald said that at one time he kept a pair of Cinnamons. Mr. T. Taylor wished that more would take up this particular variety, which was in the hands of so few, so that it would encourage societies to give better classification. Mr. Young said that he thought that Cinnamon Canaries were very indifferent feeders, and wondered if any other fanciers had found them so. Mr. J. Kirkpatrick said that he had kept Cinnamons for a long time, and that some years he had succeeded in rearing as many as 100 young ones. He never had any trouble with hens not feeding, and on the contrary, thought that they fed as well as hens of any other variety. In 1907 he had one hen that reared 20 young for him. Mr. Hermiston said that through the reports that were given in some of the Fancy papers last year, he was led to believe that it was an advantage to have birds well pencilled, as some of the reports said: "Would have stood higher if there had been more pencilling on thighs"; but having heard the reading of the article that evening, he would be able to get on to the right track again. Mr. Crawhall said he was like a lover who had quarrelled with his sweetheart; he was longing to be back with us again. Having been requested by the chairman to make a few remarks, he would try and oblige. The first bird that he possessed was a cock Green, for which he got a variegated hen. From this pair he got some Cinnamon-marked birds. The next year he paired some of the offspring, with the result that he got three pure Cinnamons. These he intended to inbreed with as long as their constitution would allow. He thought that Cinnamon-marks were easier to establish than Greens. Mr. Mackenzie proposed that to show their appreciation for the paper, a letter be sent thanking Mr. Robson for the kindness he had shown by writing such a paper. Mr. Vanner seconded the proposition, and said that it was a most interesting paper. The members were unanimous in passing a vote of thanks to Mr. Robson, in which was included Mr. Hutchinson's name, for the able way in which he had read the paper.

The next item on the agenda was a "surprise." Mr. Currah said that he thought Mr. Hutchinson had something in the nature of a surprise. He (Mr. Hutchinson) had declined to "let him into" the secret, but felt confident that it would be of a pleasant nature. Mr. Hutchinson then said that it had been the wish of a number of members to present a gentleman who held a very important position in the society with a small present, as a mark of the esteem and appreciation of the services he had rendered the society since its formation; he (the speaker) had great pleasure in presenting Mr. Currah, their worthy and noble chairman, with a silver-mounted umbrella, and a case of silver-mounted briar pipes. In doing so, he wished that Mr. Currah would always have a sufficient supply of his favourite weed to keep the pipes going, and hoped that sunshine would always be with him, so that the umbrella would never be needed. Mr. Hutchinson, continuing, said that a great deal of credit was due to his colleague, Mr. Curry, for the quiet way in which he had gone about the getting together of subscriptions for the testimonial. Mr. Currah, in receiving the presents, said that he had been fairly "winded" by the kindness shown him by the members. He was really greatly obliged, and begged to thank them all, hoping that he and the rest of the members might be long spared to assist the Newcastle Society in its work, having already spent some of the pleasantest hours of his life at their meetings. He also said that had he known what the "surprise" was to be, he was afraid he would not have said so much. Messrs. Mackenzie, Macdonald, and others also spoke, wishing Mr. Currah continued enjoyment of the best of health, and hoping he would be long spared to hold the reins of the Newcastle Society, as he was a good general. It was also hoped that Mr. Currah's son, Jack, might "follow in his father's footsteps." Mr. Crawhall related an incident relative to the good way in which Mr. Currah carried his age. An old friend of Mr. Currah's, who had not seen him for over 20 years, happened, Mr. Crawhall said, to meet Mr. Currah one day. He said, "Isn't your name Currah?" Mr. Currah replied in the affirmative, when the inquisitive gentleman said, "How's your father, my lad; you are like him?" Mr. Currah then put him right, and was told that he carried his age well.

The novices' "half-hour" was the next thing of great interest, when some interesting questions were asked and answered. Mr. J. N. F. Scott asked if fresh-made egg and bread or biscuits were better than eggs made up in the form of a loaf? Mr. Hutchinson said that he had found that the birds took the fresh-made food more readily than of that baked in the oven. Mr. Currah advised Mr. Scott to have a walk out to his house and see the way his birds were fed. In mixing his egg food, he said, he crushed two of Spratt's puppy biscuits to a powder, poured a small quantity of boiling water over them, and let them stay thus overnight, after which he added one egg, and if the "missus" wasn't looking, he "pinched" a bit of butter, which he mixed with the food. His birds all ate the food readily, and at present had several young doing well.—NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNER.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE & DIS. O.S.

Table show of British Birds, held on March 2nd, at the P.S.A. rooms. There was a good number of visitors present, and also a fine entry of birds, which made competition very keen. Mr. R. Baron officiated as judge, and his awards gave general satisfaction. 1, c, Marsland; 2, 3, Graysou; 4, Foden; vhc, Hughes; hc, Kelsall.—H. FODEN, Hon. Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND BIRD CLUB.

The West of Scotland N. and B.F.C.M.B. and F.B.A. held a meeting on April 3rd in Nelson's Hotel, Ingram-street, Glasgow, President C. Hunter in the chair. Judges for annual show were nominated, and it was agreed to settle the definition of a ticked or variegated at next meeting. Mr. J. Young was enrolled as a new member. Mr. Lawrie (Govan) has agreed to give "Some Tit-bits of Canary and Mule Breeding" at next meeting. Mr. J. Young (Rutherglen) then opened a discussion on Crests and Crest-breds, and most of the members took part in it. Mr. Sandison travelled all the way from Greenock to hear it. This being all the business, a vote of thanks to Mr. Young for his excellent paper brought the meeting to a close.—GEO. SMART, Sec.

CARDIFF AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual meeting held at Maskell's Restaurant, Queen-street, on March 18th. Mr. Jones presided, and there was a good attendance. New members were enrolled. The secretary read balance-sheet of members' show. The auditors reported on their investigations, and the general account was duly adopted as read. Election of officers for year resulted as follows:—Chairman, Mr. F. D. Jones (who made a neat little speech on the progress of the society throughout the past year); vice-chairman, Mr. A. Harrington; treasurer, Mr. E. J. Banks; secretary, W. S. Negus, 164, Moorland-road, Cardiff; show manager, Mr. W. Sampson; committee, Messrs. A. Shellam, T. C. Melhuish, H. C. Smith, W. Harrington, E. Thorne, S. E. Tonkin, A. Ball, H. Owen, F. Slocombe, F. Howard, and F. J. Dallimore.—W. S. NEGUS, Secretary.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

A dinner and concert were held at beadqnarters on April 15th, when there was a large company. The arrangements were admirably and satisfactorily carried out under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Chaplow. Amongst those present were Mr. and Mrs. Chaplow, Mr. and Mrs. Ridley, Messrs. J. Bell (chairman), Chisholm, Holmes, McWilliams, F. Bell, G. Davidson, J. Robson, J. Robson, jun., Robson, Buntling, Thomlinson, Dixon, Stamp, Johnston, Davidson, A. Davidsou, Willmott, McDonald, and T. J. Robson. After justice had been done to the fine spread provided, songs were rendered by Messrs. Chisholm, Bunting, Dixson, Davidson, Stamp, and Thomlinson, all of which were well received. Mr. T. J. Robson supplied the company with gramaphone selections. This concluded the programme and brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

LONG EATON ANDDISTC.B.

At a meeting held in the Co-operative Classroom, April 8th, we decided to bold an open show, but this year for one day only—Nov. 27th. For this occasion we have again booked the People's Hall, at a big expense. The hall is very spacious, capable of staging upwards of 1,500 exhibits in a most comfortable manner; it is heated with bot water apparatus, is illuminated with electric light, and is entirely free from draughts. Another advantage is that it practically adjoins the station. We hope this year we may prove successful in our efforts, as we have an important object in view. Should there he any fanciers within the 5-mile radius who are desirous of becoming members, I shall be pleased to bring their names forward at the next meeting, on May 8th, as this is the date fixed for the nomination of young birds. The following special prizes should be an encouragement: Cups for best unfighted Norwich, ditto yellow Crest, ditto Crest buff dark, ditto crest-bred, and ditto Border Fancy. These cups are to be won three times before becoming the property of the exhibitor.—A. E. WIGGINTON, Hon. Sec., 94, Station Road, Long Eaton.

DALZIEL O.A.

An interesting event took place in the Y.M.C.I., Brandon-street, Motherwell, on April 17th, the occasion being the holding of a table show for field-monited Linnets. Mr. W. Jack judged, and gave every satisfaction. 1, Paterson; 2, Hamilton; 3 and 4. Williamson; 5, Roddie; 6, Barclay. The usual monthly business was gone through, Mr. H. Gray (President) presiding. Judges for annual show were nominated. Spratt's samples of foods were handed round, when it was found that some of the members were using them already, while the others were quite willing to give them a trial. Membership fees are due at next meeting. It was decided to bave two classes for British birds at our next meeting—British and Foreign Goldfinch, and Twite, Siskin, and Redpoll. Mr. J. Waugh was accepted as a new member.—JAMES MATHIESON, Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Special meeting held at beadquarters on April 15th. Present: Messrs. Trower (in the chair), Wyse, Silver, Thurling, Best, Freer, Askew, Norman, Cooper, Weston, Newley, Dewhurst, Maxwell, Plumbridge and Carr. This meeting was called to investigate the charges laid against Mr. S. W. Birchley and Mr. P. McQuiston for exhibiting alleged stained birds. Mr. Birchley's case was taken first. A volume of correspondence was read, and after a lengthy discussion the following resolution was passed by 10 votes for and 2 against: "That this committee has heard no evidence that justifies it in giving a decision contrary to that arrived at by the Cage Bird Union respecting Mr. S. W. Birchley and the exhibiting of a stained Linnet at Bristol F.A. Show, but suspends its judgment for four months to enable Mr. Birchley to take further action in the case elsewhere if he so chooses." Mr. P. M'Quiston's case was next taken. Several letters were read from gentlemen concerned. After thoroughly investigating the case, a similar resolution to the above was unanimously carried, viz.: "That this committee bas heard no evidence that justifies it in giving a decision contrary to that arrived at by the Scottish British Bird and Mule Club respecting Mr. P. M'Quiston and the exhibiting of a stained Bullfinch at Bathgate Show, but suspends its judgment for four months to enable Mr. M'Quiston to take further action in the case elsewhere, if he so chooses." A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the meeting at a late hour.—PLUMBRIDGE AND CARR, Hon. Secs.

WALLSEND AND MID-TYNE C.B.A

Usual monthly meeting held at Station Hotel, Wallsend, on March 25th, Mr. Wm. Ronald in the chair. There was a grand turn-out of members, although the night was a wild one. The correspondence was mostly from elected judges confirming their engagement, and from prospective members. The election of officials for the ensuing year, postponed from annual meeting, resulted as follows: President, Alderman Matthew Murray (re-elected); vice-presidents, also re-elected en bloc; chairman, Mr. Wm. Ronald (who is very popular, and the right man in the right place; also re-elected); vice-chairman, Mr. D. E. Kent (an enthusiastic fancier). Next it was agreed to have joint secretaries. The late secretary having resigned office, Messrs. William Richardson and George Greenwell were elected as joint secretaries. The committee consists of some of the best fanciers, and go-ahead gentlemen it has been the society's lot to have, in Messrs. C. B. Wilson, P. Dixon, J. McQuillan, N. Hymers, T. Haikney, H. Whittaker, T. Hopkinson, F. Reeves, T. Appleby, J. Evans, A. Montgomery, G. Waugh, J. Grainger, R. McVay, and J. Johnston, with Messrs. R. Christie and J. Cox as auditors. The date for nest feather show was then discussed, when it was finally decided to bave it on the second Saturday in July. Five new members were admitted—Mrs. Blair (Jesmond), Mr. J. Carr (Blaydon), and Messrs. J. Evans, A. Montgomery, and G. Waugh (Wallsend). I hear there is quite a crowd for the next meeting.—JAS. JOHNSTON, late Sec.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Meeting held at Newcastle on April 14th. Present: Messrs. Swan, Riseborough, Farrar, Robson, Armstrong, Bewick, Almond, Brown, Stanger, Waugh, Mather, and Hutchinson. In consequence of Messrs. Currah, Dobson, and Hands having resigned, Mr. Thomas Robson was elected to the chair, and Messrs. Brown, Bewick, Waugh, and Mather to the committee. The following new members were elected, viz., Messrs. J. M. Macdonald (Wallsend-on-Tyne), James Taylor, E. Richardson, Shildon, and G. Smart (Bishop Auckland). It was decided that shows receiving our patronage provide six classes as before. There was some discussion as to the adoption of "close rings" for young birds, it was agreed not to adopt them, but to leave the matter to the bonesty of the members. As the "Point Special Scheme" of last year was not a success with regard to the exhibiting of young birds, it was decided to abolish it. The members were unanimous that a prize (the form it shall take to be decided at some future meeting) be given at each of the shows receiving our patronage for the best young Crest and best young Crestbred, bred by a member; one member one prize. The Sunderland Society are to be asked if they will add two classes to the Crest section at their annual show, viz., (1) Any variety Crest, and (2) Yellow Crestbred. George Goulden, Esq., has promised to give a medal for best young Crest shown by a novice at our annual show, and the club decided to give a medal for best young Crestbred. In the event of Sunderland Society not providing novice classes, novice members must write "N.C.C. Novice" upon their entry forms. Mr. T. C. Crawhall is giving two medals for competition at Newcastle Show amongst novice members of N.C.C. The club desires to thank these two gentlemen for the interest they are taking in the "Novice" Crest Canary breeders. Secretaries of Northern societies desirous of having our patronage at their shows, please apply to me as early as possible at 72, South View, West Heaton, Newcastle-on-Tyne. —J. G. HUTCHINSON, Hon. Sec.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical application of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 302.
A HOLDER FOR GREENFOOD AND TIT-BITS.

Sent by H. H. Bulcock, "Riversdale" Clitheroe.

Bend a piece of cage wire into the shape of A B C in the sketch. The size of the hole at A should be a little less than an ordinary blacklead pencil. Fix on the side of cage with two ordinary staples, as at B and C; this forms a hinge. Green food, apple, cuttle-fish, or other tit-bits can be put in the ring at A, and the holder be turned round to the front of the cage, so that the birds can reach the dainty from off the perch.—H. H. BULCOCK.

A REVERSIBLE SAND TRAY.

Sent by H. D. Potter, 35, Onley Street, Unthank Road, Norwich.

Enclosed is a sketch of a reversible sand tray which I have nsed with marked success, and am now about to fit to all my cages. Take two pieces of hard wood, 1in. square, make a groove on one edge, 5-16 wide by ¼ deep, and cut them in length to fit from inside front to inside back of cage. Then cut a length of ordinary cage board, and fit it in the grooves, so as to bring the outside edges of the cleets nearly up to middle and end of cage (about one eighth of an inch will be found sufficient for clearance). Then cnt off a lin. strip for the front to facilitate the drawing out of the tray, and it can be fixed in position with one pin at each end. Put a button in the centre to take hold of. If the edges are rounded off (as in sketch) and hollow on edge, they will not harbour red mite. When one side has become wet, it can be cleaned and the tray be turned over.—H. D. POTTER.

OSPRINGE, FAVERSHAM & DIS. F.A

On April 15th an entertaining evening was spent at the "Faversham Arms," when Mr. Lambert gave a most interesting lecture on "The Norwich Canary" to a large number of members and friends. Mr. Lambert, who has successfully bred Canaries for the last 16 years, treated bis subject in a masterful way, and bis lecture must have been of great assistance to the number of young fanciers who bave lately joined the Society. The qualities most desirable in breeding Canaries, said the lecturer, were patience, perseverance, and pluck, and while advising young fanciers not to waste money by buying so-called "pairs" of birds at shows (these birds usually being two typical specimens totally unfitted for reproducing their like), be strongly advised their going to some first-rate fanciers' room and there seeing what breeding stock really should be, and if possible to buy a pair of first-class stock birds, properly mated (an entirely different article to the exhibition pairs before mentioned). After giving some most useful information on feeding and rearing, Mr. Lambert concluded by offering to give a further lecture on "Pairing, Breeding, and Colour Feeding" at some future date. A vote of thanks to Mr. Lambert brought to a close an evening which had been helpful and instructive to both the experienced breeder and the novice.—FRANK SHRUBSOLE, JUN.

SINGING CONTESTS.

SHEFFIELD.

Result of the weekly contest held at the Newmarket Hotel, Sheaf Street: — 1, Spatswood, 52 secs.; 2, Callaghan, 47 secs.; 3, Knight, 46 secs. Also Easter Monday contest: Result, 1, Palfreyman, 90 secs.; 2, Feun, 82 secs.; 3, Burtenshaw, 71 secs.; 26 birds sang.—H. Fenn, Sec.

WALLSEND.

The members of the Wallsend Linnet Singing Club held their opening contest on April 3rd, at Station Hotel, where some good singing was heard. Result: 1, Scott; 2, Fallon; 3, Hunter. Judge, Mr. J. Johnston; timekeeper, Mr. T. Bell. We hold an open contest on May 1st.—JOHN FALLON, Sec.

DURHAM.

Linnet singing contest held at Burton Hotel, Gilesgate, April 17th, when 40 birds entered. The singing was excellent. Most of the "cracks" of the county were present. Mr. Reed, the judge, said this is the 70th contest he had judged, and he never had a better class of birds in front of him. 1, Adams; 2, Soulsby; 3 and 4, Foster. A pleasant afternoon was spent. Book-keeper, Mr. Fairless; timekeeper, Mr. Stout.—J. BINNEY.

BLACKBURN.

Usual weekend contest held at Snig Brook, when 11 birds entered. For good quality singing it is a long time since birds were in better form. Result: 1 and 2, Rostron; 3, Topping. Judges, Messrs. Dobson and James; timekeeper, Mr. Fender. Usual home contest for members only will take place May 1st, when valuable prizes will be sung for.—G. ROSTRON and T. SLATER, Hon. Secs.

The second sing of the season in connection with the Blackburn and District F.A. took place at "The Thorn Inn," Furthergate, on April 1th, when, owiug to the very bad state of the weather, there was only a poor turn-up of contestants. Some remarkable singing, however, was heard, the Burnley contingent being in rare form indeed. 1 and 2, dead heat between Harrison (Burnley) and Halliday (Burnley), whose birds sang whole time. Fletcher took 3rd and last prize with the very respectable time of 9.37.—ROBT. AIREY, Sec.

A CHALLENGE TO DURHAM.

I, Robert W. Boyd, Nettlesworth Old Pit, Edmondsley, Co. Durham, am open to sing anyone in the county of Durham—the following gentlemen preferred: Messrs. Tuller, Mellions, Joe Walker, J. Deane, and T. McQuirk. First come, first served; apply by letter to above address. Three, five, or seven heats; three minutes and five minutes down. Business meaut.—ADVT.

BOLDON COLLIERY.

Linnet contest held at Railway Tavern, April 17th. Some of the best birds were accidentally beaten. There were 39 entries. 1, Blackburn; 2, Honey; 3, Hall. Also a match between Messrs. Honey, Hitchen, and Hall; Mr. Honey won. Judge, Mr. Elliot; timekeeper, Mr. J. Hall. Linnet contest on April 3rd, at Railway Tavern, 31 entries. 1, Brannen; 2, Metcalf; 3, Tucker. Judge, Mr. Elliott; timekeeper, Mr. Buckham.

WIGAN.

The Wigan Linnet Club held their first club match April 17th, when 13 birds sang. Winners for quality: 1, Jones; 2, Jump; 3, Mawsedly; for time: 1, Sephton, 74; 2, Macfarlane, 67; 3, O'Neil, 39. Judge for quality, Mr. Barnes; timekeepers, Messrs. Mellingan, Jump, and Highman. Linnet fanciers are reminded that we are having a contest on May 15th for the benefit of Mr. T. Jump, who has been in ill-health and is not able to work. We shall have some good prizes.—A. PARKER, Sec.

HULL.

Great Linnet Singing Contest, held at North Bridge Hotel; being open to all England, it brought a great number of fanciers together. A large entry was recorded. The birds gave an excellent display of the true Linnet song, much to the delight of all present. Judge, Mr. Conyer; timekeeper, Mr. T. Broadbent. 1, Young; 2, Broadbent; 3, White; 4, Dearlove; 5, Conyer, Next open to all England contest at Whitsuntide.—E. Moore, Hon. Sec.

YORK.

Usual weekly contest held at Bricklayers' Arms, Palmer-lane, Hungate, April 17th, when 20 birds faced the judge, Mr. Paver. Result: 1, Oldroyd; 2, Whitehead; 3, Laverick. Timekeeper, Mr. Lambert, sen.—WM. EMPSON.

Usual weekly Linnet singing contest held at Bricklayers' Arms, Palmer Lane, Hungate, on April 3rd, when 20 birds faced the judge, Mr. Paver. Result: 1, Barnard; 2, Limbert; 3, Scott; 4, Harrison. Timekeeper, Mr. Limbert, sen.—WM. EMPSON.

Usual contest held at Crown Inn, North-street, April 10th, when 20 birds competed. Result: 1, Lee; 2, Stothard; 3, Massheder; 4, Weaver; 5, Bean. Judge, Mr. Perry; timekeeper, Mr. Cooper. Annual Easter Linnet singing contest held at Crown Inn, Easter Monday, when upwards of 20 young birds competed. Result: 1, Massheder; 2, Watson; 3, Granger. Judge, Mr. Perry; timekeeper, Mr. Cooper. Annual contest again in the afternoon, when upwards of 20 birds competed. Result: 1, Moore; 2, Amateur; 3, Bean; 4, Palmer. Judge, Mr. Perry; timekeeper, Mr. Smith. Usual one at Crown Inn, April 17th. Result: 1, Moore; 2 and 3, Lee; 4, Oxberry. Judge, Mr. Perry; timekeeper, Mr. Cooper. J. W. Smith, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Annual contest for quality singing held April 12th, at Skinners Arms, Buslingthorpe-lane, when 17 birds sang. 1, 2, 3, Summers. Judges, Messrs. Wood and Naylor; timekeeper, Mr. Symons. Usual weekly contest for quality singing held April 18th, at Skinners Arms, Buslingthorpe-lane, when 12 birds sang. 1, Ridgewell; 2, Sellers; 3, Turner. Judges, Messrs. Naylor and Symons.—WALTER NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

Contest held at King's Head, Shannon-street, April 13th, when 13 birds faced the judges, Messrs. Summers and Clegg. 1, Sissons; 2, Crowther; 3, Lister. Also on April 17th, when 12 birds sang. 1, Crowther; 2, Lister, and 3 shared between Topping and Sissons. Judges, Messrs. Summers and Melia. Also on April 18th, when 12 birds faced the judges, Messrs. Summers, Melia, and Cooper. 1, Crowther; 2, Lister; 3, Sissons.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec

CANARY QUERIES.

Nervous Hen.

W.E.D.—(1) Can only suggest that you go about your duties in the bird-room in a quiet, methodical way without seeming to notice the hen, and avoid either unnecessary noise or blustering motions, or too nice and mincing ways. Just appear to ignore her existence. She will most likely get over the nervousness to a certain extent. It might help her to do so if you could erect some kind of screen other than a cover on frout of cage, to prevent her seeing all over the room. (2) Eggs often get pinholed, as you describe, by a nervous hen clutching them in her claws when anyone goes near to look at her, or when any sudden noise, such as allowing doors to bang, is made. In some cases holes are caused by one or other of the birds pecking them. Method and quictness are the only things to prevent these occurrences. Of course, this is assuming no sharp, hard, thorny bits of moss have been allowed to get in the nesting material.

Not a Success.

McGinty.—(1) There is no necessity to separate the pair of which the hen has just sat out her time on clear eggs. Take away the nest and nest-pan, and do not return it until you see the birds have mated again and the hen is ready to build. Then give a perfectly clean pan, and new nesting material. Add a pinch of Epsom salts to the water for a day or two, and three times a week give a small teaspoonful of egg-food or sponge cake with a few grains of inga and gold of pleasure seeds added to it. (2) If this is a true pair, the birds were not in breeding condition when mated. If they have not yet made any attempt to nest, separate them for a fortnight, and, in addition to the usual seed diet, give each half a teaspoonful of egg-food with two drops of cod liver oil in it, and a pinch of seed as advised above strewn over it, every second day, and on the alternate days a few grains of hemp. Give two or three small leaves of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day for a week.

Erratic Laying.

Mrs. A. Sinkins.—Am afraid you will do little or no good with this hen just yet. She is evidently a weakly specimen, and her being very young does not make matters better. Separate her for a month and keep her in as large a cage as possible where she can get plenty of vigorous exercise. The two eggs will be no good at all, so you may as well throw them away. Whilst they are separated feed the hen on a staple of Canary only, three times a week give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, twice a week the same quantity of crushed sponge cake, with a slight sprinkling of a mixture of equal parts inga and gold of pleasure, and on two other days a few grains of hemp. Give a regular supply of chickweed, groundsel, or watercress daily, but strictly avoid dandelion. In the drinking water for the first week give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day; in the second week two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day; and for the next fortnight twenty drops of chemical food daily. At the end of the month, if she seems anxious to mate again, you may give her another trial, but do not let her have more than one brood this year if she succeeds next time. By the bye, give her a flake of cuttlefish to peck at whilst separated, and, of course, you must not omit it when she is mated.

Two Together.

H. Cox.—Am replying to both your letters under one head. (1) If you had another brood of young the same, or very near the same age, with two, three, or four young being well fed by the parents, it certainly would not be worth while allowing a pair to bring up a single bird, and you may just as well transfer it to the other brood, and let this pair make a fresh start. On the other hand, if you had another pair that were neglecting their young, it might be most convenient to add the starving brood to this solitary one. (2) If properly fed and treated as detailed already a number of times in this column in the last few weeks, young birds of last season require no particular treatment to get them in breeding condition. This will come about quite naturally. (3) Do not interfere with the white spot at the root of the bird's tail. It is a natural portion of the bird's anatomy, and should not be interfered with, unless an interference is rendered necessary by some derangement. (4) Young birds of the year can only be sexed by the more bold and defiant bearing of the cocks, which are altogether more pushful and dominant than the hens, and by their attempts at singing. Many young cocks begin to warble a little as soon as they leave the nest.

Audible Wheezing.

F. S. S.—The bird is evidently suffering from asthma in a bad form. As you have already tried so many remedies, you must now see that the very first step in future treatment is to remove the cause. Medicines in such a case are absolutely useless unless the cause is removed. See the bird is kept in a comfortable and regular temperature, absolutely free from draughts, and variations of heat, and where the air is always pure and fresh, and free from contamination by burning lamps or gas jets. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary and one part summer rape, as a staple, and twice a week give a small pinch of mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, linseed, maw, and gold of pleasure. Every other day for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver emulsion well mixed in it, and after that time reduce it to twice a week. Give a spray of chickweed, or other green food, but chickweed for choice, daily. Twice a week for the next fortnight, give an inhalation by mixing thirty drops each of tincture of benzoin and eucalyptus oil in half pint of boiling water, and place the mixture in a mug on a table, the cage beside it, and cover all over with a woollen wrap or shawl to keep steam in cage. Leave for fifteen minutes or so. Be careful bird gets no chill afterwards. In drinking water give, two days in every three for a fortnight, or longer if necessary, twenty drops of whiskey, six of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together.

Brevities.

Hoarse Voice (T.H.W.B.).—I think the hoarseness in the hen's voice is probably quite natural to it, and would be in no way detrimental to its breeding. You may give twelve drops of glycerine in the water for a day or two, if you like, and add a few grains only of linseed to its diet every second day for a week. But I do not think there is anything to trouble about even if this does not cause the hoarseness to disappear.

Rusty Chirping (W.D.H., Walton).—See reply to "F.S.S." on "Audible Wheezing," and feed and treat your bird as therein advised. Pay particular attention to the remarks as to removing the cause, as this is really of quite as much value in bringing about a cure as any amount of medical treatment. If the bird is not quite right in a month, write again.

Gone off Song (Mr. W. Spain).—No, keeping a cock bird in the same room as breeding Canaries would not, except in a few exceptional cases, cause it to stop singing. A healthy young cock would probably have sung itself into a frenzy in such a situation, so that there may possibly be some truth in the assertion that it is a hen. You should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d., post free, from this office), which explains the difference in sexes.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Preparing for Breeding (Fair Off).—No, Lizards and Scotch Fancies do not require any particular method of treatment to bring them into breeding condition. You have probably been feeding them too well. Your staple diet, for example, contains far too much rape—three parts Canary to one part rape is best. The linseed and maw are also superfluous. Try feeding for a fortnight as advised to "Mrs. A. Sinkins," and give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for a day or two, and follow this up with two drops each of tincture of steel and tincture of gentian for a few days. Continue giving two or three leaves of dandelion daily for green food.

Resting One Leg (C. Howard).—Dissolve a small teaspoonful of boracic acid in little less than a teacupful of warm water, and bathe the bird's feet in this for a minute or two. Dry gently; trim the claws back if overgrown; and anoint the feet sparingly with cold cream or pure vaseline. Repeat operation, if necessary, except trimming the claws, in a few days. Keep cages and perches quite clean. Give a pinch of Epsom salts in the drinking water for a day or two, and afterwards two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel for a few days. Give a little groundsel or chickweed daily for green food.

Fatal Egg Binding (C.R.B.).—There must be something radically wrong with your hens, or otherwise your management is seriously at fault somewhere. Had you said how you have been feeding them, and what green food you use, I could perhaps have discovered the cause. Better write again, and give these particulars, and meanwhile treat the remaining hens the same as advised to "Mrs. A. Sinkins."

Not as Expected (A Beginner).—I suspect you are keeping the birds in a colder room than they were used to before you had them, and am sure you mated them before the hen was anything like ready. If they have made no attempt to nest yet, separate them for a fortnight, and give the hen half a teaspoonful of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, with two drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and a few grains each of gold of pleasure and inga strewn over it threo times a week. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice and two each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day. Give both birds two or three small leaves of dandelion daily. If the hen is quite active and lively at the end of the fortnight, you may try mating her again, but it is useless to do so until she is quite well.

Sitting Hen Wheezing (Another "Constant Reader").—Feed the hen plainly, as frequently advised here, whilst sitting, but give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry mixed in it for a day or two, and in the drinking water twelve drops of glycerine and two eucalyptus oil, well shaken together for one day. This is only assuming the young are not yet hatched. If they are, then the increased activity of the hen will doubtless have rendered any treatment unnecessary, and in any case you must not give drugs whilst there are young to be fed.

Norwich Gone Blind (R.M.L.I.)—If you had described the symptoms just prior to the blindness occurring, and had said whether there was any discharge from the eye, I should have been in a better position to help you. In any case, it is extremely doubtful whether you will be able to do any good for it. Feed the birds rather generously, adding a little sponge cake or egg food to the seed diet two or threo times a week, and allow a free supply of green food regularly to prevent any constipation. Then get a chemist to supply you with half an ounce of spermaceti ointment plus four grains of red oxide of mercury, and put a piece the size of a pin's head in the affected eyes four times a week for a month or two. Shall be glad to hear result.

Moulting and Wheezing ("A Worried Reader").—You had better let the moult take its course now, and see the bird is quite protected from further chill. Stop giving linseed, and give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it twice a week instead, and only give a pinch of the other seed mixture twice a week. Give a little green-food daily. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, six each of glycerine and syrup of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day until wheezing is stopped.

Irregular Laying (K.M.B.).—I imagine the hen is in an overfed condition, and advise you to discontinue the mixed seed, and as a staple give a mixture of three parts Canary to one summer rape. Twice a week give separately half a teaspoonful of inga whilst nesting, and do not give more than a teaspoonful of egg-food between the pair, and not oftener than twice a week, during the preliminary stages of nesting. Give a little chickweed, groundsel, or watercress, daily. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cage for the hen to peck at. Give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for a day or two, and take nest away until you see she has mated again and ready for it to be returned. When removing eggs as laid next time, be careful to put at least one dummy egg in the nest until the others are replaced.

Covered with Blisters (Constant Reader).—Your bird is suffering from emphysema in a rather bad form, and it is doubtful whether you will be able to do anything for it. Keep it in a regular temperature where the air is pure and fresh always; give three or four times a week half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and a little green food on each of the other days. In the drinking water give ten drops of dandelion juice and six each tincture of lobelia and ipecacuanha wine every second day for a time, and on the alternate days six drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. Allow it to bathe when weather is fine, but be careful of chills afterwards. Do not allow it to hang near a burning gas jet or other light. A fresh pure atmosphere is what it requires.

Late Hatched Bird (C.M., Brixton).—If your bird is in a healthy active condition, it should have been in full song by now if it is a cock, even though it was hatched as late as September last. But the chances are greatly in favour of its being a hen, in which case it will be old enough to breed with this year; but I would advise you not to mate it before the end of April or the beginning of May, and only take two nests, at most, from her this year. Mate with a two-year-old cock.

Slow to Mate (Wild Jim).—You moved the birds about too much in the process of mating, and also probably put them together before they were quite ready. Instead, it would be much better to place the hen in the cage where she is to breed, and put the cock in a small wire cage and hang it on the front of the breeder until you see him begin to feed the hen through the wires. Do this, and give the birds two leaves of dandelion each per day. If the cock stops singing when put in with the hen, take no notice; things will doubtless go all right with a little patience.

Birds Pecking Themselves (W.A.R.).—If I understand you correctly that you give each pair of birds one egg and some bread crumbs daily, then you are giving far too much egg food. One egg and about double its bulk of bread crumbs (or an equal bulk if you use both yolk and white of the egg) should suffice for six or eight pairs. A teaspoonful for each pair is ample. Give a little fresh green food daily; add a pinch of Epsom salts and six drops of lemon juice in the water for a day or two, and see that the birds and cages are quite free from insect pest. Give a bath frequently, with a few quassia chips soaked in the water twice each week.

Egg Food and Journey (Roller).—(1) I do not think there is much to choose between the food you mention and that prepared with egg and bread. The prepared article has the advantage of being much less trouble, but if I were about using it as a substitute, I should add a small proportion of crushed sponge cake and also see that the supply of green food was sufficient to counteract the effect of the biscuit. (2) When sending birds on a journey by rail, use proper travelling cages. Throw a handful of seed on the floor of cage, and when packing up add a piece of stale bread thoroughly saturated with cold water. Send by passenger train per quickest route, and at night for preference. Unless weather is hot and sultry, you should not pierce any holes in wrapper.

Dregs of Asthma and Mating (Blackburn).—You are feeding this hen much too liberally, and it is quite likely an overfed condition is the cause of the huskiness of voice. You may continue using the medicine you mention if still necessary, but if all traces of wheeziness and difficulty of breathing have disappeared, it would be as well to try to do without it. Feed on plain Canary as a staple, and give a small teaspoonful of summer rape three times a week, and half a teaspoonful (not more) of the egg food three times a week. Give a spray of green food daily. In the drinking water give six drops each dandelion juice and syrup of huckthorn every second day for a week. If the hen still seems husky, give twenty drops whiskey and six each oxymel of squills and glycerine every second day for another week. You seem to have matched the birds all right provided the typical points concerning shape, etc., are properly balanced, on which point you give no information.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Feeding Hybridisers.

Miss A. L.—Yes; both Goldfinches and Bullfinches should have plenty of young dandelion leaves, likewise the flowering and seeding heads of dandelion and groundsel, shepherd's purse and chickweed, according to season. The dandelion and chickweed are obtainable now, and shepherd's purse will not be long before being ready. Give good feeds of niger and maw seeds to both birds daily, and do not stint the Goldie of hemp nor the Bullie of sunflower, while the latter may have a taste of egg food every day if she shows any liking for it. My own hens all show a liking for it (they are in cages). Some fanciers believe in transferring the eggs to hen Canaries, and some (but very few) give the hen Britishers a chance to hatch them and rear the young. When the couples are in cages, the former invariably proves the most certain method, especially with hen Bullies, whom I never find any too reliable. Should you get young, offer all of the above-mentioned seeding green foods freely, egg food (or rich insectivorous food, if the hen Bullie likes it), small mealworms, live ants' eggs, and sprays off rose or fruit bushes which are infested with smother fly (aphides). The seeding green food is often obtainable simply covered with "blight" and tiny crawling things, and is then most valuable.

"Meating Off" Small Softbills.

P. M. Mon.—The best way to "meat off" small Softbills, such as the Redstart, Nightingale, Wagtail, etc., is by means of mealworms—the latter are widely obtainable, unlike certain other live-foods. I presume you know that usually it is necessary to put the bird's cage in a light spot, and cover the cage front with muslin, or white gauze, or similar material, while he gets used to captivity. Also see that the food and water are easily accessible—right under its nose, as it were. Personally, I commence with a supply of not over large mealworms in the food dish; then give a few biggish ones cut in two; then lightly sprinkle these cut mealworms with a good insectivorous food, prepared with a generous admixture of finely-minced hard-boiled (fresh) egg; then I press the cut mealworms well up amongst the food. These are the stages: at the end the bird has become used to taking up some of the insectivorous food (especially particles of the egg), and I then gradually wean him off the mealworms, giving them occasionally only. I hope this will make the process clear to you. It is troublesome while it lasts (if one counts trouble in such matters), and takes a week to fourteen days, according to the disposition of the bird, before it can be termed "well on food." And they need hundreds of mealworms in that time. Gentles are good, if obtainable and well scoured, while live ants' eggs are splendid for even the most delicate species, and I use a big quantity every summer. Unfortunately they are not cheap, and it is not everyone

... can go out and gather them. Both (gentles and ants' eggs) can be used to "help out" the mealworms. The cover over the cage can be gradually raised, as the bird becomes used to its new surroundings.

Food for Young Mules.

A Good Start.—Pleased to know you found my "wild-seed" mixture so successful in bringing your Finches into soug and muling condition. There's nothing like "full eggs" to cheer a fancier up. My egg-food I make by well mixing two crushed Osborne biscuits with the finely minced yolk of a hard-boiled (twelve minutes) egg, and a saltspoonful of Plasmon powder. Mix in half the white, too, when the young are four or five days old. The powder, of course, need not be added (it is a "fad" of mine), though I think very highly of it, and dried milk powders generally. When the Mules commence to feed themselves it is a very mistaken policy to leave off soft food as "soon as possible." The egg should be gradually left out of their diet when they are three weeks old or so, but certainly not the soft food. Give bread and milk sop (or biscuit and milk), well sprinkled with maw seed, and with a good pinch of Plasmon powder mixed amongst it, freely each day. In addition offer canary and maw seeds, soaked (germinating) summer rape, and lightly cracked hemp. A few crushed sunflower seeds should also be thrown in daily, increasing the quantity as the birds get older, when I gradually discontinue the milk sop and soaked seed, giving occasioual feeds only. A few groats occasionally are relished, and a little coarse oatmeal; but the above "menu" is full enough for all practical purposes. Some fanciers, I know, will not give young birds green stuff after they have taken them away from their parents. But this I consider a mistake. I don't believe, mind you, in stuffing them with lettuce, watercress, and the like. What they want, and what is extremely beneficial to them aud conducive to their successful rearing, is a free supply of the "seeding green foods," if I may use the term, meaning the seeding heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse, grass, groundsel, plantain, and the like, especially the three first-named. But don't gather it off dusty roadsides; and strip off all large, coarse, stringy leaves. I like my young Mules to have a good fly; some, however, turn out mischievous, so one needs to watch them.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Brevities.

Rearing Young Thrushes and Blackbirds (J.F.).—You will find full information given in the reply to "Beginner" this week.

Rearing, etc., Thrushes (H. Clark).—For food, etc., note the reply given to "Beginner" this week. The nest is that of the Song Thrush, without a doubt. It is mud-lined and the eggs are a beautiful greenish-blue spotted with browuish-black. You don't want to take the young until they are getting nicely feathered; I always found about the twelfth day plenty early enough.

About Pairing (Bird Lover).—No; it is not absolutely necessary to provide a mate for a Linnet because it is in breeding condition. But a bird which is in very high (rank, as fanciers term it) condition is best kept out of the company of birds that are breeding. "Pairing fever" indicates a rank condition. It is not dangerous unless the bird is kept within sight and call of breeding couples. The bird should be fed very plainly, and be given a mild dose or two of saline medicine.

Softbills for Exhibition (Variety).—The Redstart is bad to beat under most judges in a class for small insectivorous birds, and is a better bird for a beginner (I don't know, of course, if you really are a beginner) than the Wagtails, the Goldcrest, the Treecreeper, and certain others which get "among the money." For the large Softbill class, a Waxwing takes some stopping as a rule, and is not difficult to manage. Of course, I assume the specimens to be good of their kind. It is hopeless to speak of a "fair price"; that depends on whether they are bought in show form or not. The Waxwing, by the way, has been difficult to get recently.

To Bring into Condition (Novice).—The "wild seed" mixture you mention is as follows: Two ounces each of gold of pleasure, niger, sesame, and thistle, one ounce each of mustard (the golden-yellow seed), dandelion, maw, cornflower, plantain, clover, and lettuce. It is the finest "tit-bit" or "refresher" (call it what you will) that I know, and there is no waste. This will help to bring any bird into breeding condition at the earliest possible moment. For Goldfinches only, the mustard should be left out and the gold of pleasure reduced one-half; they are better liked by Linnets, etc.

A Wild Linnet (W.R.S.).—You have got hold of what fanciers term an "unkind" bird, possibly an old one, and it may not become really steady until it has moulted in captivity. Linnets differ very much in disposition; some are almost tame, broadly speaking, when caught. The stumps of the broken tail feathers remain in, and prevent new feathers growing. The cock Linnet is a nice warm brown colour on the shoulders (wing butts), and generally shows much more white in the flight feathers. The hen is greyish all over. It will never get steady in an all-wire cage.

Mule Ailing (Madeley, Salop).—You do not give enough particulars to guide me. You should have stated how the bird is caged and fed, how long ailing, the state of its excreta, whether drinking unusually heavy, and whether feeding well or otherwise. I can only at a guess advise you for two days to dissolve in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water as much Epsom salts as will lie upon a shilling. Let him have Canary, maw, and cracked hempseed to eat.

In an Aviary (Herbert Lee).—It is not easy to get British birds to breed in a small aviary such as yours, and if you are really keen on getting some young birds, I advise you to stick to Canary hens (say, 8 or 9) with three cock Canaries and a cock Goldfinch and Linnet, in addition to the cock Redpoll you have already. The pair of Java Sparrows may prove troublesome, but my colleague, Mr. Page, will have to advise you on this score. You won't meet with much success breeding British Finches in ordinary cages; you should try Foreign seed-caters. I will send your letter on to Mr. Page. Look in his column for a reply.

Owing to unavoidable circumstances, Mr. Wesfon regrets having to hold over several replies until next week.—EDITOR.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S.

Aviary for Budgerigars.

H.G.—Your aviary will do well for breeding Budgerigars, but four pairs for breeding will be ample, only three would be better, and your stock of old and young birds ought not to exceed 30 birds. I should advise a glazed sash, hinged as a door to be closed at night, and also during the day in severe weather. If it is so hinged that it stands away from aviary front about one inch, this will provide ample ventilation. The back of the aviary should be well lined with twiggy branches (pea or bean sticks answer well) and at least double the number of cocker-nut husks hung about that you have pairs of birds. When purchasing your stock, procure each pair from a different source, so as to obtain unrelated stock. For treatment refer to your booklet

Parrot in Poor Feather.

C.R.B.—No wonder the poor creature is ill-conditioned and sick, with the food you are giving it. Stop your present diet, and feed strictly as follows: Seed mixture, Canary, two parts, and one part each wheat, dari, maize, oats, hemp and sunflower seeds, well mix and always keep a supply in the cage. Also give ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits (dry). Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage, and mix a little grit among its seeds. For one day only put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in one ounce of water. After an interval of three days repeat the dose; in between (and continue for a month, at least), make the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's chemical food. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, or any kind of animal food whatever. The bird should gradually recover condition on a wholesome dietary.

Strained Toe and Misplaced Claw

Mrs. Harding.—(1) The claw and toe will set in proper position, providing you have so bound them; though the probability is the claw will drop off. However, the loss of the claw will not inconvenience the bird, or unfit it for breeding purposes. (2) A fracture will set, but it should be bound up in the normal position; leave the bandages on for at least a fortuight. (3) Even if the claw does not get right, it will not materially inconvenience the bird. Dip the bird's foot daily into tepid water, without removiug the bandages; also anoint the leg and foot (you can get between the strands of the wool with a camel-hair brush) with Elliman's Embroeation. I should also advise, for one day only, putting one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into one ounce of water, and not supplying any other drinking water or a bath for that day. If it appears at all weakened by the accident, then for a month make its drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food. Supply clear water, say, once a week.

Amazon Parrot Recovering.

A. K. G.—Continue the treatment already advised till the bird is thoroughly fit. It is nothiug less than sheer brutality to have a bird's tongue cut; it will not make it talk, and is is almost certain to kill it. You have paid plenty for a non-talking bird. I should most certainly say the bird will ultimately talk. Keep on with the constant repetition and also keep it where it will hear plenty of small talk and conversation without being scared. As regards a grey, I can only say this: A newly imported bird is a very risky purchasc, and that by far the greater number of them die within a few weeks of reaching this country. The treatment is: Keep them warm at first, strictly out of draught, yet where they will get fresh air; get them on to a wholesome diet as soon as possible, but do not make the change too sudden, and do not give slops, table scraps, etc.

Grey Parrot Running at Nostrils

"B.L.B."—If you have been giving this bird any tea, coffee or milk slops, table scraps or any kind of animal food, you must stop same at once. Your diet (providing the morning and evening bread is given dry) is satisfactory, but I should put a thin layer of the dry seed mixture under the boiled maize. Give the bird one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia, and after an interval of three days repeat dose. On other days, and continue for a month at least, put sufficient Parrish's chemical food in the drinking water to make it the colour of pale port wine. Spray, or wash with a camel hair brush, the bird's nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline, and continue same till the discharge ceases. If the bird will let you handle it, foment its eye with warm water, and put a drop of rose water and zinc eye solution (from any chemist), into the eye or eyes, if both are affected, but the eye should be well cleansed before putting in the solution. Put a piece of fine wire netting over the cage grating so that it cannot get at the contents of saud tray. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist, and put a little on your bird's tongue daily for, say, a fortnight. Till the bird is fit again, it should be carefully protected from draught; at the same time, it must not be kept in a vitiated atmosphere. If any further symptoms should develop, repeat query at once, with full particulars.

Treatment for Grey Parrot.

R.B.—I presume the Indian corn has been boiled; if so, you must continue it for a time. But the regulation or wholesome diet is as follows: Seed mixture—Canary and oats two parts each, and one part each of the following: hemp, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds. Well mix these and always keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit (apple is very good), plain biscuit and nuts. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in its cage, and also water, and scatter a little Parrot grit over sand tray. Note: Boiled maize only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be kept strictly clean. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. For one day only put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in one ounce of water, and do not for the day give any other drinking water till this has been consumed; follow this by making the daily supply of drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food. Keep the bird free from draught, but not out of the reach of fresh air. When covering up a cage, it is the sides which should be thoroughly covered up; the bulk of the top should be left uncovered. The bird will pick up many words, etc., from the conversation which it hears; you can also teach it by constant repetition of short words and phrases, not a mixture, but keep at one till it is learned, then take up another. I hope the bird will do well.

Blue Macaw in Poor Feather.

Mrs. H.—The temperature of any living-room is ample for these birds; it is out of condition, and as it recovers tone its plumage will improve. Give the magnesia every two or three days so long as the voidings do not become watery. Also put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, by making the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with same. The magnesia can quite well be given soaked into a piece of biscuit, or stale household bread. Continue the treatment till the bird is in condition. Do not give milk in any form, nor yet cake; it is better without it. Try it with boiled maize, and if it will take it, well dust it with flowers of sulphur (it only keeps fresh one day, and stale corns must not be left about). A bath (by spraying) should be given two or three times a week, as soon as weather permits; this will materially help the bird, but you must guard against chills when the wind is cold. By all means let it have walnuts, brazils, and hazelnuts, and also as much ripe fruit as it will take. I should say that with a wholesome diet and the warm weather, the bird will improve rapidly. Prepare the maize by boiling it till soft; drain off all possible moisture (the grains should be soft, but whole), and then dust with flowers of sulphur and stir up before supplying to the bird.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Aviary and an Aviary Cage.

"Dorando."—(1) Waxhills are shy breeders in captivity under any conditions, and Orange-cheeks especially so. I think you would be more likely to succeed with either the minute Zebra or Golden-breasted Waxbill or the St. Helena. The cage is roomy, and you ought to meet with success; hang up a coker-nut shell, and also a flash shaped rush nest, supply a little hay and leave them to themselves. (2) Do not put in more than from six to nine pairs for breeding purposes, and I should suggest the following: Grey and Green Singing Finches, Cutthroats, Zebra Finches, Long-tailed and Ruficauda Grassfinches, Green Avadavats, Silverhills, and white Java Sparrows. A Pekin Nightingale will agree among them, but it is a nest-robber of such eggs as it can get at, and must have a soft food and fruit dict, also a few live insects. Weavers are apt to be quarrelsome, and keep the aviary in a commotion, even if they do nothing worse; the Napoleon is a fairly amiable and a handsome bird. They have not yet bred in captivity.

A Sick Tanager.

E. D. P.—I regret very much to have to say that I fear you will lose the bird. Isolate it at once from your other stock and also put its mate in quarantine for a time till you see whether it is infected or not. There is not the slightest doubt but what it has become infected with the complaint of the bird which you refer to as having died on April 14th. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the daily supply of its soft food mixture, but directly the voidings become watery it must be stopped for a time. Also get from your chemist the following mixture:—Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills aud glycerine in equal parts; for use take a teaspoonful of the mixture, add an equal quantity of water and supply to the bird in a small glass drinker. For a few days let the above form the bird's only drink during the first half of the day. Also with a small camel hair brush put a little honey and borax on its tongue, well cleansing the brush each time; do this twice a day while the trouble lasts. Your dict is very satisfactory. If the bird is alive when this reaches you (but I fear it will not have survived), I should be interested in hearing the result of the treatment.

Macaw Out of Condition.

Mrs. H.—Your dietary appears pretty correct, save perhaps the supply of such kinds of ripe fruit it will eat might be more liberal. When giving drugs the supply of drinking water should not be large. A drinker holding about one, or at the most, two ounces of water is ample. Give the bird a dose (one teaspoonful to the ounce of water) of Dinneford's Magnesia twice a week so long as its voidings are not watery. On other days put sufficient Parrish's Chemical Food into the drinking water to make it the colour of pale port wine. A little flowers of sulphur may be advantageously dusted over the boiled maize, and continued for some time. Do not let the bird in its present state be subjected to cold winds, nor yet to a vitiated atmosphere. If the swelling appears again foment it with a hot (not scalding) decoction of camomile flowers, keeping the bird carefully out of draught for the time being; also at the least sign of running at the nostrils spray same with diluted glyco-thymoline. The bird's skin is evidently in an irritated condition, and it would be well to spray the whole of the plumage several times with quassia solution. I am of opinion the bird will gradually recover tone, but in the event of further developments, you had better repeat query at once with full details.

Brevities.

What Parrot? (Newportonian).—It is an Alexandrine Parrakeet. In addition to the present diet also supply regularly the following seed mixture:—Canary, hemp, maize, oats, wheat, and sunflower seeds. Do not any any account give tea, coffee, or milk slops, or any kind of animal food whatsoever and the bird should continue to do well. If kept in your midst, and is well petted, it should make quite a talented bird.

Grey Parrot Ill (Foreign Bird).—This is a matter in which I cannot help you; only a "vet." can do so. It should be worth your while to let your local "vet." see it. Other than this you can do no more than you are doing, and it will end in your losing the bird. I have heard of several birds being saved under veterinary treatment, which were in similar condition to yours.

Cape Canary (Serinus).—The bird was immature when you received it, and while I still think you have a Grey-necked Serin or Cape Canary, it is quite possible it may be the St. Helena Seedeater; but so far as I can gather, it is the first-named. Your food and treatment are very satisfactory, but I should omit the niger, and let it have a hopper of canary seed in its cage. One mealworm per day, or every other day, would be an appreciated dainty for the bird. I think you have a male, and that its song will improve. However, in every species the power of song varies in respective individuals.

Amazon in Poor Feather ("Amaz.").—Continue treatment already advised, giving the Dinneford's Magnesia every other day, so long as the voidings do not become watery, in which case you must stop giving the magnesia for a time. In between supply the chemical food fairly strong; if it is fond of biscuit, you can give a piece on which you have put from 8 to 10 drops of the chemical food. Now the weather is becoming genial, I should spray it every other day, keeping it carefully out of draught till dry. Report progress in about a month, as I am of opinion it will steadily improve, now you have it on a stand.

Amazon Not Talking (G.G.).—It is giving a little of whatever you eat that is working the mischief. Its diet should consist of seed mixture (see other Amazon replies), ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, dry, and about a tablespoonful of boiled maize daily (the latter only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be kept strictly clean). Give it one or two doses of Dinneford's magnesia with two days between each dose (for directions, see other replies). Tea, coffee, milk as liquid, or slops from same, must not be given under any considcration. Keep the bird where it will hear plenty of conversation, and also teach it by constant repetition. Some specimens are more teachable than others, but your bird, as soon as it is in condition, ought shortly to begin to utter a few words.

Indian Parrot out of Condition (G. B.).—I strongly suspect this bird has been wrongly dieted. Its food should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuits and nuts. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, nor yet any kind of animal food. Give several doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, and also put it on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food. You will find full directions in replies to other correspondents in this issue.

Amazon Out of Condition (J. Stafford).—First stop the milk and milk sop. Confine diet to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, and also a little boiled maize. If you can handle the bird, bathe the bare parts with a hot (not scalding) decoction of camomile flowers, making as dry as possible with a cloth, and keeping it strictly out of draught. Give several doses of Dinneford's magnesia with two days between each dose (for directions, see other replies), and in between well colour its drinking water with Parrish's chemical food.

Budgerigars Not Breeding (J.H.A.).—If you have a true pair, they should certainly breed, though they would be the better for a larger cage. You can easily tell the sexes, the cere (portion surrounding the nostrils) of the male is blue, that of the female decidedly brown. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful, to be had from this office. Do not give egg food. Canary and white millet seeds, a few oats, with green food, such as lettuce, grass in flower, etc., and cuttlefish to nibble at, will be ample to meet their modest requirements.

Zebra Doves (M.G P.).—I do not know your locality, and so cannot speak definitely, but if there is a shelter attached to your outdoor aviary, it should do better there, and will breed. Shallow nest boxes about six inches square and three inches deep, fixed high up in the shed portion, wicker platforms (tops of round hemp hampers) are also favoured; they prefer slender twigs for nesting material, such as clematis prunings; failing anything of this character, supply straw, coarse hay, and as coarse-growing grass as you can get, but they prefer pliable twigs to anything else.

What Bird? (Druid).—It is a Monstache Parrakeet, and will be much larger than it is at present, and its plumage brighter. The price is very variable when the species is numerous—as low as 10/6 a pair (newly imported). Its food should consist of seed mixture (Canary hemp, oats, wheat, dari, maize, and sunflower seeds), ripe fruit, plain biscuits, and nuts. If it has been getting boiled maize, continue this for a time. It should talk: teach it by constant repetition, and keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, yet not be continually scared.

Diet for Lovebird ("Ignorant").—Canary and white millet seed, a few oats, ripe fruit (apple, orange, banana, etc.), green food (lettuce, grass in flower, etc.), and a piece of clean cuttlefish to nibble at; water ad lib. They will do well enough in a box cage, but it ought not to be less than 24 by 12 by 18 inches high.

Best Talker (R.C.).—The greys are the best talkers, and usually the most teachable; but they are very difficult to acclimatise, and several are frequently lost before you get one well established. The blue-fronted Amazons come next; they are certainly good talkers; in fact, very little behind greys, but they are more trouble training, being perhaps not quite so teachable. They are, however, a hardier species, and would, I think, suit your conditions best. Very few birds require artificial heat, providing they are protected from draught and damp.

Waxbill for Exhibition ("Cuid One").—At a large show where a class was given for Waxbills, etc., any of the following would stand a good chance of being in the money, providing they were in the finest condition, merit as in order given: Zebra, Orange-cheeked, St. Helena, and Grey Waxbill; green and common Avadavats. Value about 7/6 a pair. For a mixed class violet-eared or Melba Waxbills would stand a good chance. Value 50/- to 60/- a pair; single birds (cocks), say, about two-thirds the price of pairs.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (Miss Searight).—Septicæmia, or bird fever. All cages should be disinfected, or else fresh occupants will take it.

Canary (X.Y.).—This bird seems to have died of a "chill" or inflammation incidental to the nesting season, rather than to an organic disease.

Red Mite Preventative (G. Coombs).—We do not know the present address of the agent. We feel sure, however, that you could get carbolineum avenarius from any large store selling painters' goods and the like.

Two Photographs (F. Jones).—Pleased to print your letter, but unfortunately the two photographs are not clear enough to reproduce satisfactorily.

Illustrated Ideas (I. Summers).—We fancy we have already utilised this.

The Ladder of Progress Competition (J. Turner).—It was our intention originally to forward all postcards when the competition closed, but we have now decided to send them as the names reach us from competitors. So you will get yours in the course of a few days. We shall welcome all the "ladders" you care to send us.

Bat and the Daylight (G. Margaritis).—The occurrence is certainly interesting, but, as this journal deals solely with birds, is hardly a suitable one to be recorded in our columns. It would be welcomed by journals dealing with animal life.

Seed Sample (Jos. Parker).—Sorry to get your note. We are afraid the seed sample must have got mislaid, assuming that it reached us. If you could post another we would gladly give the matter attention.

SOME PRETTY FOREIGN BIRDS I HAVE KEPT.

SIR,—The following notes concern a few birds I have kept in the house in cages, also some which I have at the present time. My first cage birds were a pair of Cordon Bleus, and although purchased during the summer (which I think is the best time to purchase birds), they both died the following day. The dealer from whom I had them replaced them, but these also died, so I gave up all idea of keeping Cordon Bleus. It is a pity they are so delicate, as they are very pretty, much more so than a lot of the more expensive birds. In a large public aviary in the park there are three or four very good cock Cordons. The hens are all dead, I think, chiefly through egg-binding. I had a young cock Pintail Nonpariel in my possession for about nine days before it died. He was very tame, but appeared to have a partial stoppage in the throat. One morning, about ten minutes after I had fed him and seen him eat, I found him dead on the floor close by the food pot. This species is, in my estimation, the handsomest of the foreign birds I have seen. At the present time I have got pairs of Saffron Finches and Lesser Black-throated Cardinals, one White Java Sparrow, and one Zebra Finch. The Saffron Finches are nice birds, but are as quarrelsome with each other as the Green Singing Finches. The hen is slightly larger than the cock, but is not brightly coloured. Both have about equal capacity as regards song, which isn't saying much. The Cardinals are very handsome birds and very tame. I had these only three days before they would take mealworms from a pot held out to them. The hen is slightly larger than the cock bird, but not as brightly coloured. I have been unfortunate with my White Java Sparrows, for out of two pairs I have only one hen left. I had a pair of Zebra Finches in the same cage, but the hen died, leaving me with one of each kind. They are very friendly together and sleep as close as possible. I am thinking of trying to breed with these two birds, as the young would be very interesting.

WHAT IS A CLEAR?

SIR,—I think Mr. Kingsmill's letter in your last issue very misleading, and should like to suggest that he in the future sticks to the text of any bye-law he comments upon. I consider the whole letter is, to say the least, misleading. I would, however, like to ask him, or Mr. Mackley, two questions. First: Which class is a bird which has a little dark underflue (presuming this to be known only to the owner, and possibly found out in the washing) to be shown in; and secondly, what is to prevent a "clear" winning in a ticked class? I hardly like to question a statement from such a fancier as Mr. Mackley, but I hardly think his "theory" re a bird's sitting a "little thick" will "hold water," for what judge would put such a bird in the "money"?

NOVICE.

SIR,—It is of no use Mr. Kingsmill or anybody else trying to cloud the issue on this question, and getting on to the "backs" of the members of the N.P.C. just because they do not stick to the pet, old-fashioned trade-mark of the City of Norwich, a "clear" Norwich! The Fancy knows a thing or two; it is going forward. It is no longer docile at the shrine of Norwich City, or inclined to be fed solely on Norfolk dumplings. To begin with, Mr. Kingsmill knows very well that the N.P.C. does not intend to convey the idea that a bird with a tick on it anywhere is a "clear" in the technical sense. It is no use clouding the issue with that nonsense. He knows very well that the N.P.C. has adopted the rule because it wishes to bring about what nine out of every ten fanciers consider to be a sensible state of affairs, which will protect the owner of a bird sent in full show condition from the annoyance of seeing his bird's plumage ruffled and its after chances handicapped. What odds about what one or two Norwich men say, though I write this with no disrespect. Mr. Kingsmill asks: "Where is the Fancy going?" My answer is: Along the high road of common sense, to the goal of perfection, as near as that is attainable. Mr. Kingsmill says: "It would have been more to the N.P.C.'s credit as a body of fanciers to have kept the clear classes intact and free from invasion." Aye, perhaps so, from the Norfolk point of view. But the rub is that the main body of Norwich Plainhead fanciers think otherwise, and it would be much to the credit of Mr. Kingsmill and his friends if they would bow to the will of the majority with good grace. "If the judge handled the winners, it would stop the abuse," says Mr. Kingsmill, But the majority of the Fancy are of opinion that it is not an abuse; and what is the use of a small clique trying to rush the majority? "What is there to be alarmed at in a judge, if he be an expert, which every judge ought to be, handling a few winners?" asks Mr. Kingsmill. Here again he is enveloped in the dust he himself is throwing. Does he not see that the judges—the men who are acknowledged as experts by reason of their years of action—are practically united on the common-sense decision of the Fancy generally to prevent the necessity for handling. Where will Mr. Kingsmill find rest for the soles of his feet! He positively roars out his anathemas because the N.P.C. has not fathered the retention of the ancient Norwich saw that "the acme of perfection is the clear!" Part with your antiquated Norwich patent, Mr. K. Nobody will be any the worse for its decease. It brought plenty of grist to the Norwich mill while its charms lasted. Usually the ticks went in with the variegated—out of the company of the aristocratic "clears," and in with the etceteras. It will give the useful birds in the breeding room a better chance now. Finally, it will prevent the judges having the unpleasant task of catching birds beautifully wound up, and save the birds from the danger of damaged plumage. Mr. Kingsmill may say what he likes, but there are men about quite as expert as he, and his friends in Norwich, and they admit that, however clever a man may be, he cannot always fetch a bird out of one of the present-day show cages, without some danger of injuring its plumage. That is where the shoe pinches; the Fancy knows it, and has acted accordingly. LANCASHIRE LAD.

(A letter from Mr. W. Reid unavoidably held over.—Ed. C.B.).

A NOTED LINNET.

SIR,—I read "Observer's" letter, and am surprised that an outsider should have stepped in when this question was settled. I have known Mr. F. A. Watt intimately during the past few years as an extremely popular young man, as a sportsman, and a man of business, and in all my connections with him I have never found him to be a "bouncer," or to suffer from the disease called "swelled bead." "Observer" is apparently unable to grasp the situation clearly. The judging of Mr. Watt at the Scottish National gave entire satisfaction, and met with no adverse criticism, as "Observer" will see if he refers to the reports.

ANOTHER OBSERVER.

LINNET SINGING.

SIR,—Will you allow me a few lines in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, with regard to Linnet singing for time? I see some of our Linnet fanciers are anxious to know the ins and outs of time singing. Now, our way, round about Leigh, is:—Half a minute face to face, 5 minutes with the shade. Now, we do not count anything till the shade goes in the window; then we count three seconds or over. Nothing under three seconds counts. I myself, however, like the way in which the Sheffield and Barnsley fanciers sing. I think a Linnet, if he is kept for time singing or for quality, should count as soon as he is put in the window. As to Lady Green's bird, it will not go face on; it has done all its work behind the shade. But one of our Linnet fanciers from Leigh took it down the other week with three birds. Mr. J. Statham, you will find in CAGE BIRDS, got 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and Lady Green 4th. I hope this will enlighten your readers as to Linnet singing.

JOHN W. JONES.

A SUCCESSFUL START.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper just to relate my experiences with five pairs of Norwich (the cocks 1908 birds, the hens 1907), and one pair of Crests—six pairs in all. On March the 12th I put them all up. On March 31st they went to nest. Four hens laid five eggs each; the eggs numbered 26 in all from the six pairs, and on looking at and counting each nest I find that all eggs have hatched off, and I am at present the possessor of 26 young ones, all doing well, and nearly a week old. I should like to know if any of your readers has met with the same success? The only advice I can give is to study CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL, keep the birds clean, to leave well alone when they are going along all right, and to act on the useful tips in your paper.

W. T. DOVE.

CINNAMON BORDER FANCIES AND THEIR COLOUR.

SIR,—I notice Mr. Hadwin makes reference to me upon the above question, but as I have not interfered in the correspondence in your journal, I must ask Mr. Hadwin to communicate with me direct. I am responsible for asserting that cinnamon colour is recessive to green colour, but I have never spoken or written of cinnamon colour not reproducing itself when bred to cinnamon colour. A recessive is pure, and will always breed true. I have also stated that cinnamon colour is a mutation of green colour, the difference being that green colour contains two colour factors and cinnamon colour only one colour factor.

J. S. CLINCH.

A Correction.

SIR,—I beg to point out a printers' error in my letter on the above in last week's issue. On the 12th line I am made to say: "but his is not consistent with the facts," whereas I said: "so long as it is consistent with facts." I beg also to state that I intended to have struck out that part near the finish which appears in brackets, viz.: '(were, in fact, the colour "Your Reporter" advocated in his criticisms of the Crystal Palace class)'. I was in a dreadful hurry when writing the letter. I see I have omitted to strike it out in my copy, so I take it I also omitted to strike it out in the letter I sent. By publishing the above you will much oblige.

CINNAMON BORDER.

THE BORDER FANCY CANARY IN THE SOUTH.

SIR,—I must apologise to Mr. Hadwin for unintentionally misquoting his lecture. I was writing from memory only, not having the copy by me. However, I do not think there is very much difference in saying "the smaller the better," than there is in "the difficulty with the Border is to keep it small enough." The impression given one is that in the North, at least, they like them small. Their diminutiveness, as has been pointed out by Mr. Norman, makes them all the harder to handle for Fancy points. This, however, to my mind, constitutes one of their chief attractions. It would be a thousand pities were the time to come when their increase in size made it only possible to call them "wee gems" by courtesy.

WILLIAM EAGLE-BOTT.

SIR,—I was very pleased to see Mr. Hadwin's letter in your last issue under the above heading. I quite agree with Mr. Hadwin with regard to studying the fads of judges. Any fancier who has attended the shows these last two or three years could not fail to see that in some varieties, Borders included, it was the fads of the judge that were being studied, and not the standard of that particular variety. What is the use of specialist clubs setting up a standard if it is the judge that is to be studied, and not the standard? I contend that the bird which comes nearest to the model or standard ought to be the bird to win, and not the bird that comes nearest to the judge's fancy. By the way, Mr. Hadwin says in his letter that a Border must be as little over five inches in length as possible. Now, I take this to be the E. and W.B.F.C.C. standard. On the other hand, the B.F.C.C. standard is "as near 5½ inches as possible"; so that there is half an inch difference between the two clubs' models, a thing which I do not think ought to be. A Border Fancy is, or ought to be, a Border Fancy all the world over, and there ought to be one standard for all, or fanciers will still have to study the fads of judges. Take, for instance, the case of a judge, who is a member of the B.F.C.C., and who is judging a member's birds (of the E. and W.B.F.C.C.) and those of a member of the B.F.C.C. as well. You then get birds showing half an inch difference in length. That judge is judging to his own standard; he could not put the "E. and W." member's bird forward, although it might be as good a bird otherwise; but, it fails in length, according to his own club's standard, and yet, at the same time, it may conform to the "E. and W." standard. Therefore, there will still be the fads of judges to study. I hope to see this matter discussed in a real sportsmanlike spirit, so that the discussion will not degenerate into personalities. R. YOUNG.

IS IT NECESSARY TO COLOUR-FEED BRITISH BIRDS?

SIR,—Mr. Hawes' reference to my lecture is somewhat misleading. I did not state that the bird I dissected was diseased through the excessive use of artificial colouring. I stated that its condition was probably due to the excessive use of hot cayenne pepper, and this was admitted by the owner of the bird. I mentioned this most particularly, warning my hearers against the excessive use of hot pepper. I have always advocated colour feeding on pure tasteless pepper, and stoutly maintain that such feeding is not only harmless but absolutely beneficial to a bird.

J. W. RAMSDEN.

SIR,—Mr. Hawes' effusion under the above heading in your issue of the 17th inst., is replete with the incoherent rambling, the inaccuracies and inconsistences which characterise the vapouring of the "malcontent novice" of all time. I cannot read them without feeling sorely tempted to yield to the promptings of the "Old Adam" within me, and, metaphorically speaking, to rend the whole tissue of twaddle into fragments even smaller than the bird's nest in which Mr. Hawes tells us he was "bred and born." I will be content, however, with correcting his two most outrageous travesties of fact. First, as regards "assuming innocence in regard to this faking" (I scarcely know what this expression means), and my having come across "'wheezes' such as glycerine, sweet oil, koko oil, etc. . . " These remarks, I take it, are prompted by the question asked me by one of the members of the society to whom I recently had the honour of lecturing, viz., "What brilliantine or other preparation do you use to get the polish on your Goldfinches?" My reply was truthful, if brief: "Cold Water." With the editor's permission, I will here enlarge upon it. If any exhibit of mine carries what is called "bloom," that bloom is the bloom of perfect health and condition, and it is the only kind of bloom that counts. It is the result of proper feeding, perfect cleanliness, and correct general treatment. I know all about the "wheezes" enumerated by Mr. Hawes, and many others besides. They are the finest "wheezes" possible for the spoiling of birds' plumage by the clogging of their feathers, but, even skilfully applied, they can never achieve more than a parody of the real live bloom of perfect health and condition. If Mr. Hawes, or any other novice, thinks he can, he is at liberty to try them. I have never practised nor recommended the use of any of them. Secondly, Mr. Hawes says that the answer I supply to the question: "Is it necessary to colour-feed British birds?" is "Yes." For resolute disregard of the truth this would be hard to beat. The doctrine I have always preached, and proved the truth of, is that colour-feeding is not necessary, but that the colour in British birds is best developed by generous dieting upon natural lines. This is all I have to say to Mr. Hawes Personalities are neither edifying nor instructive, and I decline to descend to them.

C. PRIOR.

WHOSE IDEAS WERE THEY?

SIR,—In answer to your correspondents under the above heading:—Firstly, it was by request of my committee that I reluctantly decided to give a lecture, not as your correspondents head it, on "Cage-making," but "The Breeding Cage I use." Therefore I think I can fairly claim to have kept to my subject. It will probably not be out of place if I now take the opportunity of thanking the members for the appreciation of my endeavours. Referring to my perch holder (which I used years before I knew Mr. Mallett), the difference is only in the method of making and the metal used. My old perch holder was made with two pieces of copper or brass soldered together, and the perch holder under discussion is made of an alloy and cast whole, therefore saving expense and time. This, Mr. Mallett, can be proved. With regard to my seed holder, Mr. Mallett, after having seen mine, came and asked me for a pattern, which I willingly gave him: this also can be proved. In reference to using his name, I may say that very few of my fancier acquaintances, I should think, have ever heard of Mr. Mallett. I take this for what it is worth—pure assumption on his part. By his great self-asserted achievements, I should think he was more known in the incubator world. As regards his challenge, if my committee think it beneficial, I am quite willing, but it must be an open and not a committee meeting. I rather like his concluding remarks: "I do not intend to enter into any controversy through the Fancy paper." Surely he will allow me to use the same means, with your kind permission, as he has used himself?

By C. A. House.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the genera management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

THE CREWE O.S. WITHDRAWAL FROM THE C.B.U.

SIR,—At a meeting of the members of the Crewe Ornithological Society, held at the Burton Hotel on April 6th, it was unanimously decided to withdraw our membership from the Cage Bird Union. As a number of our members are also members of various Specialist clubs, which are not affiliated to the Cage Bird Union, this course was deemed advisable by all present. I shall be pleased if you will make this known through the columns if your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR LARK FANCIERS.

SIR,—Being a reader of your journal, and interested in Lark singing, and being only a novice at present, I feel sure that a few hints from some of the "old hands" would be a great help to us novices round here in getting and keeping Larks in condition for singing contests. The best birds here have only sung for ten minutes without a break. I trust columns of your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS. interesting hobby.

THE NESTING OF THE GOLDFINCH

SIR,—Mr. Barker Clegg falls into error when he states: "This species (i.e., Goldfinch) seldom rears more than two broods." The Goldfinch begins to breed in May and continues till October. Had he said "They rarely rear less than four broods," he would have been nearer the mark. They are not insect eaters. I have no doubt Mr. Clegg knows ten times more than I about birds in captivity. It is the natural history part of his lecture (as reported in your last issue) that I take exception to. Mr. Davis stated (and he is correct) he put a pair of Goldfinches together in July and got three nests, of 6, 5, and 4 eggs. This appeared in your paper about three weeks ago.

R. J. CLARK.

THE GOLDFINCH & THE LINNET.

SIR,—In the notes of Mr. Barker Clegg's lecture on the above, printed in your issue of April 17th, there is an error on the part of someone. The length of the Goldie is given as 5.2in., and that of the Linnet 5.02in. I think it will be generally acknowledged that the latter bird is longer by quite half an inch. By all the authorities whose works I have, the length of the Goldie is given as about 5in., of the Linnet about 5¼in. I trust Mr. Barker Clegg will accept this as a friendly criticism.

SOME REMINISCENCES OF FOREIGN BIRD KEEPING.

SIR,—Comparatively few keepers of foreign birds relate their experiences for the general benefit of the Fancy, so I beg leave to relate mine. My first experience in foreign bird-keeping was in the year 1900. Having an empty pigeon cote in my garden, I converted it into an aviary. The shed was about six feet by five feet by seven feet high, with a wire flight about 12ft. long. The aviary faced due east, and consequently got all the cold winds in the winter. The following is a list of the birds I kept in it:—Madagascar Love Birds, Green Budgerigars, Zebra Finches, Green Singing Finches, Common Avadavats, Orange-cheeked Waxbills, Grey Java Sparrows, Spice Birds, Black-headed Nuns, Ribbon Finches, and Norwich Canaries—one pair of each. My birds had not been in the aviary a week before the hen Canary had its foot badly bitten by the Lovebirds. The Zebra Finches had three fine nests altogether, and though they sat well, all the eggs of the three nests were unfertile. The hen eventually died from egg-binding. The Ribbon Finches had two nests, both of which they hatched out; but they threw the young ones out of the nest when they were about four days old. None of the other birds nested. The Lovebirds and the Avadavats paired, but nothing resulted. The cock Avadavat escaped on two occasions from the aviary, but I managed to get him back on opening the door of the flight. The Ribbon Finches also escaped, the cock for one day and the hen for two. The Green Singing Finches are very nice birds but are quarrelsome with each other. The cock sings nicely in short snatches, but when I kept him in the house he only chirped. I have a cock Canary, by the bye, which is about eight years old, and which copies the song of the cock Avadavat; which, of course, spoils its own song. All the above-named birds gradually died off during the winter, with the exception of about four, which I sold. The reason for their dying was, I think, that the aviary was badly situated and got no shelter from the wind. The following points are, in my opinion, very important for a successful aviary: Don't keep any Parrakeets with your Finches; and have your aviary as large as possible, in a well-sheltered position with a sunny aspect, and plant the flight with shrubs, etc. The above reminiscences, although containing nothing very special, will, I hope, be of some interest to the readers of CAGE BIRDS.

THE FITTING-UP AND STOCKING OF AN AVIARY.

SIR,—When one is about to begin keeping a variety of birds, the first thing he has to consider is how to build a suitable place to keep them in. The prospective keeper of birds would therefore start by building a place (if possible) facing south, say, 8ft. by 4ft. wide by 6ft. high. It should have a span roof going up to 7ft. in the centre, and be boarded up at each side and at the top, with ⅜in. or 1in. match boarding, a piece of glass being let in both sides of the roof to afford more light, using ½in. or ¾in. mesh netting for the front, which should be boarded up about 12 or 18 inches from the ground to prevent rain splashing in and making floor damp, which would prove disastrous to the birds. Having the woodwork finished, he should give same two coats of paint outside and two of lime white inside, which should be repeated at least once a year. Allow the paint and lime white to thoroughly dry before introducing the birds. Having done this, procure some branches of trees—laburnum or elder are preferable, as they have more twigs on them and are easily bent to the position required and do not snap. Fix them in as natural a position as possible, being careful not to place them one over the other, as they will not then become fouled. Now fasten up two or three boxes in which to place the seed. These boxes should not be allowed to get empty. Obtain a large flower-pot saucer which will serve admirably for the purposes of a bath, and can be bought from most oil shops for a few pence. Stand this in the centre of aviary, having previously covered the floor with sand, which will only require the surface taken off once or twice a week. The would-be aviary-keeper should next turn his thoughts to the stocking of the aviary, and one built as described would comfortably accommodate about thirty birds. The most hardy and suitable birds for an amateur whose income is limited are any of the British seed-eating birds, most of which will agree well together. I will give a description of a few of them. Clean water should be supplied each day in the drinking vessel and bath, when you will find that the birds will readily take to same through both summer and winter. The following are short descriptions of some of the birds which look very pretty in an aviary and can be kept at very little cost. To begin with, we will take the Bullfinch. The cock Bullfinch has a deep red breast, and a black covering on the head extending to just below the eye; the shoulders are of a bluish black, the rump being white. The hen is not so bright in colour and can be easily distinguished from its mate by the breast and back being a dark brown. In the wild state these birds are found mostly in thickly-wooded districts, and feed on insects and berries of various kinds. In the winter they come nearer habitation and eat groundsel, hips and haws, etc. The nest is constructed of twigs and is lined with feathers and hair, being generally built in a fir or other tree, and occasionally in a high hedge. There are usually five eggs laid of a greenish blue colour, with dark brown spots. This bird has no song of its own, but if carefully trained it can be taught to pipe several tunes. Next comes the Goldfinch or Greypate, which, like the Bullfinch, has a very bright plumage, the front of head being a bright red extending to the back of the eye (in the cock only), with a black collar at the back. The back is a chocolate brown and the wings are variegated with yellow, white and black. The tail is also black tipped with white. The nest is generally built in a fruit tree and is constructed of moss and lichens, lined with feathers and wool. The eggs are a pale grey with brown spots and are usually five in number. This bird has rather a pretty song and feeds similarly to the Bullfinch. Next is the Chaffinch, which has a black forehead and bluish crown, the breast being a deep red paling into white on the belly. The wings are black with two white bars running across, the tail also being black. The eggs are usually 4 or 5 in number and similar in colour to those of the Goldfinch. This bird is fond of insects such as caterpillars and beetles, also berries and chickweed. The next we come to is the Greenfinch or Green Linnet, which is of a greenish yellow colour variegated with ashy grey and yellow. Like most other British birds, the hen is not so rich in colour, and is more of a greenish grey, lacking the yellow. The Greenfinch is also fond of insects, as previously mentioned. It has a pretty little song and helps to make up the colour in an aviary. The Greenfinches prefer a thick bush to build in, and if this is supplied in the breeding season they would soon build and lay from four to five eggs of a light green colour spotted with red. There are, of course, many other species that can be handled with success, but it is advisable for the would-be aviarist to commence with a few specimens, which can soon be augmented as experience is gained. It must be remembered that cleanliness, airiness (without draughts), and dryness are three points that must be rigorously observed if the novice desires to be successful in what cannot fail to be an interesting and instructive pastime.

FRENCH CHALK AND BOWEL TROUBLES.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to correct some inaccuracies made by your correspondent, Mr. J. Hamilton, upon this subject. He says: "What is meant is prepared chalk, known medically as precipitated chalk." Now this is entirely erroneous, and only complicates the matter further. Prepared chalk is got in small conical-shaped lumps, and in its crude form is "common whitening." Precipitated chalk is in the form of a fine powder, and is used chiefly in the manufacture of tooth powders. It is the prepared chalk (creta præparata) which is the desired article, and which is the only form of chalk used in medicine for the correction of diarrhœa. I think your correspondent, Mr. Hamilton, should take the lesson he gives home to himself, that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing; more especially seeing that he addresses his letter from a dispensary.

Canary Breeding for Beginners - - 7d.

B. Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to-date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

A very successful table show of Hybrid and Muling pairs, also of British birds, was held at the Swan and Peacock Hotel, on April 6th. Although late in the season, a nice number of birds put in an appearance. It was pleasing to note that several Canary fanciers are taking up this delightful hobby, which augurs well for the Society. Mr. Rowley won special for best Hybrid pair, and Mr. A. Tonks that for best British, with a fine Goldfinch. Mr. R. Willoughby judged to everyone's satisfaction. Mr. A. Tonks read a very interesting paper on his experiences in Mule and Hybrid breeding, extending over a number of years, and was listened to with rapt attention. At the conclusion of the paper a most edifying discussion took place. Mr. Weaver (Chairman) touched the subject in a practical manner, which proved of great benefit to all. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Willoughby and to Mr. A. Tonks concluded a very enjoyable evening.

MULING PAIRS: 1, Weaver, Greenfinch and Cinn. hen, really good pair; 2, Tonks, fine foreign Goldie and yell. ## PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard

PARROT AVIARIES, MORECAMBE.

Now please remember that during the last 18 years I have bred thousands of Budgerigars, and I publicly wager £50 that I have imported, manufactured, sold, and shipped more wired cokernut husk nests for Budgerigar breeding than any other man living; so have any braggiug copyists, or so-called shippers sufficient British pluck to accept? If so, step forward; if not, don't brag, but stand down. For 18 years my husks have been unequalled. Don't be gulled by inexperienced shopkeepers; listen to what experts say:—"Cage Birds" says they are "far superior to the old husks." "Feathered World" says: "Undoubtedly, the new husks are very superior to the old." Again, "Exchange and Mart" says: "Those prepared by Mr. Harper are very superior to the old style, which often fall to pieces at the most critical time, with disastrous results for the nestlings. You had better order the improved form; even if it is a little dearer than the old-fashioned sort, it is cheaper in the long run." "Fur and Feather" tells its correspondents: "They have distinct advantages over the old sort." "Poultry" has said: "For Budgerigars we advise the use of the improved style of husks." Surely these are convincing testimonials.

Don't forget, you have the benefit of 18 years' practical breeding experience. I don't keep a shop; one quality only, the best. My "Improved Secure" husks are 4/6 dozen, smaller quantities 5d. each. Few Cockatéel nest boxes 1/6 each. Illustrated pamphlet, entitled "Budgerigar Breeding," free on application.

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

SANDIFORD'S FAMOUS ROYAL RED.

The only Colour Food on Earth.

£50 Given in Prizes this Year.

All societies using over 20 lbs. to have a beautiful special. Read this startling proof—"The only proof." I don't need to lecture to you. Use Royal Red and it will prove you need no lectures or papers on colour feeding. (Have on view 10 tons.)

Mr. Alfred Grey, Morpeth. 17/1/09.—Dear Mr. Sandiford,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your fine cup, for which I thank you. All my birds have been fed on your colour food this season, and I have won, besides, your cup, the N.N.P.C. solid silver rose bowl outright, the Gibson challenge cup at the Scottish National; also 30 firsts, 23 seconds, 20 thirds; special most points open Norwich classes at Morpeth; special most points open Norwich at Gateshead; special most points at Kelso, and many other specials; all with Norwich, fed on your noted Royal Red. Mr. S. Haigh, Halifax. February 7th, 1909.—Sir,—Received your cup and highly delighted. I may state I won 1st in class of 77 with a tick Yorkshire; also 2nd in class of 75, with a yellow Yorkshire; only two birds I entered at Palace last week; both nicely fed on your "Royal Red." Mr. R. Halliday, big Yorkshire exhibitor, and judge, won't use anything but Royal Red.

Also used last season by the following gentlemen: Mr. Cook—Norwich Plainhead cup winner, 1908-9. Also Mr. E. Baker, Judge Vardy, Crystal Palace, 1909, judge; Messrs. Midgley, Dobinson, Godley, Hodder; all above winners of 1st prizes at Crystal Palace, in open Norwich classes. Messrs. Booth, Cleminson, and Taylor Irons, Halliday, Wilcock, Hirst, Cuthbertson (big Yorkshire winners), and thousands more. I could fill this paper with successful exhibitors who used nothing but Royal Red last year.

This year's produce is marvellous in colouring properties. Prices as usual, 2/- lb.; 2 lbs. 3/5; 5 lbs. 7/6; hot Natal, 2/- lb.; 2 lbs. 3/8; all carriage paid. Wholesalers and agents write for terms.

NOT ME,

but what

Others say & think

(Thousands similar open for inspection by anyone.)

82, Smitb Street, Kirkdale. April 22, 1909.—The Yorkshire variegated reached here duly in good condition. Is a beauty, and highly satisfactory. Thanking you for your prompt attention. — W. Woods to W. Rudd.

54, Constellation Street, Roath. April 21, 1909.—Birds arrived safely, and I am very pleased witb them and the way you have treated me. I have bought many birds, in this city, but none as good. Shall send to you when wanting more, as I find you are an honest man.—J. Redman to W. Rudd.

2, Bisley Street, Belfast. April 16, 1909.—I received the muling hen alright in splendid condition, none the worse for journey. I consider it good value at the price, as I could not buy such here at twice the amount.—W. Leney to W. Rudd.

Highwood Cottage, Ingleton, Yorks. April 21, 1909.—The Lizard cock arrived safely and none the worse for journey. I am extremely well pleased witb him, and will certainly send to you again for any birds I may want. Thanking you for prompt attention.—W. J. Donaldson to W. Rudd.

24, Murtagh Road, off Manor Place, Dublin. April 24, 1909.—I received birds and cages quite safe and well. I am very pleased with them, and shall certainly recommend you to any person I hear in want of a good bird. I consider you the most straightforward gentleman in the business that I have come across.—S. Byrne to W. Rudd.

MY DOMINANT MOTTO:-

CRESTED COCKS.
7/6, 8/6, 10/6 to 100/-.

CRESTED HENS.
5/6, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- up.

COCKS! COCKS!! CRESTED BRED.
Some large feathery birds—simply given away at 6/6, 7/6, 6/6, 10/6 up.

MATCHED PAIRS FOR BREEDING CRESTS.
12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- up.

Reliable Bargains for the Experienced and Amateur.

My special matched pairs of prize-bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-; Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, and 30/-; Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-; Lancashires 25/-, 30/-, 40/-; Cinnamons, 8/6, 9/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; Lizards, 12/6, 16/-, 20/-; Border Fancies, 6/6, 10/6, 12/6.

To Beginners:

If you cannot afford a big price send for a pair of my correctly matched Norwich at 6/6 or 9/6; and now note this.—In most cases where you send for pairs at this price, you are sent two buffs, often both marked birds—this is where you do not get what is required—well, I send you one marked, and one clear; one buff, and the other yellow. Travelling cage 3d. extra. Then for 3/6 I will send you a Double Breeding Cage fitted with everything complete for an immediate start. Total for Birds and Cage 12/3 for 6/6 birds, or 13/3 for 9/6 birds. But, I would strongly recommend you to have my Cage No. 100; it has sand drawers and is fitted with sanitary furniture throughout, and the price is only 6/-.

Songsters.

Thousands now on hand, specially selected, not haphazard birds, quality sent to each, according to price sent, and in all cases the best I can do, and what I cannot do in this line, no other man (or fictitious trader) can in the world. Norwich, Yorkshires, Mules (Goldfinch, Linnet, or Siskin). Note prices:—7/6, 6/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-.

FEEDING HENS.

3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; the latter suitable for all large varieties. Beware of hens offered as feeders that are only crect small Belgians or Germans; they are too small for feeding anything but the smallest varieties.

(For my Yorkshires see top next column.—W. Rudd.)

No other quantities sold. Diamond Sparrows, 12/6 pair; Cockatiels, 10/6 pair; Budgerigars, in genuine pairs, 6/6; Yellow Budgerigars, 8/6; Cape Canary, 7/6; splendid Whydah ,red-collared, 39/6; Slaty Finch, 20/6; Dominican Fiuch, 20/6; extra fine Superb, 20/6; ordinary Superb Tanager, 12/6; magnificent Double-front Amazon, 50/6; Blue-fronted Amazon, 30/6; extra fine Grey Parrot, 40/6; tame Blue Buff Macaw, 60/6; fine pair Rock Peplars or Black-tailed Parrakeets, 50/6; Mexican Jay, 30/6; Pekin Robin, 3/6; Bulbul, 10/6; fine Dyal Bird, 30/6; Violet-necked Lory, 60/6; twelve mixed African Finches, 12/6; White Javas, 8/6 pair; large White Lemon-crested Cockatoo, 20/6; Grenadier Bishop, full colour, 15/6; Cape Doves, handsome pets, 20/6 pair; Jamaica Doves, 20/6 pair; Cranes, Emus, Mandarin, Ducks. Largest collection of Foreign birds in Great Britain. I have no connection whatever with any West-end dealer trading under assumed names. Kindly note.

Now, please remember that during the last 18 years I have bred thousands of Budgerigars, and I publicly wager £50 that I have imported, manufactured, sold, and shipped more wired cokernut husk nests for Budgerigar breeding than any other man living? so have any bragging copyists, or so-called shippers sufficient British pluck to accept? If so, step forward; if not, don't brag, but stand down. For 18 years my husks have been unequalled. Don't be gulled by inexperienced shopkeepers; listen to what experts say:—"Cage Birds" says they are "far superior to the old husks." "Feathered World" says: "Undoubtedly, the new husks are very superior to the old." Again, "Exchange and Mart" says: "Those prepared by Mr. Harper are very superior to the old style, which often fall to pieces at the most critical time, with disastrous results for the nestlings. You had better order the improved form; even if it is a little dearer than the old-fashioned sort, it is cheaper in the long run." "Fur and Feather" tells its correspondents: "They have distinct advantages over the old sort." "Poultry" has said: "For Budgerigars we advise the use of the improved style of husks." Surely these are convincing testimonials.

Don't forget, you have the benefit of 18 years' practical breeding experience. I don't keep a shop; one quality only, the best. My "Improved Secure" husks are 4/6 dozen, smaller quantities 6d. each. Few Cockateel nest boxes 1/6 each. Illustrated pamphlet, entitled "Budgerigar Breeding," free on application.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers, and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A capital little show of Linnets was held at Sun Inn, Newhottle, recently. Entries numbered 16, and some very fine exhibits were staged. Excellent arrangements had been made, and were admirably carried out by Mr. D. Hann, who officiated as secretary. This well-known fancier gave 10s. towards entries. Result: 1st, Neisbitt; 2nd and 3rd, Fletcher. Mr. T. Thompson judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction.—Lintie.

MIDLAND COUNTIES YORKS. C.C.

Committee meeting held in Birmingham at the Crown Hotel, on April 22nd, Mr. Paddock in the chair. Nothwithstanding the inclement weather there was a full attendance. The committee are pleased to report that a great deal of interest is being shown by fanciers within the radius, and there is every likelihood of entire success rewarding their efforts. Some correspondence with Mr. Foster (Loughborough) was read, with regard to trophies for champion competition, and it was decided to add two additional classes for cinnamon marks in the event of a trophy being secured for this variety. The secretary also read a letter from Mr. Lawton (Crewe) with respect to affiliation with the Cage Bird Union. The meeting was unanimous in the opinion that no good end would be served by joining the Union. Mr. Bishop (Worcester) proposed, and it was carried, that a gold medal, or value to 30s., should be given in the champion section for first prize winner, one value 15s. for second, and bronze or silver medal for third prize winner. Messrs. Paddock (Kings Heath) and Bishop promised valuable specials to the novice section. On the proposition of Mr. Burke (Small Heath), it was resolved to finish the competition at a club show to be held in Birmingham in January, the date to be decided upon later. The club will give its patronage to six societies in the radius, who will give six classes according to the club rule for the Yorkshire variety. The members undertake to accept half prize money where entries are less than eight per class. Societies undertaking to give this classification are invited to apply to me at the earliest opportunity for the club patronage.—W. H. Uzzell, Hon. Sec., 76, Drayton-road, Kings Heath, Birmingham.

WOOD GREEN F. AND F.A.

Usual monthly meeting held at headquarters, April 13th, when a very interesting lecture on "Canaries" was given by Mr. Penney. Many questions were asked and a discussion followed which must have been an education for the beginner. Eight new members were elected and the Society is now making good progress. It has been decided to do away with the five mile radius and make it unlimited. We hope, thereby, to get many more members.—T. Callegari, Sec.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand) C.B.S.

Meeting held April 20th, Mr. Gibbons presiding. After the ordinary business the Chairman presented the cups and medals won during the past season. A splendid silver challenge cup subscribed for by the members was won by Mr. Wood for most points during night and members' shows. The medals given for most points during same period were won in the open section as follows: 1, Pole; 2, Gibbons; 3, Hulse. Novice section: 1, Wood, medal and cup, medal for most points in novice section, cup for most points scored in the three sections; 2, Kilsby; 3, Mothersole; 4, Lea. Amateur section: 1, Lea; 2, Holder; 3, Geary. Another silver challenge cup will be given for best young bird bred and exhibited by a member at open show, to be won three times before becoming the property of the exhibitor. Next meeting, lecture by Mr. J. Needham.—G. Draper, Sec.

CLAPHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A

Washing competition of British birds, held at Avondale Hotel, on April 20th, Mr. Wise kindly lending his electric drying cage and sending his electricians, Messrs. Biggs and Rennie, to fit up same. All being ready, Mr. Dewhurst, having superintended the heat required, soon had it between 90 and 100 degrees. The competing members having got all ready, the secretary called "time." As each bird was washed, it was at once put into the cage, and all were interested as they watched the birds dry. This process itself proved in every way a great success. Mr C. T. Maxwell judged the birds, and gave the following awards: 1, S. A. Sandy, Bullfinch, case of silver-mounted pipes; 2, C. Cutting, Siskin, silver-mounted cigar case; 3, F. Clark, Chaffinch, money prize; 4, A. C. Askew, Greenfinch, money prize; 5, A. Coe, Greenfinch, money prize; 6, Priest, brown Linnet, money prize. The Secretary was very pleased, as on this occasion some 65 members and friends attended. Mr. Yeoman, our vice-chairman, in a few well-chosen words, thanked the judge, and said he also wished to convey the thanks of members to Mr. Wise (although he was absent, having gone up the Rhine) and Mr. Dewhurst for his attention to the drying, and Messrs. Biggs and Rennie for working so satisfactorily. An enjoyable evening was then brought to a close.—A. C. Askew, Secretary.

CINNAMON-MARKED YORKS. C.C. ANNUAL MEETING.

Annual general meeting held April 17th, at the Market Tavern Hotel, Bradford. There was a good attendance, many prominent exhibitors being present, though a few familiar faces were missed. The chair was occupied by the retiring president, Mr. W. Gledhill (Huddersfield). The secretary's report was considered very satisfactory. There was a slight increase in membership, 162 having paid as compared with 156 in 1907-8, and 138 in 1906-7. An experiment had been tried in introducing ticked classes, but this had proved a failure, as at the three shows where the classes were provided, an average of only eight 5s. 6d. entries was received, and a loss of £2 1s. 6d. was incurred, half of which was borne by the club. At the ten shows where our patronage was given, the other four classes ("cinnamon unevenly marked") proved most successful, 567 birds being shown, or an average of over 14 per class. Queensbury received the highest entry, with 90 in the four classes, and the lowest entry totalled 44. The balance-sheet showed that the year commenced with a balance in hand of 18s. 8½d. The subscriptions for 162 members amounted to £12 3s. Other subscriptions realised £1 11s. 6d. Trade advertisements and breeders' cards in year books realised £1 10s., and the profit on whist drive was 13s. 10d. A sum of £4 6s. 6d. was received as contributions to special' fund, the following being the subscribers:—Messrs. Ogden Bros., T. Bentley, A. Hirst, A. Cooper, J. Greaves, H. Simonett, W. Blakey, W. Crabtree, J. Wilcock, W. Richmond, W. Gledhill, T. Fortman, H. H. Towers, R. Sutcliffe and Son, and J. W. Wharton. Other items brought the total receipts up to £22 6s 0½d. The expenditure included a grant to the secretary for 1907-8 of £1 10s. for services rendered. The cash specials given at patronage shows for best fourth prize winners amount to £2 5s., and £1 10s. was won by novices in cash. The amount expended on trophies, etc., was £11 7s. The year books (with rules), postages, stationery, etc., cost £4 11s. 11d., and the loss on ticked classes (half) £1 0s. 9d. This left a balance in hand of 1s. 4½d., but as a number of subscriptions have been since received, we can congratulate ourselves on being in as good a position as in other years. The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, Mr. W. Richmond (Rodley); vice-president, Mr. J. Hartley (Bingley); trustees, Messrs. R. Sutcliffe and W. Gledhill; hon. auditors, Messrs. S. Dean and H. Simonett; committee, Messrs. W. Crahtree, J. Wilcock, F. Allan, T. Ogden, H. J. Chittenden, F. Hammond, A. Cooper, T. Bentley, W. H. Shackleton, F. Armstrong, W. Hall, J. W. Wharton, J. Child, A. Haigh, and E. B. Denton. Messrs. R. Garnett and H. H. Towers, 8, Colne-road, Glusburn, Crosshills, near Keighley, were appointed joint hon. secretaries and treasurers, and the members were highly pleased to hear that Mr. Garnett hoped to be back in harness once more before next show season. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the chairman and the retiring officers, on the motion of Mr. Allan, seconded by Mr. Clark; and Mr. Richmond, the new president, then took charge of the meeting. A very interesting discussion took place with regard to the classification, in which the following took part:—Messrs. Hirst, Ogden, Garnett, Halliday, Blakey, Chittenden, Hartley, Shackleton, Dean, Hammond, Towers, etc., the points of the discussion being whether the cinnamon-ticked bird and the even-marked should be included. Finally, it was decided that all should be taken in, the classification to read "cinnamon-ticked or variegated" in Yellow cock, Buff cock, Yellow hen, and Buff hen classes.

It was decided that should any society apply for our patronage for First Feather shows, same should be granted, subject to the rules, and the following specials be offered:—2s. 6d. for best 4th prize bird; 2s. 6d. for best v.h.c. bird; 2s. 6d. given by Society holding show; and 2s. 6d. given by the club for most points gained by a novice, no member to win this special more than once during the season; two classes to be provided, one each for Yellows and Buffs. It is desired that applications should be forwarded as early as possible. The question of providing separate novice classes has been "in the air" for a considerable time, and it was decided that any society applying for our patronage should provide two open novice classes, one for cocks and one for hens, along with the four classes mentioned previously, a letter suggesting this having been received from a member. Half the loss (if any) on these novice classes is to be borne by the club. A separate competition will be provided for these classes, the three highest members to be promoted to the open competition next year. It was decided that in addition to the trophy and prizes to be offered, 2s. 6d. be given for most points at each show for 4th prize birds in open classes, and the same in novice classes. It was decided that our patronage be given to 12 shows, with separate judges, the allotting of same and the sharing out of the competitions to be left in the hands of the committee. Various suggestions were made to be considered at the next committee meeting. A suggestion to increase the subscription was defeated, it being thought that the amount now paid, 1s. 6d., would be sufficient, and at the same time more popular. The old custom of counting points by three starred birds was abolished, a new rule being passed that the three highest birds should count. This completed the proceedings, which were very lengthy and animated. Some of the changes may not appeal to some of the old members; but it is hoped that all will fall into line, and help to make the coming season one of the most successful in the history of the club. The novices have now a better chance to show Cinnamon Marks than ever, and it is hoped they will rally round, and show their appreciation by becoming members at once. We have had a good send-off, the following contributions to the specials fund being already received or promised:—Mr. A. Cooper, £1 1s.; Messrs. Ogden, 10s. 6d.; Mr. W. H. Shackleton, 10s. 6d.; Mr. W. Richmond, 10s. 6d.; Mr. W. Crabtree, 5s.; Mr. Lingard (per Mr. Chittenden), 2s. 6d.; Messrs. P. Drake and Sons, 7s. 6d. Any of the committee will be pleased to receive membership fees, or send direct to the secretaries. Any change of address should be notified so that same can be included in the year book.—H. H. Towers, Joint Hon. Secretary.

TREDEGAR AND DIST. F. & F.S.

General meeting held at King's Head Hotel, on April 21st, when there was a large attendance. Unfortunately, the chairman, Mr. J. H. Davies, was unable to attend; his place was taken by the vice-chairman, Mr. T. James. The annual show was fixed for January 6th. The open show in January last was, by fanciers and Press alike, deemed a great success. The entries had increased by 300 over the number of the last year, but unfortunately the audited balance-sheet showed a slight deficit. On the working of both the radius and open shows, the society have wiped out their debt within a few shillings. This is very satisfactory progress. It was also decided to hold monthly members' shows every first Thursday in each month during the current year. Several new members were enrolled. The society's membership is open to a radius of five miles. The secretary will be pleased to receive intending members' names for nomination.—J. W. Griffiths, Sec.

LEYTON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Members' monthly meeting held at headquarters April 5th. Mr. F. Williamson in the chair. A strong muster of members and friends turned up to hear Mr. C. H. Cooper's lecture, "The Breeding Cage I Use." Mr. Cooper favours a box pattern cage 2 ft. long, 16 in. high, and 11 in. deep, on the back of which he puts a slot, and a corresponding one on the front crossbar, into which he drops a piece of wood with a groove to come up level with the crossbar, and into which he can pass a slide to form a nursery cage at one end 9 in. long, thus doing away with the usual hand-on nursery cage, and at the same time allowing the young to be properly fed and avoiding plucking. He next showed the perch (protected by Mr. Cooper), which are so made as to drop in between two of the wires and held there by means of a cast head, which keeps it ¼-in. off the back of the cage, thus, as the lecturer explained, reducing the red mite's chances of getting at the roosting bird. Mr. Cooper favours a square perch. He next showed his seed hopper (also protected by him), whereby it is impossible for a bird to waste any seed. For the nest he uses the ordinary earthenware pan, hung on the back far enough away so that the hen can sit with her tail towards the back, and not he made uncomfortable by having her tail up against the back of the cage. Mr. Cooper went on to say that he, in common with most fanciers, used to get a lot of dead young in the shells, which led him to think that it was due to a lack of moisture getting to the egg. He showed how he overcomes this He hangs a tin on the bracket under the nest pan, and half fills it with water, so that the heat from the sitting hen draws up the moisture. He assured his audience that since using this he had not had nearly so many dead young ones in the shells. In conclusion, Mr. Cooper said that if anyone would like to ask any questions he would answer them to the best of his ability. A warm discussion followed as to the cause of the dead in shells. Mr. Harrison maintained that it was due to east winds, that being his experience with chickens. Mr. Mallett did not think it was due to any lack of moisture, and said that he once knew of a hen which laid and hatched her brood at the bottom of a shaft where there were several inches of soot, and thought we must look further for the cause. He thought it was weakness of the young. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Cooper for his instructive lecture brought a most pleasant and interesting evening to a close.—J. A. Bartlett.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting at headquarters on March 22nd, with Mr. A. W. Curtis in the chair. Messrs. C. G. Rolls (Hampstead), W. Cook (Hyde Park-gardens), and W. Cottey (Westminster) were nominated for membership. The secretary was instructed to convey to Mr. Crisp an expression of condolence upon his indisposition. The result of the Cage Bird Staging Competition was as follows:—Amateur: Mrs. Page, W. Page, and G. Menhenett, 11 points; Novice: Mr. R. Stevens, 15 points. Upon a draw taking place, Mr. G. Menhenett was declared the winner in the amateur section. Nineteen members took part, scoring 204 points out of a possible 399, averaging 10.73 points per member. Silver medals were presented to the winners. The prize-money and specials won at the British and Foreign Bird Show were paid, Miss Shephard kindly returning her prize-money to the funds. The special prize, No. 18, resulting in a tie between Mrs. Page and Messrs. Thorpe and Botting, a draw took place, Mr. Thorpe being declared the winner. A vote of thanks was accorded the stewards. The secretary announced that Mr. Trower had promised to replace the handsome solid silver cup just won outright in the British Softbill section. A very hearty vote of thanks was accorded him, and supported by several members. For judging the British and Foreign Bird Show Mr. C. Prior was heartily thanked. Mr. H. Robbins generously presented to the association a Norwich Plainhead to help clear off the debt on the Pair Show, and for this was warmly thanked. The report of the London Federation (as sent by the delegate) was adopted as read. The chairman then introduced Mr. G. Wheller, to give his lecture entitled "Railway Transit." An enthusiastic vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Wheller for his unusually interesting and instructive discourse.—V. WYNN, Hon. Sec.

LONDON FEDERATION OF C.B.S.

Meeting of the council of the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies, held at "The Feathers," Great Chapel-street, on April 23rd. Present: Messrs. H. E. Tringham (in the chair), F. W. Thorpe, J. Dewhurst, W. H. Mugford, R. L. Crisp, A. C. Burn, J. T. Hammond, and H. W. Cook (Poplar and Dist. C.B.S.), H. Smith (Wimbledon and Dist. C.B.S.), R. J. Pretty (London and Counties O.S.), J. C. Birch (Queen's Park and Dist. C.B.A.), W. Clark, C. H. Cooper, and C. R. Carr (Leyton and Dist. C.B.A.), W. C. Penton and R. P. Harper (North London C.B.A.), A. W. Curtis (City and Suburban A.C.B.), J. Turner and H. Churchyard (West London F.A.), F. Boxall and T. Miller (London C.B.A.), A. Cunningham (Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S.), W. Pawley (Greenwich and Deptford C.B.S.), E. Meades (Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S.), F. Easterling (Battersea and Dist. C.B.A.), and P. Adamthwaite, hon. sec.

Correspondence.

A letter was read from the sec. of one of the affiliated societies, pointing out that certain members, about eight or nine in number, had defaulted in the matter of the payment of their subscriptions, and that although they had each been written to three times (a stamped envelope being enclosed on the last occasion), no notice had been taken of the society's communications. The council decided to reply to the letter, stating that the matter will be considered at the next meeting, and also asking the secretary of the society in question to write to the defaulting members informing them of the fact, at the same time giving them the opportunity of attending to offer any explanation they might have to give, before the council came to any decision.

An Insurance Scheme.

The most important business of the meeting was the consideration of the draft scheme of insurance drawn up by the sub-committee appointed. The scheme having been read over by the chairman, the council proceeded to consider the items seriatim. It was decided that insurance under the scheme of the Federation should cover (1) Loss of birds in transit (throughout the United Kingdom), whether to or from shows, or sent on, or returned from being sent on approval; (2) Loss by death or theft at shows, fire excepted; and (3) Loss by fire on owner's premises, but this should not apply to loss by fire due to the use of any heating or lighting apparatus in the bird-room. For the purposes of insurance it was proposed to issue books containing six perforated insurance certificates, with counterfoils, at the cost of one shilling per book, each certificate to cover insurance to the amount of £1, the members being able to purchase any number of books. Mr. Mugford moved an amendment, which was seconded by Mr. Miller, to the effect that the books be issued at 1s. 6d. Mr. Easterling said he thought they would do far more good by putting the insurance fee at one penny per pound, so that if a member wished to insure a bird for £1 he should pay one penny; if for £2, twopence; and so on. Mr. Burn hoped the council would adopt the original proposal. Mr. Crisp pointed out that in the event of the council making a profit on the scheme, the whole of the Fancy of London would benefit by it; they should remember that when comparing the proposed scheme with the railway companies' schemes, as when the companies made a profit it was they alone who reaped the benefit. (Laughter.) Mr. Curtis stated that, of course, the Federation would be offering far greater privileges than the railway companies. The railways did not cover fire in the bird-room, which was a great consideration; and he thought that the proposal to charge one shilling was as low a premium as they could afford for the first year, at any rate. (Hear, hear.) The amendment was lost, and another one proposed by Mr. Easterling, and seconded by Mr. Crisp, "That the cost of the books be one shilling and a penny," was carried nem. con. It was agreed that the time and date of despatch, together with the destination to which birds are being sent (station only, or show), and a declaration to the effect that the birds sent are, to the best of the sender's belief, in perfect health, should be accurately stated on each certificate. Further, "that certificates to the required amount of insurance (but not more than five in the case of a single bird) must be filled in as stated above, and sent to the secretary of the Federation before, or at the time of the despatch of the birds, failing which no claim will be entertained; further, the certificate or certificates so used will only apply to the railway journey or show definitely stated thereon."

It was agreed "that no claim will be entertained in the case of birds delivered by rail arriving ill or dead unless this is pointed out to the railway official at the time of delivery, and the way-bill signed accordingly, except in the case of arrival at shows, when the show secretary's notification will be deemed sufficient." With regard to the death of insured birds, it was agreed "That in the event of the death of a bird or birds which has or have been insured to the extent of £1 or over, it, or they, should be sent by the owner, or on his instructions, to the pathologist appointed by the council for a post-mortem examination, the expenses of which shall be defrayed by the Federation." The scheme decided on further provides that the Federation will not hold itself liable for a larger amount than £5 in the case of any single bird. Where a number of birds are sent either for a railway journey or a show, compensation in the event of loss will only be paid on an averaged amount of the insurance. It was agreed that in the case of loss by fire any book purchased, so long as it remains intact, will cover such loss to the extent of £10; but should a book be partly used at the time of fire, the remaining certificates should cover loss to the extent of £1 per leaf. It was still further agreed "that the liability of the Federation from all causes should not exceed £12 to any one member during any one year." Firms, it was decided, "shall be considered to be one person for the purposes of insurance, except in the case of fire insurance, where separate studs are kept; each member of such firm to participate in the benefits of the scheme should be separately insured.

The three following propositions were, after some discussion, agreed to:—"That the book of certificates should cover insurance for the year only in which they are insured"; "That members of the Federation residing outside the area of the London district will be entitled to participate in the benefits of the scheme"; and "That this scheme of insurance will only apply to Canaries and cage-moulted British Hardbills, and is not intended to cover British Softbills, except under fire, when they may be so insured." Mr. Dewhurst caused some amusement by asking who was going to decide whether or not certain birds (the Buntings, for instance) were Hardbills.

On the proposition of Mr. Easterling, seconded by Mr. Miller, and supported by Mr. Dewhurst, it was decided to ask Mr. Alfred Grey, M.R.C.V.S., to undertake the post of pathologist to the Federation.

Mr. R. P. Harper stated that he had been in communication with the General Insurance Company, Ltd., and that the company were prepared to grant, in return for a full-page advertisement in the rule book, an insurance policy for £100, to be paid in the event of the death of any Federation member through an accident on a railway journey. It was decided to accept the terms.

On the motion of Mr. Turner, seconded by Mr. Cunningham, it was decided that the sub-committee which had drawn up the scheme be appointed permanently for one year to deal with any question arising in connection with the working of the scheme. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded a long and heavy meeting.

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

A lecture on Yorkshires was given by Mr. Phillip Mason, of Shipley, on April 24th. Mr. Mason, who was given a hearty reception, said: I will give you my experience, as far as I can, on the Yorkshire. My advice, to novices especially, is to get as big a cock bird as possible—a good, straight one, 6¾ or 7 inches long, if you can, with a nice round head, and eyes in the centre. The shoulders should be square, but the back must be round, as flat-backed birds are of no use to a breeder. See that it has a pair of good legs, with plenty of daylight between them. Never mind if it is a bit coarse in feather; you can remedy that on the hen side. This, to my mind, is an ideal stock bird. Now for the hen. You must get a bird of good breed, and as tight in feather as possible. Then I think you will breed something worth looking at. At the close of the lecture many questions were put to Mr. Mason, which were answered by him in a manner that showed he was thoroughly acquainted with the subject. Mr. Lugg moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Mason for the way in which he had answered the questions put to him, and Mr. Wharton seconded. Mr. Mason suitably replied, and was heartily applauded, which brought a splendid meeting to a close.—F. PACKER, Assist-Sec.

SCOTTISH NORWICH P.C.

Committee meeting held in Good Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram-street, Glasgow, on April 24th, Mr. Young, president, in the chair, others present being Messrs. R. B. Jarvie, A. McFarlane, J. McLay, J. Winter, and the secretary. The following were appointed vice-presidents:—Messrs. J. Hector (Aberdeen), W. Aitchison (Edinburgh), A. G. Cameron (Kelso), R. B. Jarvie (Glasgow), and W. Watson (Kilmarnock). Letters were read from the Aberdeen Society, inviting the club to hold the club show in conjunction with their show on December 17th and 18th. It was decided to hold the club show at Aberdeen on the dates mentioned, six classes to be provided for unflighted birds, viz., clear or ticked Yellow cock, ditto Buff, clear or ticked Yellow hen, ditto Buff, varicgated Yellow cock or hen, ditto Buff; all birds to have been bred by the exhibitor. The undernoted gentlemen were admitted to membership: Messrs. W. Rae and J. Bryson (Aberdeen), W. Grewar and J. Bowman (Forfar), and W. J. Buist (Edinburgh), after which the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman. Members are reminded that subscriptions for 1909 are now due, and should be paid as early as possible. They are also requested not to forget the special prize fund, by means of which the committee are enabled to meet the expenses in connection with club, show, and international contest, the latter to take place in England this year. Were each member to give but 1s., a handsome list of specials could be provided for the club show, which, it is hoped, will prove a great success. All particulars re membership may be had from me.—J. BROWN, Sec., 97, Petershill-road, Glasgow.

Only names and addresses written on one of these forms will be allowed to count.

A Few Hints to Intending Competitors.

1.—Always keep a copy of "C.B." in your pocket, and ask all your acquaintances who keep pet cage-birds of any kind: "Have you seen CAGE BIRDS?" If they say: "No," ask them, as a favour to you, to look through the copy in your possession, and then get them to write their full names and addresses in one of the spaces between the "rungs" of your ladder.

2.—Ascertain the names and addresses of all cage-bird keepers in your vicinity; then send each one in turn your copy of CAGE BIRDS, with your compliments, and ask them to attach their signature for their own benefit as well as yours.

3.—You can, if you choose, share the post-cards received with the persons signing.

4.—Take your CAGE BIRDS to any shows, meetings, etc., which may be held in your neighbourhood, and there find out anyone whose name and address can be useful to you.

5.—If you are a cyclist take a run round the neighbourhood with your copy of "C.B.," and look up all the keepers of pet birds.

6.—It is not necessary for the persons signing to be exhibitors of birds, or even breeders, but they must be persons who keep cage-birds — it is our object to endeavour to stimulate the interest of all who keep pet birds, and provide them with a fuller insight into the hobby, so that they may take it up in a wider form.

KING'S HEATH, MOSELEY & DIS. F.S.

Annual Meeting.

General meeting, held at Red Lion Hotel, King's Heath, on April 7th. Unfortuuately, the chairman, the deputy-chairman, and the hon. treasurer were unable to be present. There was much regret at the resignation of W. Dax, Esq., the esteemed president (for the past four years); although he kindly consented to be elected a vice-president, and to keep in touch with his old comrades. F. J. Green, Esq., was elected president, he being one of the oldest members, and a keen supporter. The society may be congratulated upon retaining the services of Mr. A. Baker, of Langshan fame, their very popular and much esteemed chairman of committee; while Mr. A. Paddock, hon. treasurer, and Mr. H. E. Patterson assistant secretary—two experienced fanciers—will remain in office. A strong committee of local fanciers was elected. Mr. H. E. Cooper, hon. secretary for the past year, resigned in favour of Mr. C. H. Bullows, a fancier of much energy. Votes of thanks were passed to the retiring president, the hon. auctioneer, the hon. solicitors, Mr. J. H. Baker, the hon. treasurer, Mr. A. Baker, chairman of committee, and Mr. G. Butler, chairman on the present happy occasion, who proposed a very hearty vote of thanks to Mr. H. J. Cooper, the retiring hon. secretary, and to Mr. Patterson, assistant secretary. In replying to this, Mr. H. G. Cooper called the attention of the meeting to the fact that although there were about a score of members who stuck to their guns and were ever ready, there were, unfortunately, many who appeared to take but very little interest in the society's doings. The members' young stock show was successful, but the support at the four table shows for the beautiful Punch Bowl was very limited, although exceedingly keen. The open show, held in January, was by fanciers and Press alike deemed a great success, but unfortunately the balance was a heavy one on the reverse side; notwithstanding which, all prize money was paid within twenty-one days and so also were all amounts connected therewith. It was decided to hold the members' show for the current year on November 13th, the committee being empowered to add such popular open classes as they may consider advisable. This society is fortunately backed up by some good fanciers, and is still going strong. The radius is ten miles from King's Heath Parish Church, and now is the time to join. — H. J. Cooper, ex. Hon. Sec.

Lecture by Mr. Melhuish.

General meeting held at Maskell's Restaurant, Queen-street, on April 15th, when there was a good number of members present. Mr. F. D. Jones presided. A prize drawing took place, Mr. E. J. Banks winning 1st prize (No. 106), and Mr. Sivill 2nd (No. 74). Mr. Melhuish's lecture was the next item on the agenda, and that gentleman expressed himself in a very fluent manner, proving to be an experienced master of the subject, which referred to operations leading up to and following the pairing of the birds. He commenced by saying that he liked to give the hens plenty of flight before pairing. He also fed on Canary seed and rape, proportions of three to one respectively, citing the authority of Mr. Wallace in recommending this diet, and stating that it acted, as it were, in the sense of bread and meat. He thought that feeding on Canary seed alone caused a starchy fat to accumulate on the birds, and was often the cause of egg-binding. The latter part of January, or the middle of February, he commenced giving a little mixture and egg-food. Here the lecturer impressed upon all the necessity of having the hens in good condition before pairing. In February he gave a little Parrish's Chemical Food or cod liver oil in the egg-food, and for birds that were in a backward condition, a little fresh cream, the latter also acting as a preventative of egg-binding. When the young were hatched, he said, he never stripped the shell off the egg, but ground all together, and when they were about three or four days old, crushed some hemp for them. If the hens should show any signs of lagging, he recommended putting a few senna leaves in water to soak over night, and then giving the hen the fluid to drink next day. He also advised giving milk-sop for this trouble.

The young, he said, should be separated when they were from 15 to 18 days old, when he ceased giving hemp, as he believed it to be the cause of a good many of their troubles. If the young should seem to go thick he stopped all seed and egg-food and gave milk-sop only. From this period he gradually weaned them off egg-food until they fell into moult, when he again increased the supply. He went on to say that if the hens suffered from nesting diarrhœa he gave Tibb's Quinella, or prepared chalk, in the egg-food; or another very good remedy was brandy or tincture of gentian in the drinking water.

At this juncture several questions were asked by the members, principally affecting individual experiences, and also some of a general nature; and these were all answered in a very able manner. One rather out-of-the-ordinary question was asked by Mr. E. James, and that was whether any of the members ever fed Canaries on Indian meal, believing himself that it was a very good thing, citing, for the purpose of his argument, the fact that it produced a gloss on Pigeons and poultry when they were fed on this commodity; why should it not, therefore, he asked, carry with it the same effect if given to Canaries? Another amusing remark was the suggestion to run a hen around the room if it was suffering from egg-binding, this, in many instances, having been proved to cause the egg to come away. The lecturer then brought his remarks to a close, and a very hearty vote of thanks was proposed to him for the interesting address he had given.—W. S. Negus, secretary.

QUEEN'S PARK AND DIST. C.B.C.

At the last meeting, after the ordinary business (which included the passing of the quarterly balance-sheet, showing the society still in a flourishing condition, with a cash balance of £11 in hand), Mr. J. Robson gave his promised lecture on "How to Become a Successful Exhibitor." A good muster of members and visitors enjoyed a pleasant and instructive evening It must be very gratifying to any lecturer to see the keen interest taken in what he has to say, the attention given to every detail, with the occasional taking of a note of something that may be useful at a later date. A number of questions were put, and answered, which brought out some useful information. A hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, to which he suitably responded, brought a pleasant evening to a close.—J. C. Birch, Hon. Secretary.

THE SHOWS.

ATTERCLIFFE & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual table show for British birds held on April 8th, at Horse and Jockey Hotel. Mr. W. Bagnall judged and favoured us with a critique on the birds. Our members kept him very busy answering questions, and we ended a very pleasant evening by passing a hearty vote of thanks to the judge.

PAIRS FOR MULING: 1, Welbon; 2, Havenhand; 3, Richards; vhc, J. J. Grainger; hc, W. Grainger. GREENFINCH, ETC.: 1, Watson; 2, Justice; 3, Dewich; vhc, F. Johnson; hc, Justice; c, Laywood. A.O.S. BRIT.: 1, vhc, Richards; 2, 3, Watson; hc, B. Welbon; c, H. Justice.—W. Richinson, Sec.

LINCOLN.

A nice little lot of cage birds put in their appearance at the Drill Hall, Lincoln, on April 24th at the show of the Lincoln Excelsior R. and C.S. Not only was the entry good, but the quality was splendid, and the two classes attracted much attention from the large crowd of visitors. Mr. S. Dickinson, the energetic secretary, and his committee, had the arrangements well in hand, and their twentieth show passed off without a hitch. Mr. C. A. House judged.

CAN. (12): 1, Townsend, wing ticked buff Nor., splendid colour and quality, grand shaped body, staged to perfection; 2, 3, Axe, very stout varieg. buff, and tkd.-headed yell. Nor., rare shape and style, nice colour and quality; 4, Bescohy and Hunt, varieg. yell. Yorks., nice, smart bird, neat shape, well feathered; rcs, Lawson; vhc, Johnson; hc, Heath; c, Noblo. BRIT. (19): 1, res, Axe, well-known Goldfinch and Yellow Bunting, two lovely exhibits, rare colour, feather, and markings, shown in nice fettle; 2, vhc, hc, Hawkins, handsome Chaffinch, wonderfully rich in colour, nicely marked, in grand feather; 3, Heath, another smart Goldie, rich colour, nice feather, good back and chest; extra 3, vhc, Bell, lovely Bullfinch and Greenfinch, two charming birds, rare colour, shape, and feather, beautifully shown; 4, Bescoby and Hunt, grandly spangled, tight feathered, rich coloured Bramble, very steady; c, Ashby.

GLASGOW AND WEST OF SCOTLAND N.M.B. AND F.B.C.

British bird show held in April. The judges were Messrs. D. Graham and F. Bowman. Mr. Graham judged the Greenfinches and Foreign Goldfinches, and Mr. Bowman the other two classes. There was a good turn-out of members and visitors, and a great amount of interest was shown in the birds. The special nights for shows only have proved an undoubted success, and many points have been picked up by the younger members having plenty of time to inspect the birds and discuss their merits.

BRIT, GOLDFINCH (11): 1, vhc, Raine; 2, Jarvie; 3, c, Sanderson; 4, Jamieson; hc, Taylor. The birds in this class were very good examples, particularly 1st, which has a fine head, brilliant blaze, and well-marked body. The others were good, but not quite so rich in colour. FOR. GOLDFINCH (5): 1, 4, vhc, Jarvie; 2, Sanderson; 3, Taylor. We could not see much to choose between here; the birds varied in type somewhat, but all of them were fine specimens, the most marked differences being in the way the birds were staged. GREENFINCH (7): 1, 2, hc, Craig; 3, Jamieson; 4, Jarvie; vhc, Gronbech; c, Galbraith. Mr. Craig's team were very fine, but the others did not seem what might have been expected. SISKIN (9): 1, Erskine; 2, 4, Craig; 3, Jarvie; vhc, Henderson; hc, Taylor; c, Raine. This class contained some very fine birds, much above the average, and the judge had some difficulty in placing the tickets.—R. A. Brown, Sec.

NORTHERN B.B.M. AND F.B.C.

Monthly meeting held April 21st in Lockhart's Cafe, 65, Grainger-street, Newcastle. Correspondence from various societies re patronage of our club was read, and it was agreed to leave same over for further applications. A paper on the Goldfinch, by J. Kershaw (Llanrwst) was then read, and it was appreciated and enjoyed by all. It was decided to hold a table show at next meeting, four classes to be provided, viz., Siskin-Redpoll or Twite, Linnet, Greenfinch, A.O. Species. Mr. T. Robson judge. Table show resulted as follows:—

GOLDFINCH, ETC.: 1, Bertram and Storey, Goldie, nice Finch; 2, G. Taylor, Bullie, grand size, good cap and colour; 3, Maddison, Goldie, fine size, nice face and colours. LINNET: 1, 2, Maddison, two grand Linnets, staged to perfection, A1 colour and markings; 3, Bertram and Storey, good Finch. A.O.S.: 1, Irving, Bramble, grand size and colour, in lovely condition; 2, Bertram and Storey, Reed Bunting, nice exhibit; 3, G. Taylor, Chaffinch, excellent markings, medium size. Judge, Mr. J. R. Slack.—J. Bertram, Sec.

SIX BELLS (Abertillery) F.S.

Show held Easter Tuesday, in the long room of the Cwm Hotel. Entries in the cage bird section were not very numerous, although some good specimens were staged, especially in the Norwich and A.S. Finch classes. The officials, one and all, worked well, and cards were up promptly, everything passing off without a hitch. The secretary, Mr. W. J. Edwards, had all arrangements well in hand, and Mr. J. R. Leech judged the cage birds, giving every satisfaction.

NOR. (5): 1, spl, 3, vhc, Hill, well known winner, buff, gem, nice type and formation; 3rd, nice bird; 2, 4, Carter, ran close to winner, sound colour, nice carriage, on large side. YORKS. (2): 1, 2, Parfitt, 1st, nice type, carries well, good head and neck, well feathered; 2nd, nice bird all through. FINCH (8): 1, Parfitt, well shown, well marked and steady, in good condition; 2, 3, Small, 2nd ran winner close, nicely-marked, fine type; 3rd, nice bird. MULE (3): 3, Small, very fine bird; 4, Button; vhc, Thomas. BRIT. (3): 2, 3, Hill, 2nd nice little bird; 3rd, some preferred to winner, nicely marked, in good condition; 4, Thomas, Yellow Bunting, tight feathered, in fine condition. LINNET (1): 1, Small, well shown, nicely marked, in good condition, Tredegar winner.

Drumming of the Snipe.

The peculiar noise called drumming made by the Snipe when on the wing, still remains a matter of doubt as to how it is produced, but the closest observers and the best authorities appear to agree that the sound is not a voice production, but is produced by either vibration of the wings or tail, or possibly by the feathers of both.

BRITISH BIRDS

FOR

Cages, Aviaries, and Exhibition.

BY

SUMNER W. BIRCHLEY, N.B.B. & M.C., L.P.O.S., &c., &c.

At least half a century has passed since a work dealing so thoroughly with the Caging and Exhibiting of our Countryside Birds has been written, and it is to fill that want that this work has been compiled, as the methods that have been discovered of late years for the keeping of our rarer birds in that lovely bloom and health that we all as lovers of these beautiful forms of life desire to see, have changed to such an extent that, whereas in the time of Seebohm and Bechstein they were more or less fed on ox-heart, bread, and milk, etc., they are now provided with almost identical food to that supplied by Nature.

In this work you have almost a miniature encyclopædia on Bird-keeping, and the information given is second to none.

At a great expense life-like photographs have been taken of some of the most prominent winners during the past Show season. These will form part of the illustrations and should prove a life-like guide for the amateur to work by; the remainder are most beautiful examples of draughtsman's art.

The work is set out in a most compact manner, each bird being dealt with under these separate headings, i.e., Description of Parent Birds; Attractive Qualities; Habitation; Nest and Eggs—where, when, and how to find them; Catching; Steadying and Mating Off; Hand Rearing; Exhibiting and Exhibition Points. Foods are separately dealt with. The various Diseases and Ailments are most carefully considered. Cages of all descriptions, set out in plan, and Aviaries to suit all classes, are drawn in detail.

My Favourite Bird: - - - - The Goldfinch.

By W. PAGE.

The Paper awarded First Prize in the City and Suburban A.C.B's last Essay Competition.

In making my choice of a subject,I have decided to deal with only one species in this paper, as I am of opinion it will be far more interesting to fix on one, and to give an account of same, than to mention all I have kept. In regard to British birds, I must admit I have the warmest corner for our perky, sprightly, and, shall I say, most attractive of Finches, the Goldfinch. Others may not agree with my choice, still, I venture to say that we, in fact, all bird lovers, have a preference for a particular species. No matter what number of species he may keep, there is, I think, a certain one which a bird-lover inclines to; and this being so, he can and does pay more attention to the particular habits of the bird he has preference for than the others. By this I do not mean to infer that the others do not receive due care; far from it. But anyone with the slightest knowledge of birds, and the exhibiting of same, knows that almost all our judges have a preference for a certain species. If they are Canary judges, they have their favourite variety, and if British bird judges, their preference is for a certain species, which preference it is well for exhibitors to study when aspiring to that "coveted special" for best bird.

I think all will admit that the Goldfinch has found more favour on the show bench than any other British bird, as all shows, no matter how small, cater for him, which makes him more popular than if he had to compete in the "any other species" class, or was grouped with other Finches. His beautiful plumage, sweet song, and perky ways, too, I contend make him our most popular British bird.

The Exhibition Goldfinch Described.

Now, to take an exhibition specimen. We all know, or think we know, a good one when we see it, although not many persons agree on all points, not even our judges. Still, the principal points one aims at gaining in his Finches are, first, a good face, or blaze, as it is termed, which for preference should be well down, extending beyond the eye, square cut at base, and, to top all, should be a rich, clear colour. The black round the base of beak should be distinct, but fine, so as not to make the face too dark. The back, chest and flanks should be of a rich nut brown, having well defined buttons and good coloured bars. The black on the skull and the nape of neck must be a jet black, broad, and well defined, and free from specks of white and crimson, which one will frequently meet with. All the above-named colours should be well-balanced and intense, with a slight tinge of brown on what should be otherwise clear white cheeks, to keep him from all suspicion of being of any other nationality than British. For preference, the exhibition Goldie should be of the cobby (or Norwich) type. Some good specimens of the upstanding birds do win at times; but that in my opinion is when there is not one of the cobby ones equal in other points to put him down, as I think all will admit the cobby ones are the ideal shape for our Finches.

Procuring and Feeding the Finches.

I consider the best time to procure the Finches is in October, as then, if you get clean-moulted birds, you are almost sure of their being early ones, which is one of the greatest advantages in moulting Goldfinches; the late ones are rarely sufficiently up in colour until half the season's shows are over, and I must admit that I prefer moulted specimens to choose from to Greypates, as then, of course, one has size and colour to guide him, whereas with Greypates one never knows how they may fare until they have moulted off, and then in the majority of cases faults from an exhibition point of view generally crop up. We know, or are told, that some of the best birds have been cage-moulted from Greypates, but I myself prefer to choose from clean moulted specimens.

When freshly caught birds are procured, the best plan is to put them in a flight cage with one or two old birds (I keep a cage-moulted steady hen Goldfinch for this purpose) for a week or so, giving bruised hemp, a little inga and maw seed, also teazel and water on the bottom of the cage, and if they are caught in damp or rainy weather, soak the teazel in cold water and supply with the above. Keep the usual seed hoppers and drinkers full, and the birds will soon follow the old ones' example and go to them.

As soon as they are observed feeding and drinking, cage them up in what is known as a Finch stock cage, when they will soon settle down. Of course, some are more sprightly than others, but most settle down after about three months at the most; if not by then, they usually keep unsteady until after their first cage moult, when they are well steadied, and with a little patience can be made to come and take a sunflower seed or some green food from one's fingers.

Peathroated and Cheveral Finches.

Now a word on Peathroated and Cheveral Finches, with which I expect you are all familiar. I will just state that the former has a small patch of white under the lower mandible, usually of the shape of a pea, from which the term arises. The Cheveral, as it is called, has the white extending completely down the blaze, cutting it in two. Now, never be advised to accept one of these Finches for the purposes of exhibition, as by the present standard of our specialist club, these are faulty birds. The standard distinctly says: "Blaze to be free from black stripes or breaks," and one must admit that a pea throat or Cheveral, is a very conspicuous break indeed, and almost puts a bird out of all count. I can, however, call to mind the case of a Pea-throat coming out on top against seventeen other Finches in its class not showing that fault. But how it came to be there I cannot understand, and I will only say that I should not care to put one under most of our British bird judges, as, of course, the majority judge to the standard of our specialist clubs, which put a freak Goldfinch out of count. I contend it is a freak. We know such Finches have their supporters for the purpose of light Mule breeding; still, in my humble opinion, I think that in their present state not over much is gained in that respect. I am inclined to think there is great scope with regard to the Cheveral Finch, as no doubt this freak could be perpetuated as the Horncrest originally was. Personally, I should very much like to see the result of mating Cheveral Finches, but at the present time I am unable to do so, owing to the commodious gardens which we have in London (flower boxes on window-sills are my limits at present)! This may, however, be carried out by some of our members who have the convenience for breeding Britishers. I myself have to be content with breeding, or trying to breed, a few Mules in a living room.

Getting the Finches into Condition.

Now, to get our Finches into condition (I take it most of our members who keep Finches try for a few Mules or Hybrids from them) there is only one road to success, and that is by giving every attention to them and judiciously feeding them. This matter, as we all know, in regard to every species of bird, is dangerous ground to tread upon; still, I intend to give my method. Others may continue as they are doing, because if their own Finches are successful under the treatment they receive, then I advise fanciers by all means to continue in the same way. I will only say that I have found that my Goldies do best on the following diet:—Stock mixture by measure—3 parts teazel, 2 parts Canary, ½ part linseed, and ½ part German summer rape. I keep the seed hopper full of same, giving a teaspoonful of hemp in the drawer daily, except twice a week, when I give crushed sunflower seed instead.

A CAGE FOR USE WHEN HAND-REARING.

Sent by Mr. F. G. Makinson, Farnborough House, Liverpool Road South, Birkdale.

I enclose a sketch of a cage I use when hand-rearing Linnets. It is, of course, useful for other birds. It has a wooden back, sides, and bottom, is about 9 ins. high, and 5 ins.

from back to front. This style of cage is very useful, as the youngsters cannot get out of reach of the quill when being fed, and you can hold the quill directly over their heads. If thought necessary, a sand tray can be added.—F. G. MAKINSON.

Kindly notify my change of address, writes Mr. J. T. Atherton. I have removed from Godwin Street to 129, Bordesley Green, Ashted, Birmingham. I have had as much work as I could manage through advertising in CAGE BIRDS during the winter season.

The annual meeting of the Camborne F.S., writes Mr. C. J. Allen, the secretary, was held last week, when a very successful year's working was reported. Officers for the coming year were elected, and the date for the Annual Open Show was fixed for November 4th, with Mr. W. G. Poole (Stratford-on-Avon), as judge.

Secretaries of societies kindly note, writes Mr. F. C. Allen, joint secretary of the Battersea Open C.B.S., that I have removed from 9a, Simpson Street, to 342, Battersea Park Road. I have had a very interesting experience with my hens. They came into condition very early, so I had to pair them up. Then for business reasons I had to move. Some young ones were hatched out in one room, and some others of the same nest in another room in a different house. I only lost one, and that was in a nest by itself. I have 20 young ones on the sticks all doing well.

We are arranging to have a day in the country on Sunday, May 23rd, writes Mr. H. E. Tringham, hon. secretary, London and Provincial O.S. The venue has not been definitely decided upon yet, but it will in all probability be in the neighbourhood of Rickmansworth, which district abounds in wild bird life, and is well known to some of our members. Due notice will be sent to all members, but should any non-members wish to join the party (which, by the way, will be under the leadership of G. Crabb Esq.), I should be pleased to let them have full particulars

The Young Bird Show, of the Cardiff and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. W. S. Negus, the secretary, will be held early in July, and the matter will come up for discussion, probably at the May meeting; so in the meantime, perhaps members will think the matter over and come prepared with any suggestions they have to make in order that we may have, if not a record, at least a good exhibition. I would here also ask that as many members as possible will pay their subscriptions for the year at the next two or three meetings, also C.B. Union fees, which will considerably lighten the labour of the secretary.

NORWICH CANARIES.

Cage Birds' Latest Handbook for Fanciers.

"Norwich Canaries" is the title of the latest work from the pen of that able writer and fancier, Mr. C. A. House. The opening chapter deals with the rise and progress in popular favour of the Norwich Canary during the last thirty years, and is followed by chapters treating upon "The Breeding Room and Cages," "Breeding," "Moulting," "Exhibiting," "Forming a Stud," "How to Produce the Ideal," etc., all of which are dealt with in a thoroughly practical and exhaustive manner.

Speaking on the production of colour, the author says: "Colour being such an important factor in the awards of the judges, it behoves the breeder to pay much attention to its production. Some foolishly argue that as colour may be put in through the medium of the food during moult, there is no need to breed for it. This is a great fallacy, as birds which are bred for colour take colour-feed more readily than those which are not so bred."

The questions of Double-Yellow and Double Buff are dealt with, and their effect on colour and size considered. Mr. House warns his readers against the great risks which he believes attend such matings, and urges care and caution in their use.

The author deplores the loss of the evenly-marked birds, and closes his most interesting and instructive book with a strong appeal to fanciers to bring those vanished beauties back to their old position in the variety.

The book is illustrated with half-tone and line drawings from the pen and brush of CAGE BIRDS' most popular artist, Mr. H. Norman, and contains a reproduction of the plate, "A Revelation in Bird Portraiture," which appeared in CAGE BIRDS a few months since.

The price is 1s., or 1s. 1d. post free, from the office of CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Every Canary breeder should send for a copy at once. No lover of the Norwich Plainhead can afford to be without it.

Senegal Parrot.

W. Pole, Routh.—If you had informed me how you were dieting the bird I could have given you better assistance. For one day only put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water (one ounce) and give two or three doses of tincture of opium, 3 drops direct to the mouth. Diet: Seed mixture, 2 parts Canary, and 1 part each oats, wheat, dari, hemp, and sunflower seeds; well mix and let this form your staple diet; also supply ripe fruit, nuts (shelled walnuts or hazel nuts for preference) and plain biscuits. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage; gritty river sand for cage tray, and mingle a little Parrot grit among its seeds. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food, and the bird should soon recover tone and do well. You are rightly informed; it is a Senegal Parrot.

Outdoor Aviary Queries.

J.W.H., Flixton.—(1) Give them a little soft food mixture daily, and scatter a few ants' eggs on aviary floor for the birds. Also supply green food liberally—grass in flower (seeding grass), lettuce, chickweed (not rank), etc.; (2) Canaries are inquisitive and impudent creatures in a mixed series, and often, by their looking after their fellow captives' business as well as their own, get into trouble. Budgerigars are very unsafe company for Finches and I should consider them the culprits; but the Weavers, Greenfinch, and especially the Bramble Finch, all need keeping under observation; at least, I advise you either to cage up the Brambling at once or give it its liberty, and as far as possible have your birds in true pairs, and with one or two exceptions it is sound policy to have only one pair of each species in a breeding aviary.

Birds for Small Aviary.

H. Lee.—The following will breed in cages, say, of box type and about 30in. long, 15in. deep, and 15 to 18in. high: White and Grey Java Sparrows, Longtail Grass Finches, Bengalese, Silverbills, in fact, most of the commoner species would do so, providing you were not too curious and their nest boxes or husks were well screened with twiggy branches. Zebra and Ribbon Finches would also breed in cages, but I advise you to put a pair each of these in your aviary and take out the Java Sparrows; in so narrow an aviary they are not safe, though where they have more space, they can be kept even with small Waxbills with impunity. You would find my small booklet "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful; see advertisement in this column.

Concerning Avadavats.

C.L.N.—From information to hand at the moment, this species is commonest in Central India, but it is found more or less over the whole of India; those coming from the locality of the Persian Gulf are said to be more brilliant in hue than those from the other localities. They build their nests and rear their young among the tussocks of elephant grass, so common to the banks of many Indian streams and rivers. The female is greyish brown, light on the underparts, and washed yellowish on centre of abdomen, and with dull reddish orange on the rump. When out of colour, the male resembles the female, but he is always the darker coloured bird. The young in nesting plumage resemble the hen, but there is a great deal of variation as to depth of colouration.

Rearing Cuba Finches.

F.F.—I have never found the mixture of dried flies, ants' eggs, game meal, sponge cake, and biscuit, to have the effect you name, and should imagine that something else (say, stale portions scattered about by the birds and overlooked, etc.) to be the cause of the trouble. However, the mixture you name will suffice, but I should advise the addition of one part ants' eggs (cocoons). As regards green food, flowering and seeding chickweed, providing it is not rank, may be given; also seeding greens, tender lettuce, and any nonpoisonous foliage which is infected with greenfly or other plant lice; Canary and rape seedling and groundsel heads are all wholesome. Give them a mixture and let the birds make their choice; such practice is always sound. Cuba and Olive Finches do not come to hand at regular periods; they are very erratic in their appearance on the market, and the only thing to do is to watch the advertisement columns and snap them up when obtainable. Though known to aviculture for years, they have never been common.

Arranging an Outdoor Aviary.

Birdy.—The arrangement you suggest will answer alright providing you can well light up the box; birds will go to shelter at night and in rough weather, but they will not go into a dark place, at least, such species as you wish to keep will not do so. (1) For such a small place, board in the flight; (2) The ends should have well-fitting glazed doors outside the netting, to be opened or closed according to the weather; (3) It all depends on the space in the basement; for breeding you must not keep more than 1 pair for each foot run of the frontage. In your case you can measure from front to back of sleeping box; (4) The nesting receptacles should be in the sleeping box. I can only further suggest that you make both the inner and outer compartments as large as you possibly can. I am assuming your basement is dry, and not draughty—the hardiest of birds will not survive long in a damp and draughty place.

Amazon Parrot Unwell.

E.W.L.—The proper diet for an Amazon is seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits; a clean piece of cuttlefish should be continually in the cage, and it is advisable to mix a little grit among the seeds. Till the discharges cease, give 4 drops tincture of opium direct to the mouth daily, and for the same period the drinking water should be made slightly acid with aromatic sulphuric acid (4 drops of the acid to one ounce of water). As soon as the discharges cease, put the bird on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, putting sufficient in the drinking water to make it the colour of pale port wine. The voidings should be removed at once and, if possible, burnt. Do not give milk in any form. A little biscuit or bread that has been slightly moistened with Chemical Food water, may be given instead of the bread and milk. Keep the bird in a warm, but not stuffy position. The better seed mixture would be: Two parts each Canary seed and oats, and one part each hemp, sunflower, marrow, wheat, and maize; well mix and keep a constant supply in the cage.

Birds for Outdoor Aviary.

R.H.S.N.—The birds you name, with one exception, will agree together well enough in your aviary, and can be left out of doors all the year round, providing there is a good shelter attached to the aviary for night use and during severe weather. I presume by Crimson Waxbill you mean the Anstralian Crimson Finch; if so, this is a decidedly pugnacious species, and I cannot advise you to include this. You could also include Zebra Finches, Long and Rufus-tailed Grassfinches. Diet: Canary and white and spray millet will form the principal item of the Foreign bird menu; oats and paddy rice should also be supplied, and rape, hemp, and sunflower seeds for the benefit of the British species. They should get plenty of grass in flower (grass in the ear) from now onwards, and also any nonpoisonous, blighty foliage and herbage that you can procure for them. Such as will take them can have two or three mealworms each daily. When they have young to rear you must supply a little of some good soft food mixture (see advertisement columns) —long grass and hay will be all the nesting material they will require. Husks and nesting boxes must be hung up in various parts of the aviary. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful, obtainable from this office; several useful nest boxes are figured therein. None of the species would take any harm from the full diet given.

Waxbills for Aviary.

M.R.—If you are at all troubled with cats in your locality, it will certainly be best to have a double course of wire netting, which should be of ½-inch mesh. You will find Zebra, Grey, St. Helena, Orange-cheeked, and Crimson-winged (Aurora) Waxbills very handsome and easily-kept species. Waxbills are more inclined to favour rush and basket nests than boxes; the latter should be about six inches square. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners," obtainable from this office, very helpful, and several types of nest boxes are there figured. A Pekin Robin will do well enough with the birds you name, but it will require soft food, ripe fruit, and a few live insects, mealworms, etc., daily. I cannot tell you numbers unless you give me the dimensions of the aviary. I should make the flight of the Waxbill aviary a wilderness of growing weeds, bushes, etc., and on no account be persuaded to include any kind of Parrakeets or Lovebirds with them, however small.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

An Outdoor Aviary.

W. H. Wagg. — The arrangements for your aviary are very suitable, but I would point out the following:—It is no use putting in growing trees or shrubs for Budgies or Lovebirds. I should prefer the ash saplings fixed in the ground, as tubs make good retreats for mice if they get in. I would remind you that Budgies and Finches are very dangerous company. The Finches would be sure to "go under." Your aviary will give accommodation for about 30 birds about the size of a Budgerigar, but only supply breeding accommodation for 10 to 12 pairs at the most. I should advise 2 pairs green and 1 pair yellow Budgerigars (each pair being obtained from a different source), one pair Cockateels, and one pair Rosella Parrakeets. The pair of Madagascar Lovebirds could also go in with them. If you wish to risk (and it is a risk) Finches with them, repeat query as to this point and I will give you a list, but my advice is, don't mix; confine yourself to one or the other.

A Sick Tanager.

E.D.P.—Glad to note there is an improvement, but I should not overdo the glycerine, and I should advise you to use honey and borax; you can get this ready mixed at most chemists. Till the bird is in condition again I should advise giving one dose of the magnesia each week. Unless your stock have come into actual contact with the sick birds, I do not think you need fear infection. Give them all the fresh air you can without draught, though, of course, all new purchases should be quarantined away from healthy stock. Neither do I think you need fear infection being carried to the birds in the other rooms. As soon as the bird is anything like fit, put it in another cage and sterilise its present one as per previous reply. With the care you are now taking, I do not anticipate you will have any trouble with your healthy stock, but under the circumstances, if a bird does appear ailing, it will be safest to isolate it at once. Yes, it is the disease you name, and the bird which died had the contagion before you received it and communicated it to your birds. I hope you will have no further trouble.

Brevities.

Pekin Robin ("Brockley Jack.").—It is by no means uncommon for a Pekin Robin to develop a taste for a granivorous diet when they have access to unlimited seed, and the life of the majority of such feeders is not a long one. If they also eat plenty of ripe fruit and get several mealworms or other insects daily, they should do very well. I would also advise a little milk sop in such a case as your bird once or twice a week, with these modifications the bird should do well and the milk sop will not harm the other occupants of your aviary if they partake of same.

Breeding Java Sparrows (E., Cornwall).—The interior of the husk being soft, such birds often do not line it, and the young will do well enough without. I should certainly offer soft food, though with the diet you are offering, they may not avail themselves of it; but it certainly should be supplied. The Spice-bird has bred several times in this country, and also crossed on several occasions with the Bengalese. As regards food and treatment, same as for the Java Sparrows.

Rose-Breasted Cockatoo ("Grimston").—The Roseate is a good screamer, and quite unsafe for the smaller species you name, and would, I fear, soon "annihilate" any aviary that was not constructed entirely of iron. A pair of Amazons would undoubtedly breed if given a roomy aviary to themselves, though they probably might not do so the first year. It would be necessary to protect all woodwork with wire netting, and it would be necessary for the netting to be of much thicker wire than that usually sold by the stores.

Zebra Finches, etc. (W. S.).—(1) It will be quite safe to put them out the first week in May; they would have been better left out all the winter. The best way to put a check on egg-binding is to remove all nest boxes, and nesting material, and then when you turn them out they will settle down at once. (2) After the middle of May, birds can be purchased and put out at once, but all new arrived should be run into a box cage and allowed to satisfy their hunger and thirst before being put into the aviary.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (G. W. Werrey).—The bird certainly died of bird fever, and in all probability your other losses may be attributed to same infection.

"Gluck" Strain Hen (J. Tomlinson).—Acute inflammation of liver and rupture of blood vessel of that organ, possibly incidental to nesting.

Cinnamon Hen (R. Cramman).—Inflammation of liver and lungs or "general chill," incidental to nesting fever, but rendered dangerous where great variations of temperature prevail, as in outdoor bird-rooms or at top of house under roof.

Brambling (A. B. Timmis).—Liver disease, inflammation involving lungs, apoplexy. More green food is suggested.

Canaries (E. Hogg).—Blood poisoning, or septicæmia, a form of Canary fever, affecting lungs, liver, and bowels, and ending with apoplexy.

Canary (W. H. Allkins).—Bird fever. It is very remarkable that birds affected with this disease appear to be in robust health until certain symptoms are developed, which speedily end in death.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

A Hint (E. Milne).—Many thanks for your kindly letter.

Making a Cage (C. L. Grigg).—We shall be glad to consider publication of the article if you will post it to us.

Musselburgh O.S. (D. Kay).—Your club notice was posted too late to reach us in time for last last week's issue.

A Licence (Farmer).—No licence is needed by a person keeping a bird shop.

Cutting (H. Sturge).—This cutting originally appeared in CAGE BIRDS. Thanks for your kindness in sending it.

Many Thanks to Miss J. Caldwell and Messrs. G. Preece, D. MacArthur, H. Pettit, W. E. Williams, A. V. Dallimore, G. W. Hukin, and many others for interesting items sent in to us.

An Idea (R.J.H.).—We are extremely obliged to you for sending the suggestion along. We think it an excellent one, and have at once given effect to it, as you will observe.

Breeders of Green Yorkshires (Andrew Marr).—If you invest in a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL you will find it gives the addresses of most of the leading breeders of all varieties of the Canary family.

Opening a Bird Shop (S. Rhodes).—We have no recollection of your query. If you will kindly give the details again, you shall have a reply with pleasure.

Whose Ideas Were They? (Sidney Bartrop).—We wonder what your idea is? Why not give a correct address? According to the postal authorities there is no such number as "116" Union-road, Leytonstone. We blush for you.

French Journal (C. Vellard).—We do not know of such a journal as you enquire about. There are two or three German publications in existence.

Hawthorn Buds (W. J. Hughes).—There is no harm in again drawing attention to this green food. With grass, however, it has long been used by many bird-keepers.

Suggestions (W. E. Cross).—We thank you for your suggestions. Evidently you are a new reader, though, for a short time back we published a series of articles dealing with wild plants and seeds, with illustrations. It will be out in book form very soon. What kind of Hybrid breeding article do you want? We have published a good number quite recently.

Singing Contests.

YORK.

Usual weekly Linnet singing contest held at Crown Inn, North-street, April 24th, when upwards of 20 birds competed. Result: 1st, Lee; 2nd, Axberry; 3rd, Massheder; 4th, Palmer. Judge, Mr. Perry; timekeeper, Mr. Cooper.—J. W. SMITH, Hon. Sec.

Usual weekly Linnet contest held at Bricklayers' Arms, Palmer-lane, Hungate, April 24th, when 20 birds competed. Result: 1, Barnard; 2, Oldroyd; 3, Maugham; 4, Limbert; 5, Buckle. Mr. Paver judged, and Mr. Limbert was timekeeper.—WM. EMPSON.

LEIGH.

Linnet match held at "Standard Mower," April 25th, between Messrs. F. Rowland and J. W. Jones. Conditions: the best time out of four minutes' singing: two minutes face to face, and two minutes behind shade. They thought they would try Sheffield style, and it was a good song between the two. Rowland's bird won after a hard struggle. We Leigh fanciers would like to meet about four of the best birds in Sheffield for about four good prizes; meet half way. We await a reply through CAGE BIRDS.—A LINNET FANCIER.

SHEFFIELD.

Result of usual weekly Linnet contest, held at Newmarket Hotel, Sheaf-street: 1st, Palfreyman, 73 secs.; 2nd, Busby, 68 secs.; 3rd, Callaghan, 53 secs. Thirty-two birds sang. Owing to the large number of birds we only sang 1 min. each way.—H. FENN, Sec.

WARRINGTON.

Contest held April 12th, for 11 good prizes. The following were the winners:—1st, Lawton; 2nd, Green; 3rd, Barker; 4th, Clarke; 5th, Hughes; 6th, Britton; 7th, Bower; 8th, Stanway; 9th, Appleton; 10th, Clare; 11th, Clare. Consolation contest following Saturday: 1st, Corbett; 2nd, Armitage; 3rd, Crawford; 4th, Peet; 5th, Gallop; 6th, Drury; 7th, Leah; 8th, Green. We had a good concert same evening. Members and intending members please attend May 9th.—W. PEET, Sec.

LARK SINGING CHALLENGE.

Having heard that Mr. Mills, of Pentlebury, will sing any Skylark in the country, in company, if he will write to the Midland Counties Skylark Society, Grosvenor-road, Aston, near Birmingham, the secretary, Mr. W. Martin, will give him all particulars. He will meet him half way to sing birds in any club, concert hall, or place as may be arranged.

BLACKBURN.

Usual week-end contest of Blackburn Linnet quality. All went off splendidly, 16 birds being entered. 1st, Rostron; 2nd, Harrison; 3rd, Hayhurst. Judges, Messrs. Christopherson, Moulding, and Fender; timekeeper, Mr. James. After, members and friends listened attentively to the birds.—G. ROSTRON and T. SLATER, Secs.

A splendid contest took place at the Good Samaritan Inn, Grimshaw Park, in connection with the Blackburn Lark F.A., when there was some splendid singing. Ten minutes' hanging per bird. Mr. Halliday's bird was again in tip-top form. Five prizes were given. Mr. Halliday's bird sang whole time out; 2nd, Newsham, 9 mins. 49 secs.; 3rd, Hunt, 9 mins. 45 secs.; 4th, Jackson, 9 mins. 40 secs.; 5th, Yates, 9 mins. 13 secs. Too much praise cannot be given to the Burnley bird, which finished as strongly as it began.—ROBT. AIREY. Sec.

CHALLANGE TO DURHAM.

I, Ed. McQuirk, Cornsay Colliery, will sing the challenger, Mr. R. W. Boyd, Nettlesworth Old Pit, for £5 aside; five heats, five minutes up and five minutes down. If R. W. Boyd accepts this reply, let him please meet me at the Burton Hotel, Gilesgate, Durham, on May 1st, at 7 o'clock p.m., to arrange time and place of match. Remember, Mr. Boyd, Old Bellringer is still alive yet, and hale and hearty.

LEEDS.

Linnet contest for quality singing held at the Plasterers' Arms, Skinner-lane, Leeds, April 24th. There was an excellent entry from all parts. Mr. A. Kendall gave £1 in prize money. Result: 1st, Lorriman; 2nd, Duffy; 3rd, Solly; 4th, Johnson. Judges, Messrs. Crane, Clarke, and Towers. After, Mr. Wigfield obliged with the "Nightingale" song. There was also a grand contest on 25th April, and 26 birds entered. Result: 1, Wigfield; 2nd, Solly; 3rd, Johnson. An all-England contest for Linnets on Whit Tuesday. Further particulars in CAGE BIRDS.—J. CLARKE.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon-street, April 24th, when 26 birds sang. Judges, Messrs. J. Melia and F. Allen. 1st, Stead; 2nd, Crowther; 3rd, shared betweeu Sissons and Lister. Also on April 25th, when 28 birds sang. 1st, Crowther; 2nd, Lister; 3rd, Sissons. Judges, Messrs. Summers, Melia and Cooper.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

Usual contest for quality singing, held April 25th, at Skinners' Arms, Buslingthorpe Lane, when 15 birds sang. 1, Ridgewell; 2, Turner; 3, Hutchinson. Judges, Messrs. Naylor and Symons.—WALTER NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

HULL.

Usual week-end contest held at headquarters, North Bridge Hotel. Some of the best birds in Yorkshire competed for six prizes given by the club. 1st prize, Broadhent; 2nd, Booker; 3rd, Conyers; 4th, Marshall; 5th, Serarf; 6th, Dearlove. Judge, Mr. Conyers; timekeeper, Mr. Dearlove. Open to all-England contest at Whitsuntide.—E. MOORS, Hon. Sec.

In the Courts.

Theft of a Prize Canary.

Jonathan Trippier (35), Birley Street, Bury, was charged at Bury recently with stealing a cock Canary value £3, the property of John Ramsbottom, a member of the Bury and Dis. C.B.S., from a cage in the taproom at the Bee Hive Inn, Georgiana Street, on April 10th. The prisoner pleaded guilty.—The prosecutor said he saw the prisoner go into the taproom. There was no one else there at the time. He next saw the Canary at the prisoner's house. He did not know the prisoner, but he hoped the magistrates would be lenient with him.—Detective-sergeant Gregson said the prisoner stated that he had bought the bird for 2s. 6d., but later he admitted the offence, and said he had had some drink and it was a silly thing to do. —Superintendent Noblett said that was the prisoner's first offence.—Robert Smith, manager of the firm who employed the prisoner, said the man had a good character, and his average earnings were from £3 to £3 2s. a week.—The prisoner said he was under the influence of drink.—A fine of 10s. and costs was imposed, the chairman stating that the bench had taken into consideration the accused's previous good character.

Boys Taking Lapwings' Eggs.

Before Sheriff Begg, at Aberdeen on April 21st, John Davidson (16) and Alexander Kellas (16), apprentice bakers, Huntly, were charged with a contravention of the Wild Birds Protection Act, by taking eight Lapwings' eggs from a field in the neighbourhood of Huntly on April 10. They pleaded guilty.

Mr. J. J. Mackenzie, solicitor, appeared for the boys, who, he said, on the Saturday afternoon in question, after tea, went out for a walk in the country. When walking along the road, they saw the Lapwings in a field, and were tempted to go and look for eggs. They did not know they were doing wrong, not knowing there was a prohibition against taking Lapwings' eggs after April 1st. They took the eggs with the intention of eating them at home, but were found with the eggs in their possession. They had each four eggs. They did not know there was such a thing as a market for them, and did not know they were doing anything against the law.

The Sheriff doubted whether it was generally known among boys that there was such a law.—The Fiscal (Mr. Maclennan) said bills were posted up in all prominent places in the county. The boys were searching the field. If they did not know it was an offence to take Lapwings' eggs, they were the only two boys who did not. —The Sheriff: Do they know the Latin word for a Lapwing? (Laughter).—The Fiscal said the word was given in Latin and English.

The Sheriff wished the case had gone to proof, because the sentence would depend on the circumstances—whether the eggs were taken innocently, or for sale. In the absence of any proof he assumed the case was favourable to the boys. The Fiscal did not suggest that the boys were to sell the eggs, because he had no proof. The Sheriff said the boys had been put to some expense coming from Huntly, and they would each have to pay a fine of 1s.

TWITTERINGS.

I have removed from New Dock Road, writes Mr. E. H. Williams, to 19, Copper Works Road, Llanelly.

The Brighouse and Dis. C.B.S. will not hold an open show this year, writes Mr. T. Mitchell, the hon. secretary.

The Annual Show of the Lurgan C.B.S., writes Mr. S. M'Collum, the hon. secretary, will be held on December 10th and 11th.

At the South Shields Show, to be held on October 29th and 30th, writes Mr. J. Barrass, the hon. secretary, Messrs. C. A. House and T. Dixon will judge.

I advertised a Parrot for sale through your columns some time ago, writes Mr. P. Brown (Fulham, S.W.), and I am pleased to say that I sold it very quickly.

Mr. William Richmond (Rodley, near Leeds), has been elected to judge the Leeds C.B.S. First Feather Show on June 5th next, writes Mr. Tose, the hon. secretary.

We have fixed our Nest Feather Show to be held July 17th; judge, Mr. Anthony Brown, writes Mr. A. Widdowfield, secretary of the Houghton-le-Spring and Dis. C.B.S.

Mr. G. E. Weston asks us to express his grateful thanks to the many kind fancier friends who have written expressing their sympathy with him in his recent loss.

I am shipping this week to South Africa, writes Mr. W. Rudd, the well-known bird specialist of Norwich, a very good order for Norwich Crests, Norwich Plainheads and Yorkshires.

We have received an order, together with 1s. 2d., for a copy of "Yorkshire Canaries," by H. W. Battye, but no name or address is given. If the sender will communicate these to us, we shall be pleased to execute the order.

Owing to our show fixture, November 27th, clashing with the date of Ilkeston Show, we are compelled to seek a fresh date, writes Mr. A. E. Wigginton, hon. secretary, Long Eaton and Dis. C.B.S., and we have now decided on December 11th.

I am sending some birds to Illinois, U.S.A., writes Mr. B. Hollins, the well-known Hull bird specialist. I received the order for same through the medium of my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. The destination of the birds is 1,500 miles from New York.

It was unanimously resolved at our last meeting, writes Mr. J. F. D. Alexander, hon secretary of the Garston B.B.A., that we hold our Nest Feather Show on July 17th, and our old show on December 1st. Several new members were proposed and elected.

That well-known fancier, W. Turton, Esq. (Leeds), is so pleased with the manner in which the Leeds C.B.S. is progressing, writes Mr. Wm. Tose, the hon. secretary, that he has decided to increase the value of the silver cup he is presenting to 3 guineas.

For the Dulwich O.S. annual ramble, the party will assemble at "The Herne," Peckham Rye, S.E., on Sunday, May 16th, at 9.15 a.m., and entrain at Honor Oak Park, S.E., 10 a.m., for Stoats Nest. Lunch and tea at "Ye Old Fox," Coulsdon Common, Surrey. Tickets, inclusive, are 4s. each, from Mr. S. J. Kent, hon. secretary, 156, Underhill Road, S.E.

The fourth annual report and balance-sheet of the Wimbledon and Dis. C.B.S. are encouraging documents. Both the Young Stock and Annual Shows resulted in a profit to the society, and the balance in hand from the two show accounts at the end of the year was £1 3s. 3d., which reflects every credit on Mr. H. Smith, the hon. secretary, and the other officials.

Fanciers on the look-out for really up-to-date bird-cage furniture, such as glass drinkers, glass egg-drawers, etc., of the latest approved patterns, should send for the price-list (illustrated), issued by Messrs. J. Dean and Son, 24, Hook Street, Liverpool). They are the actual manufacturers and their prices are very favourable to the buyer.

Mr. T. Harper, the well-known Husk importer, of Wolverhampton, writes asking us to impress upon readers the necessity of writing clearly when sending out orders. He states that he has had trouble several times recently owing to the names and addresses of customers being written in an illegible manner.

A particularly well-made and finished enamelled water-tin (for show cages, etc.), reaches us from Mr. W. Ackroyd (20, Lowfield Street, Manchester Road, Bradford), which he is advertising in our columns. We have never seen anything of the kind to beat it, and can recommend this tin to readers in need of such an article.

Messrs. Fox Bros. (26, Ludgate Hill, London, E.C.), will be pleased to send to any fancier who writes to them, and mentions CAGE BIRDS when doing so, a free sample of their noted Egg and Biscuit Food, to enable him to compare it with other foods he may have seen or used. Fanciers can then see for themselves that the egg itself is there in the proportion stated, and that it is actually egg. "We give very strong guarantees," Messrs. Fox Bros. write, "with our preparation, such as no other manufacturer gives or can give, even down to the analysis of the egg, so that fanciers can be absolutely certain that they are feeding their birds on a genuine article. It is simply eggs and biscuit with no other ingredient, not even sugar. What we have endeavoured to impress upon fanciers is the fact that the white of an egg in a coagulated form, such as occurs in hard-boiled egg, is most indigestible. The egg used in our preparation is perfectly soluble owing to the special process adopted, and the analysis is not affected in the least. This makes the task of the mother feeding her young much easier, and the probability of rearing all the young birds much greater."

Our annual show, writes Mr. J. B. Y. Murdoch, hon. secretary of the Kilmarnock O.C.B.S., will be held on November 19th and 20th.

I am in possession of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1909, and I find it a really useful acquisition, and a book which should be in every birdroom. —ALLAN LIVESEY, hon. secretary, Bingley and Dis. O.S.

At our last meeting, held April 13th, writes Mr. H. Jameson, secretary of the Bury and Dis. C.B.S., it was resolved to hold our open Roller contest on December 17th and 18th, consisting of three classes.

I am sorry indeed, writes Mr. John Rukin, the well-known Lizard fancier, of Rawtenstall, to hear of Mr. Weston's loss. I can especially feel for him, as my youngest lad (10 years of age), has been at death's door for over a week, but is slowly recovering now, though he will probably lose both speech and hearing, I regret to say, for at present he is stone deaf and unable to speak.

I notice in CAGE BIRDS that Mr. Patterson says he saw his first Swallows on April 18th last, writes Mr. W. Lewys (Bristol). I should like to say that I saw a pair on Good Friday, perched on an apple tree by the side of the road at Portishead. They looked tired and also a bit rough, having every appearance of having come a long journey. I have not seen another since. I was only a few yards off, and they did not attempt to fly away.

OBITUARY

Mr. ALEXANDER MILLER (Rutherglen).

On Sunday, April 18th, writes Mr. Thos. Smith (Glasgow), the well-known breeder of Scotch Fancy Canaries and competent judge, Mr. Alexander Miller, 4, Johnstone Drive, Rutherglen, passed away. Last summer he was seized with a shock from which he never recovered. The Fancy is poorer by his loss. He was in every sense a true man, full of courage, and never afraid to express his mind. A baker by trade, he was in business for himself in Rutherglen. For a number of years, he was widely known and highly respected in the district. He and I were close friends for a long period, and I had the highest admiration for Mr. Miller. I am sure I voice the regret of your readers at the loss the Fancy has sustained, and their sincere and heartfelt sympathy with Mrs. Miller and the family. His memory will be fondly cherished by those who knew him

Messrs. David Black (Govan) and George F. Hope (Edinburgh), writes Mr. D. Nairn, secretary of the Maryhill O.C., will judge at our annual show in November.

The date of the Longton, Leek and Hanley Federation Young Stock Show, writes Mr. E. Tams, secretary of the Longton and Dis. C.B.S., has been fixed for July 10th, when Mr. J. H. Roe will judge. We have also engaged Mr. Roe to judge at the Longton Open Show on October 2nd. Messrs. Hawley (Hanley), Goodall and Roberts (Stoke), have joined our society.

The London and Counties O.A. are holding their Young Bird Show on June 26th, writes Mr. W. Gilbert, the hon. secretary, and Mr. J. W. Ramsden has been elected to judge. The autumn show will be held on November 26th and 27th, for which Mr. T. Heath has been elected judge. Both shows will be held at headquarters, the Sessions House Hotel, Clerkenwell Road, E.C.

The Matched-pair Show balance-sheet of the Queen's Park and Dis. C.B.A. shows a balance to the good of 19s. 8d., which, carried to the general account for the quarter ended March 25th, brings the association's total balance in hand to £13 10s. 4½d. This is a creditable state of affairs, and Mr. J. C. Birch, the hon. secretary, and the other officials are to be congratulated on the excellent result.

Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Cage-bird Food is now used extensively for rearing by a very large number of up-to-date breeders, more particularly in the Yorkshire and Norwich districts. It is claimed for it that it saves time and money, as it is more economical in use; also that it is rapidly displacing the old-fashioned methods of feeding with egg and crumbs. It is rich in albuminoids, carbo-hydrates, fats and salts, so essential to successful rearing. This firm's "Red Colour Food" sales show new records every season. Only the very best quality procurable is used by Messrs. Spratt, which ensures the richness of colour so sought after by fanciers. Messrs. Spratt's will cheerfully send samples or a 1lb. packet for 1s. 9d. Canaries, like human beings, require an occasional change, and our readers will be interested to know Messrs. Spratt have put up a mixed seed in which are incorporated egg and fruit. Many fanciers now feed on this regularly, and give the ordinary mixture as a change. The bird-seed section of Messrs. Spratt's factory is a very large and important one, the many varieties required to meet the needs of the different breeds being imported from those countries producing the best; for instance, from Spain the finest quality Canary seed is obtained; its value is practically double that of the seed from elsewhere. From Germany they get the best summer rape seed, and from Italy the best white millet. Many seed mixtures are composed of the cheapest Canary seed, with old turnip seed as a substitute for the much more expensive summer rape. Those who have the interest of their pets at heart, purchase foods bearing the name of Spratt, knowing their genuineness can be relied on. Every reader sending their name and address on a postcard to Messrs. Spratt's, Ltd., 24, Fenchurch Street, London, E.C., and mentioning CAGE BIRDS when writing, will receive free a sample box of foods, and book on cage-bird rearing and keeping. Send at once; don't delay.

The photographs of the Norwich Plainhead show-cage, single breeder, and two-compartment breeder, found on page 438 of our supplement this week, were taken from cages made by that well-known maker, Mr. R. A. Newley (Stockwell Green, London, S.W.), and are splendid examples of the workmanship and finish always seen in his goods. They are fitted complete, Mr. Newley including every accessory in the moderate price at which he lists his cages.

We have to express our acknowledgement to the following photographers for the respective photographs found in our "Norwich Plainhead Canary Special" this week: Those sent by Mr. J. Hodder, to J. Bender and Co., City Road, London, E.C.; Messrs. Cleminson and Taylor (two), Geo. Devey, Preston; Mr. D. L. Eynon, Mr. Bert Hill (Aberdare); Mr. A. Grey, Jas. Bacon and Sons, Newcastle; Mr. E. Baker, Vectis Photographic Co., Cowes; Mr. T. Irons, Coldham and Son, Northampton.

British bird-keepers will be interested in the large and exhaustive work concerning their pets which has been written by that well-known and practical fancier, Mr. S. W. Birchley, and is to be published by Messrs. Sherratt and Hughes (34, Cross Street, Manchester). Readers should not overlook the advertisement (appearing in our pages this week) of this forthcoming book. The caging, feeding, and exhibiting of all species of British birds are to be thoroughly dealt with, and over 100 full-page plates (including many life-like photographs) will be found in the work. A prospectus will be sent free to all who apply.

An enviable reputation is enjoyed by Messrs. James Carter and Co. (237 and 238, High Holborn, London, "the King's seedsmen," among bird-keepers, for the supply of seeds of all kinds of a high quality not readily met with —beautifully cleaned and fully ripened. Their various packet mixtures, their Parrot food, and their grit sand are also in great demand with discriminating bird-lovers, and are used and recommended by our best-known fanciers. These seeds and foods (and every description of choice garden seeds) are stocked by most grocers, stores, and corn dealers, and readers should ask for "Carters," and test for themselves their excellence.

At the Jubilee Palace Show over 300 awards were won by birds moulted solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. The list includes Mr. Godley's champion Norwich and Cinnamons, Mr. Hodder's noted Norwich winning Ramsden's teapot in Southern Norwich competition. In the Yorkshire section, Messrs. Bailey and Swanger, Amblers, Shackleton, Hartley, Halliday, Ogden Bros., Rennie, Greaves, Crisp, etc., secured most of the prizes, and every bird was colour-fed solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. Every first second, and third prize in the Lizard classes went to birds colour-fed solely on Ramsden's Pure Pepper. This is not advertising "bluff," but actual truth. In most cases the pepper was supplied direct, and in every case the exhibitor had to write "R.P." against his entries to denote that the birds had been colour-fed solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. Reference to the show catalogue will prove the truth of this statement. Ramsden's Pure Peppers are unequalled for purity and richness of colour. This season's Tasteless is of marvellous colour, and the Hot is richer in colour than ever, being a blend of carefully selected Spanish and Natal capsicums. When you ask for Ramsden's Peppers, see you get them. If the dealer offers you something "just as good," don't have it. Insist on having Ramsden's, the best the world produces, and fully guaranteed. Prices: Tasteless, 2s. lb.; 5-lb. canisters, 7s. 6d.; 22lbs., 30s. Hot, 3s. lb., 5lbs. 12s. 6d.—J. W. Ramsden, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London, S.W.—(ADVT.)

Our "Ladder of Progress."

Competitors in our "Ladder of Progress" Competition should remember that the date of closing is May 11th, and make a special effort in the 10 days remaining to ensure one of our prizes coming their way.

The Norwich Plainhead Club.

Kindly mention, writes Mr. J. Hopkins, the hon. secretary, that the following gentlemen have joined the Norwich Plainhead Club: Messrs. H. W. Sheldon (Llandudno), Joseph Rathbone (Wolstanton), Dr. McConaghey (Macclesfield), S. H. George (Swansea), J. Curwen (Preston), and H. Shorney (York).

Lancashire Canary Association.

All societies desirous of holding shows under our patronage, writes Mr. Wm. Adams, hon. secretary of the Lancashire C.A., please send their names along with the number of classes and the name of judge not later than July, to me, at 35, Bedford Street, Rochdale. The association is giving at least twelve medals to be competed for by our members this season, and we shall be pleased to hear from anyone desirous of joining us, our subscription only being 2s. 6d. yearly, with champion and novice sections.

IS THE EXHIBITING OF NORWICH PLAINHEADS A LOTTERY?

A STUDY IN TYPES.

It has long been the contention—shall we say grievance?—of breeders and exhibitors of Norwich Plainheads that different judges favour different types, while of late it has been freely said that the type of bird bred for and exhibited varies considerably in certain parts of the country—in Lancashire and in the South, to mention two quarters. Our artist has here depicted some winning birds of the past season, from various centres, as they presented themselves to his eye. They are: At top: Unevenly-marked Yellow, 1st Nottingham, for Messrs. Adnitt and Driver (South Normanton); and Ticked Buff Cock, 1st Manchester, for Mr. J. Evans (Burnley); In centre: Unflighted Yellow, 1st Crystal Palace, for Mr. W. N. Midgley (Winslow); and Unevenly-marked Yellow, 1st Preston, for Mr. Jas. Howie (Dundee); At bottom: Ticked Buff, 1st Carlisle, for Mr. A. Younghusband (Keswick).

SOME DISTINGUISHING MARKS OF THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD.

A STUDY IN TECHNICALITIES.

Some details of their history and objects, contributed by the respective secretaries.

THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

AS the result of correspondence between such well-known Norwich Plainhead breeders as Messrs. J. H. Payne, W. Spillman, A. G. Davis, Barker Clegg and others in the Fancy Press, in or about February and March, 1897, respecting the type, etc., of this Canary, the Norwich Plainhead Club was formed. The club has for its object: (1) the advancement of the Norwich Plainhead Canary, (2) the settlement of the question of type, etc., and (3) the protection of the interests of Norwich fanciers in every direction. The membership of the club was open to the United Kingdom, and well-known exhibitors from all parts, to the number of about 70, flocked to the standard, recognising at once that such a club was very essential, and would be very beneficial, to all Norwich breeders. The following officers and judges were forthwith appointed: President, R. Dewhurst, Esq.; Vice-Presidents, Rev. Dr. Davies, and Messrs. J. Bexson, J. H. Payne, and H. S. Naylor; Committee: Messrs. J. Haigh, B. Clegg, C. Degg, A. Wellings, H. Taylor, J. Dale, F. Mansfield, A. Hirst, F. J. Smith, W. Mynard, J. S. Evans, and S. Cook; Judges, Messrs. Bexson, J. H. Payne, C. E. Silk, A. Wellings, C. A. House, J. Haigh, and A. Bradbury; Auditors, Messrs. A. Bradbury and B. Clegg; Secretary and Treasurer, A. G. Davis.

The first club show was held at Manchester in 1897, and the following were the first prize winners in the Champion Section:—Clear Yellow, Mr. H. Taylor; Clear Buff, Mr. H. Taylor; Ticked, etc., Yellow, Messrs. Wellings and Wood; Ticked, etc., Buff, Mr. F. Beardall; Yellow hen, Messrs. Wellings and Wood; Buff hen, Mr. J. Mellors; Unflighted Yellow, Mr. J. Shirreffs; Unflighted Buff, Messrs. J. Haigh and Son. Fanciers quickly recognising the merits of the club, the membership increased rapidly, and in 1899, when the Secretaryship was taken over by Mr. J. Raynes, there were about 170 members on the books, and from that time it has continued to hold its own, notwithstanding the fact that several other Norwich clubs have since sprung up.

The N.P.C. has, without doubt, been a great help and stimulus to Norwich Canary breeders, and has been mainly responsible for the improvement which has taken place in the type of the Norwich Plainhead by insisting on the judges adhering as nearly as possible to the standard set up by them.

This standard was revised in 1907, when Mr. H. Norman's model (a reduced fac-simile appears on this page) was adopted, and the following scale of points drawn up:—

HEAD, round, full, and neat, with short beak; NECK, short and thick, 25. CHEST, deep, broad, and full, 15. BACK, broad and well filled-in, 10. WINGS AND TAIL, short, compact, and good carriage, 15. FEATHER, soft, silky, with brilliancy and compactness, 15. COLOUR, deep, bright, rich, pure, and level throughout, 10. STAGING and good condition, 10. Total, 100 points. Length not to exceed 6½ inches. Streaked beak and marked legs not to be a disqualification, but to count against the bird to its extent.

The Presidency was held by Mr. R. Dewhurst until 1904, when he was succeeded by Mr. John Wright, he in turn being succeeded by Mr. J. A. Eckersley, the well-known Birmingham enthusiast, who still fills this office. Mr. Raynes continued as Secretary, and worked hard to further the interests of the club until this year, when, on account of being appointed Secretary of the Cage Bird Union, he resigned, Mr. Jno. Hopkins being elected Secretary in his place. The full list of officers and judges for 1909 is as follows:—President, Mr. J. A. Eckersley; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. J. Bexson, W. Aitchison, A. G. Davis, and E. Baker; Committee, Messrs. S. Cook, J. Trengove, T. H. Dent, W. Booth, J. H. Roe, J. Hayhurst, J. Towers, W. Spillman, T. Seed, B. Clegg, O. Stringer, and J. Raynes; Auditors, Messrs. B. Clegg and G. W. F. Lythgoe; Judges, Messrs. J. H. Roe, J. Trengove, J. Robson, J. Bexson, A. Wellings, J. C. Barnes, H. W. Battye, A. G. Davis, W. Booth and Dr. Herd; Secretary and Treasurer, Jno. Hopkins, 126, Bury New Road, Bolton, Lancs.

The membership of the club is still as when formed, not confined to any radius or county, but open to the United Kingdom; it consequently numbers amongst its members the oldest and principal breeders and exhibitors of the Norwich, no matter what part of the kingdom they reside in. The annual subscription is only 2s. 6d., and the club offers for competition amongst its members (1) a £10 10s. Challenge Cup which becomes the absolute property of the exhibitor winning it three times—which, by the way, has been done twice, once by Mr. W.

Single Breeding Cage for Norwich Plainheads, with all Fittings.

Standard Type of Show Cage for the Norwich Plainhead.

Vardy (Hucknall (Huthwaite), and once by Mr. J. Trengove, of Rishton—(2) gold medal for the winner each year; (3) gold medal for the runner-up; (4) gold medal for best bird shown by a champion at the club show; (5) silver tea urn given by Mr. J. E. Davies (Stockport), to be won outright in one season, cup birds not to compete; many other valuable prizes for amateurs and champions, while numerous specials have been promised for the next show season. It is, therefore, plain that it is to the advantage of every Norwich breeder to join the N.P.C.; also, it is his duty to do so in order to help forward the good work which has been carried on for so many years for the advancement of the Norwich Plainhead Canary. JOHN HOPKINS, Hon. Sec.

THE SOUTHERN NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

THE Southern Norwich Plainhead Club was formed in the year 1905 by a body of fanciers who called together the Norwich breeders at the Raglan Hotel, on March 22nd, 1905. At that meeting we had 25 fanciers present, amongst whom were Messrs. G. Crabb, J. W. Ramsden, G. Leclair, J. Hodder, J. W. Rennie, Graves, Bellamy, Miles, Morris, Martin, Pretty, Saunders and others. The first President was Mr. G. Crabb, with Mr. F. S. Matthes as Treasurer, Mr. G. Leclair taking the office of Secretary. Since that time the club has gradually gone forward, and has received liberal support from those who breed and exhibit the Norwich Plainhead, being also greatly sought after by the many societies wishing to have its support at their shows.

The chief objects of the club were: the adoption of a standard, the extension of classification in the South of England, the suppression of fraudulent and dishonourable practices and the advancement of the interests of its members. These objects have been fulfilled, and the club has been quietly working in the interests of those who give their attention to this section of the Fancy. The annual subscription of 2s. 6d. does not pay by a long way the outgoings of this club, but it has had a special prize fund, which has been truly the financial backing of the club, and by its means we have been able to get together some 150 breeders and supporters.

In the forthcoming season we offer to its members an array of specials not often seen in the rule book of a specialist club. Its management this year is in the able hands of our President, Mr. E. Baker; Committee, Messrs. H. Lambert Brown, J. W. Rennie, A. W. Curtis, G. Gardner, J. Hodder, W. Morris, W. Collings, G. Dring, W. N. Midgley, A. E. Godden, G. Leclair, A. J. Kelly, with Mr. F. S. Matthes as Hon. Treasurer and Secretary (34, Rotherhithe New-road, London, S.E.); Mr. J. Richardson as Assist. Hon. Secretary; and Messrs. T. Heath and H. W. Simpson, Auditors. The Chairman of Committee is our worthy Mr. J. W. Ramsden, and while he guides the affairs of this club, I do not think the club has yet seen its best days of influence amongst the Southern Canary breeders. We have eight Vice-Presidents, who help the club and forward its usefulness, and who are well known to every breeder of Canaries for their integrity. They are: Messrs. Crabb (London), W. R. Miles (Chichester), J. H. Bellamy (Hastings), R. L. Crisp (London), W. Spillman (Devonport), R. J. Pretty (London), F. J. Gibbs (Canterbury) and J. Saunders (Sutton).

The model and standard for breeding are issued every year in the rule book. The "Standard of Excellence" and the "Scale of Points" are precisely the same as those of the Scottish N.P.C., differing in a similar way from the N.P.C. scale. If any breeder wishes to join this club he has only to apply to the Secretary and pay his yearly subscription; and then the whole of the above gentlemen are at his service to give him seasonable advice concerning his hobby.

THE SCOTTISH NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

THIS club was instituted in January, 1899, at Aberdeen, with something like 50 members, the majority of whom were resident in the North-Eastern Counties of Scotland. Gradually its sphere of influence widened, until now the membership list has reached 150, and it has a connection in every district in the Land of the Thistle. The management, however, hope to see this number largely increased during the current year, to enable them to cater for the members on a larger and more liberal scale than they have been in a position to do in the past. The subscription is 2s. 6d., which is low enough to induce all to join.

The objects of the club are the advancement of the Norwich Canary in Scotland, and the protection of the interests of its members in every way. The business of the club is conducted by the President, five Vice-Presidents, twelve members of Committee and Secretary and Treasurer (combined). The office-bearers for 1909 are: President, Mr. John Young; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. G. Scaife, A. Roberts, A. McFarlane, J. Adams, and J. McLay; Committee, Messrs. W. Jaffrey, J. Winter, R. B. Jarvie, W. G. Muir, W. Clubb, G. Davidson, A. G. Cameron, J. Hector, W. Watson, J. Smeaton, W. Aitchison and W. Dunn; Auditors, Messrs. D. S. Gowans and J. Peters; Scrutineers, Messrs. J. Ferguson and C. Campbell; Judges, Messrs. A. McFarlane, A. G. Cameron, J. McLay, A. Roberts, G. Davidson, A. Malcolmson; Secretary and Treasurer, J. Brown, 97, Petershill-road, Glasgow.

The S.N.P.C. "Scale of Points for Judging" differs from that of the N.P.C. in three items. It gives 15 points for colour, against 10 by the English club; gives 5 points for perfection of legs (clear) and feet, a matter not enumerated in the other club's scale of points; while the N.P.C. has 10 points down for "staging and good condition," this item not appearing at all in our own scale. Our "Standard of Excellence" reads:—

COLOUR, deep bright, rich, pure, and level throughout. SHAPE, head, round, full and neat; neck, short and thick; body, short and chubby, with back well filled in; deep, broad, full chest. FEATHERS, soft and silky, with brilliancy and compactness. WINGS AND TAIL, short, compact, and good carriage. SIZE, well proportioned. BEAK, short and stout (clear). LEGS, well set back (also clear). FEET, perfect. CONDITION, health, cleanliness and sound feathers, streaked beak and marked legs not to be a disqualification, but count against the bird to its extent. LENGTH, not to exceed 6½ inches.

J. BROWN, Sec. and Treas.

NORWICH PLAINHEAD C.C. OF IRELAND.

I AM agreeably surprised to know you are giving a double number devoted almost entirely to the Norwich Plainhead Canary, and as the honorary secretary of the Norwich Plainhead Canary Club of Ireland, I will try and give a brief outline of the club's career. Some time ago a few of the fanciers in the City of Belfast thought that something in the nature of a specialist club would be a benefit to the Plainhead Canary, and on January 29th, 1907, we held our first meeting in the Avenue Hall, Garfield-street, Belfast. Mr. John Cummings was asked to take the chair, and Mr. Stewart proposed, and Mr. Gray seconded, that we form such a club; which proposal was unanimously agreed to, and from then until now it has gone ahead and prospered.

At that meeting a set of officers were elected provisionally for the purpose of drafting out rules, etc., for the government of the club, and I would like to say that the interest taken in our new venture by the then committee was of a whole-hearted description, for long before our first show came on, we had to the club's credit two splendid solid silver cups, and in addition £7 5s. 6d. in cash lodged in King-street Bank.

The first show season the club's patronage was granted to the following shows: Sligo, Dublin, Belfast, Lurgan, and Dundalk. The winners of the cups this same year were Messrs. Tate and Carson, and in addition to the cups, each received a gold medal. During the show season that has just gone, that for 1908-9, a show was held under the auspices of the club, which proved a great success, especially in the Plainhead section, of which Mr. G. Harland, of Hull, was the judge. The other shows that were granted the club's patronage were the same as the previous season's, with Banbridge instead of Lurgan; and the cup winners last year were Messrs. Thompson and Stewart.

This year's officers are: Mr. John Cummings, President; Mr. Walter Connell, Vice-President; Committee: Messrs. Carson, Wilson, Thompson, Ronaldson, Scott, Leacock, Ross, Lavery, Bamford, Gilmore, Mulligan, Osborne, Cloke and Birse.—James Stewart, Hon. Sec., 57, Donegall avenue, Belfast. Headquarters, Avenue Hall, Garfield-street, Belfast. Annual subscription, 2s. 6d. J. STEWART, Hon. Sec.

THE "OPEN" NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

THE origination of the "Open" Norwich Plainhead Club in Yorkshire may fairly be said to date from October 26th, 1907, for, although previous to this time the matter had undoubtedly occupied the attention of those who were valiantly championing the cause of the "chubby ones," as indicated by such names as Messrs. Haigh, Sunderland, Wilcock, Naylor, etc., yet nothing of a definite nature had been accomplished, or even attempted. On this date a paragraph, having for its object the securing of the names of persons interested in the formation of a Norwich Plainhead Club, appeared in the Fancy Press. The response was such that an inaugural meeting was called at the "Market Tavern," Godwin-street, Bradford, on March 14th, 1908, and attended by a splendid gathering of Norwich fanciers. Since that time the Open Norwich Plainhead Club has been an accomplished fact, and remarkable success has attended its first year of work.

The reasons for establishing the club were various. In the first place, it had been long felt in Yorkshire that, although a similar institution was already in existence elsewhere, its workings were so little known, and its benefits, provisions for the districts, and influence so small, as to be altogether inadequate to meet the demands of the Norwich fanciers for some further means of popularising their favourite in these parts.

The membership from the date of the first meeting (it was then 38), sprang up with remarkable celerity, and we are commencing the present season with close upon 100 members. The patronage of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club was given to eight shows, viz., Newcastle-on-Tyne, Bradford City, Rochdale (Good Intent), Warrington, Sunderland, Harrogate, Eccleshill, Halifax; and good entries were received at each show, for the competitions for which this club offers numerous valuable prizes both for champions, amateurs, and novices.

The officers for the present season are: President, Percy Illingworth, Esq., M.P.; Vice-Presidents (to be elected on April 24th). Chairman of Committee, Mr. T. Hammond. Vice-Chairman, Mr. Hirst. Committee, Messrs. A. Haigh, D. Sunderland, J. Wilcock, A. H. Waters, R. Halliday, H. W. Battye, Wm. Foxall, J. Mottram, H. S. Naylor, S. H. Jeffreys, J. F. Thackray, A. Pickles, T. Boyle, H. J. Chittenden, W. A. Cowgill, J. Moorhouse, A. Grey, E. Marlor, Pickering, A. Spencer. Auditors, Messrs. J. Wilcock, jun., and H. Simonette. Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, Oliver Mitchell, 13, Lodge-terrace, Bowling, Bradford, Yorks. Subscriptions, 2s. 6d. per annum.

The standard and scale of points adopted are precisely the same as those in force with the Scottish and Southern N.P. clubs O. MITCHELL, Hon. Sec.

CAN YOU MATE THESE BIRDS UP CORRECTLY?

OUR PRIZE COMPETITION.

On these two plates are depicted eight ordinary Norwich Plainhead Canaries—the left-hand drawing holds four Buff hens, and the right-hand, four Yellow cocks. We offer a cash prize of half-a-guinea to the reader who correctly states how these eight birds should be mated up for breeding purposes. The birds have already been paired by one of our leading Norwich Plainhead experts, and his decision is known only to the Editor, who will award the prize to the reader coupling the birds in the same order as the aforesaid expert has done. Failing a correct solution, the prize will go to the nearest attempt; if more than two readers solve the problem, the prize will go to the first letter opened which contains the correct solution. All attempts must be sent in on the coupon printed on page 441 this week, or they cannot count.

SHOW DATES FIXED.

To secure insertion in this column a guarantee that the show will be advertised in "O.B." to the extent of at least 25/- must be sent to our manager.

* Under the rules of the O.B. Union.

OUR "MATCHED PAIRS" COMPETITION.

A Half-Guinea Prize.

As stated on page 440, we offer a cash prize of half-a-guinea (10s. 6d.) to the reader who "mates up" the four cock birds and the four hens, seen in the two drawings, in the same order as they have been "mated" by one of our leading judges, whose decision is known only to the Editor.

If no coupon proves to be correct, then the prize will go to the attempt which is nearest. If more than one reader is correct, then the prize will go to the sender of the letter first opened containing the correct solution. All attempts must be sent in on the coupon appended, or they cannot be allowed to compete.

The coupons must be posted to reach the office of CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., on or before Thursday, May 13th next. Mark all letters COMPETITION in the top left-hand corner. A penny stamp must be put on the envelope. All entries are accepted only on the understanding that the Editor's decision shall be final.

COUPON.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly writlen in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Qucries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

CANARY QUERIES.

Two Difficulties.

"Chemist."—(1) It is unfortunate that the cock should have taken such a fancy to a diet of raw eggs as to devour his mate's treasures. You cannot rely upon the eggs all being fertile if you take him away when the first is laid. Your best plan is to shut him off from her at night, and not return him until the hen has laid next day. If he is a vigorous bird the eggs should be fertile if he is only run with for an hour or two each day, after she has laid. (2) It is just possible an overfat condition may be the cause of your hens laying soft-shelled eggs. If they appear too plump give them a few doses of Epsom Salts, prior to their next nesting, and also give thirty drops of Chemical Food in the water daily for a week or two before they will be about ready to lay again. What green food do you use? You must avoid dandelion for such hens.

Three Couples.

A Novice.—(1) As your room is large enough to allow a good stock of birds to be run in cages, I should rather favour this method on account of the control you have over the breeding operations; whereas with birds flying loose you have exceedingly little at the best of times. Under skilful management you should be able to breed quite as many birds in a room of this size in cages as you would with the birds flying loose. (2) About 250 birds would be a full house. A breeding stock of 100 would be quite ample to start with. (3) Given vigorous young cocks from eighteen to twenty hens might be run with six. (4) Practically no difference. The names are merely trade terms nowadays. (5) "Profitable Canary Breeding," by Rettich, would probably suit you. Our manager will send it you for 9½d. (6) Probably nothing at all to choose between the two names you mention. Both, I believe, send birds on approval, against deposit with our Editor.

Four in Hand.

"Cockie."—(1) You mated the bird much too early, or he could not have put a hen to nest and sat out her time twice, and this is doubtless to a great extent the cause of your getting nothing but clear eggs. Separate him for a fortnight at least, and in that time feed him up liberally, giving a little egg food with four drops of cod liver oil in it three times a week, and a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and gold of pleasure every second day. Give a liberal supply of green food, especially chickweed and dandelion, daily to prevent the increased dietary upsetting him. In the drinking water give twenty drops of chemical food three times a week. After a rest and this course of treatment there will be plenty of time for him to fertilise a nest yet. (2) I should say this bird is probably a hen. Catch it, blow up the feathers on the abdomen, and if it is a cock the vent will be more prominent and pointed than is the case in a hen, which is flatter, by comparison, and more expansive. Examine an undoubted cock and hen side by side first, as a guide. If you decide it is a hen, mate with a vigorous 1907 cock, and the matter should soon be proven. (3) This bird doubtless suffers from constipation when limited to a cage for exercise, and may also overfeed. Feed her plainly when caged, and supply her with green food liberally, preferably groundsel, watercress, or chickweed. If this does not improve her sufficiently, give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for a few days, and afterwards two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel for a few days longer. (4) You are evidently keeping the young birds on soft food too long. As soon as they are well able to crack Canary, say at six weeks old, you should gradually cease all soaked seeds, and give only a small quantity of egg food. Good, sound Canary in unlimited quantities is the best staple. For fuller details refer to "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., from this office.

About an Aviary.

P.E.B.—It is difficult to say definitely what would have been the best arrangement for your aviary without some rough plan, or a knowledge of the locality, but it seems it would have been much better to have made the closed shelter across the narrow part, say, 3 feet by 4½ feet, leaving 2½ feet by 4½ feet for the open flight. If the birds have full liberty to fly about the space in both sections, it will accommodate 20 birds the size of a Canary. Your two pairs of birds for breeding are therefore quite sufficient to stock it. A Linnet might be kept with them, but I should besitate before adding a Greenfinch. The place is too small for you to attempt both Canary and Hybrid breeding at the same time. You had much better stick to one subject at a time.

Breeding Difficulties.

H.S., Wor.—There must be something wrong with your general management, besides an improper diet, if I understand your letter rightly. Do you mean you give only inga and gold of pleasure, and egg bread, each one day a week respectively? If so, it is a very bad arrangement. The mixture also for the other five days would be greatly improved by omitting the linseed altogether, and doubling the proportion of summer rape. You make no mention of cuttlefish, and a good flake of this should be in each cage easily accessible by the hens all through the breeding season. Its place cannot be well supplied by grit or crushed egg shells. I also consider it best to cover the cage floor with a good gritty sand during the breeding season instead of sawdust. The arrangement of your cages and position is, I should say, the best you can do. For more detailed general treatment see reply to "Mr. A. Sinkins," in last issue, and feed your birds the same. When the birds go to nest again, add thirty drops of gin and twelve of glycerine to the water two days in every three for the last week or so before laying.

A Backward Male.

J.L.—The Norwich cock is not yet in breeding condition, and it would have been best to have kept him in another cage away from the hen until he was in better condition, as his close proximity to the hen, which is evidently in a very forward condition, may excite her to egg laying before the cock is anything like fit to run with her. Feed him on two parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple, and in addition give separately a pinch of equal parts of hemp, and inga three times a week, and every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry, and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and a pinch of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it. Give a few fresh leaves of dandelion daily for green food. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and after that two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day for a week or so, by which time he should be getting in nice fresh condition. As the damaged hind claw does not impede his movements, it will probably not interfere with his breeding successfully.

The Open Window.

S.B.—See the bird is kept quite free from draughts in future, and that its cage is so placed, or at least shielded, that no draught can blow into it when the window is open. Feed on a staple of plain Canary, and give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days the same quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion. Three times a week give a few grains of hemp, and a little green food daily. Dissolve a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine in two tablespoonfuls of port wine, and give twenty drops of this in the water two days in every three until the moulting is stopped. It will probably recover in time to get one nest from him this season. As regards the other pair, give them a small teaspoonful of mixed wild seeds every second day, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, with a pinch of equal parts of inga and gold of pleasure mixed in it. Give a few leaves and ripe heads of dandelion daily

Collapsed Hen.

J. H. Bridge.—I rather suspect the hen contracted a chill from draught or something at the beginning of the trouble. You should not keep her too warm—just a comfortable and regular temperature, quite free from any draught, will suit best. Feed on plain Canary only as a staple; every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days the same quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it. Twice a week give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts inga, hemp and gold of pleasure. Give a supply of green food daily, preferably chickweed or groundsel. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and six drops of syrup of rhubarb every second day for a week, and on the alternate days six drops of dandelion juice and two each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel If she is fairly active and bright in that time, discontinue these medicines and substitute twenty drops of chemical food daily for a short time.

A Slow Improvement.

G.M.D.—It would have been a help had you enclosed copy of last reply, as I cannot keep details of all replies in mind, and am not sure whether I have referred to the right one or not. If you could put him in a cosy place of about sixty to sixty-five degrees—not less than sixty—where the heat is regular night and day, until weather gets quite warm and settled, I think you would find him improve faster. But you must do this cautiously now, or you will run a risk of throwing him into moult. If he remains where he is he will no doubt pick up alright in a few weeks' time when the weather is warmer. As a staple give a mixture of two parts Canary to one part summer rape; and every second day give a pinch of hemp. On the alternate days give a small piece of bread scalded with milk and slightly sprinkled with soft sugar and a pinch of maw. Occasionally you may give a small teaspoonful of egg food instead of the bread and milk as a change. Also try him with a mealworm each day if you have any. They would help him a good deal if he will eat them. Give a little green food daily—dandelion (preferably), chickweed, or groundsel. In the drinking water give six drops each dandelion juice and syrup of rhubarb every second day for a week, and on the alternate days four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. After this give twenty drops of chemical food two days in every three for a week or so.

Failing to Hatch.

C.E.H.S.—You say you have tried to follow advice in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," but if you compare your dietary with that advised in the book, you will find a great difference. Still, this would not quite account for the eggs failing to hatch, and I think the chief cause is the variable cold weather of a few weeks ago, and the fact that the birds would not be in very good condition when mated. Your diet, too, for the sitting hens is quite wrong. If you refer to the last two or three issues, you will find detailed instructions on this point which you should follow next time. Certainly leave birds together, and let them nest again as soon as they like. If quite strong and healthy, the Rollers might be allowed two more nests Pair No. 4 would not be due to hatch until April 26th, so perhaps these have done better. Cleaning out cages would have nothing whatever to do with the eggs not hatching. If the operation is done quietly and methodically, it is quite safe to do it, unless it is a very nervous hen, who might leave the nest, and stay off a long time. If you have any doubts, clean out cages when sitting the hen, strew liberally with clean sand, and they will take no harm if left until the young are a few days old.

Dead in Shell.

A Constant Reader.—The causes of this trouble are too numerous and varied for a definite one to be given in any case without some information as to how the birds have been kept, fed, and treated. It may be due to congenital weakness in the chicks; or to quite external cause; chill, neglect of the hen at "pipping" time, and many others. Assuming you did not unnecessarily disturb the hen when the eggs began to "pip," and thereby cause her to let the eggs get chilled by staying off them too long, you might probably have saved them by placing them in a saucer of warm water for a few moments on the evening before they were due to hatch, and again on the morning of the day of hatching. Do this with the next brood and you will probably get over this difficulty. Any further interferences I do not advise unless you are prepared to take "a good many" to one chance of killing the chicks instead of rescuing them.

Bald and Scurfy.

Witham, Essex.—Am afraid you will not do much good with this bird. The condition is not infectious, but, still, I advise keeping such birds alone to avoid possible contagion, although I have known such birds live together with others for a long time without affecting the others. Feed it generously, on the lines advised for single singing birds, and give a liberal supply of fresh young green food daily, preferably chickweed and groundsel. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake in which mix as much as will just cover a threepenny piece of a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur and one part chlorate of potash. Allow the bird to bathe frequently and twice a week add a few drops of Jeyes' Fluid, or a few crystals of permanganate of potash, to the water in the bath. Slightly smear the bare places with sulphur ointment, or carbollsed oil (if the latter, tell the chemist what it is required for, and you will get it the proper strength), about once a week. Shall be glad to hear result in a few weeks' time.

Losing Voice and Feathers.

A. M. C.—You do not say whether the bird moulted last autumn, and it is quite likely the feathers being lost now are simply due to an interrupted moult at the proper season being now completed. See it is not exposed to any chills or draughts, and in addition to the diet of Canary and rape, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of sherry and one of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give a little chickweed, or a leaf or two of dandelion. Give a bath on fine mild days three or four times a week. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, six each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, and two of oil of eucalyptus, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel. You may continue giving these medicines in alternate weeks until the bird has stopped moulting and recovered its voice.

Rings and Seeds.

P. Hoslett.—(1) You may put on closed rings at ten or twelve days. If you put on too soon they are very apt to slip off in the nest, whilst if the operation is delayed too long there is a risk of injuring the claw or leg in putting them on. If proper care is taken in handling the birds and putting on the rings, there is practically no risk of breaking claws—this is invariably the result of carelessness or clumsiness. Yes, the hind claw is held back against the leg for the ring to be slipped over. Always look a day or two after the operation to see if any have slipped off. In all cases where closed rings are not compulsory, I should prefer open rings for marking purposes. (2) The sample of Canary is very small and of poor quality. (3) I should not advise the use of this mixture for Canaries except as a very occasional tit-bit, or for birds in large aviaries. Send separate query, with sample to our British bird expert.

Brevities.

Hens Not Laying (Anxious One).—You evidently made the mistake of mating up when the cocks were ready, regardless of the fact that the hens were not in proper condition. You must now exercise patience. Add a little summer rape to dietary each day, and give a small teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake, with a pinch of inga and gold of pleasure mixed in it daily. Give four or five dandelion leaves to each pair daily. You may give a pinch of Epsom salts for one or two days in the drinking water. You need not separate them whilst undergoing this treatment.

Food for Rearing in Aviary (R.H.S.N.).—Am afraid the prospects of successful rearing in such a mixed collection are rather remote. If young are reared, they will probably be fed largely upon the ordinary seeds, and green food, so there will be no necessity for the specialised feeding plan adopted in cage-bred birds. When they are hatched, give a liberal supply of green food, and see it is never allowed to lie about until stale. Give a more liberal supply of rape, and also a supply of cracked hemp. A saucer of some kind of soft food may be added and you will have to take the risk of the other Canaries getting the lion's share. If you do not care to use egg food, put a puppy biscuit, one with no meat in it, in a saucer, cover with boiling water, allow to stand until soft, then drain and squeeze out as much moisture as possible, and put a saucer of this in for the birds. It will form a very efficient substitute in such a case as yours.

Seed Samples (Clydebank).—Both samples are very small, and of poor quality. The only good point about them is that they are sweet. No. 1 is the better.

Texas Crackers (Latimer Walters).—You should be able to get these from any good grocery stores or confectioners. Small shops probably stock only a few kinds, which are in greatest demand locally, but even these would probably get any special kind to order. If not, enquire at a good store in a neighbouring town, and if not stocked at one place try another.

Cause of Death (M.A.C.).—Your letter contains no definite query, so I am rather at a loss to know what it is you wish to know, seeing the bird in question is dead already. If you wish to know the cause of its death, it is too late to ascertain this now, as only a post-mortem could have settled the point satisfactorily. It might have been an acute attack of pneumonia, or the rupture of a blood vessel internally. Am inclined to think the latter the most probable cause.

What Seed? (Contester).—Sorry I am not enough of a botanist to tell to what species of plant the seed belongs, neither should I care to use it regularly or with any freedom, if taste is any criterion of suitability. Perhaps our British bird expert could tell you more about it if you send a sample to him.

Footsore Hens (D.B.).—Glad to hear first hens are now sitting. Continue to follow up treatment advised, as each ben is about nesting again, and let us hear effect, if any, it has upon the footsoreness. As regards young hens not sitting the first clutch, I am afraid your experience is not the general one. Do you take away the cocks? If so, it is quite likely this was the cause of the hen refusing to sit after laying the fourth egg, although she sat quite well after laying the first until the fourth was laid.

Making Preserved Yolk (M.G.P.).—I do not profess to know details of manufacture of this, which is a trade secret, more or less. But I believe all that is necessary is to separate yolks from whites, spread them in shallow pans, and submit to a current of dry, warm air until the moisture is quite evaporated from the yolks. The dried yolks are then scraped up, broken into flakes, and packed in air-tight tins, when it will keep quite good for a long time.

Colour Food ("Constant Reader").—Given a fair amount of natural colour bred in the stock, it is quite possible to feed Norwich on tasteless pepper alone. But if the natural colour is deficient, or you want a very hot tone, it is best to add a small proportion of hot Natal. A good mixture is composed of one pound pure tasteless, two ounces Natal, and four ounces soft brown sugar, thoroughly mixed, and blended together.

Enamelling Cages (Painter).—I have never used the particular brand of enamel you name, so cannot tell what it is like. But any good, hard-drying enamel, if properly used and allowed to dry thoroughly before the birds are put in, is quite safe to use for inside of cages.

Breeding Green Yorkshires ("Green Yorks. Canary").—If there is plenty of green blood in the yellow cock, you would undoubtedly breed a few green by mating him with a green hen. The bulk of the young would be more or less heavily variegated with a percentage of broken greens. But if your aim is to breed all greens, a self green cock, with dark legs, and sound in colour on throat and vent would serve your purpose much better than a yellow cock.

Fed or Non-Fed (Learner).—Most certainly people breed with the same birds as "they feed with pepper," to use your own term. But don't you think this is rather an unfair way of describing colour feeding? Colour-fed birds are not only used for breeding purposes, but show quite as high a percentage of fertility as non-fed birds. Indeed, the usual experience of many fanciers is that colour-fed birds are more successful breeders than non-fed ones, which was, I believe, the general consensus of opinion when our plebiscite was taken on the subject. So your single isolated experience does not prove the reverse to be the general thing.

Cause of Refusing to Sit ("First Attempt").—I know at least one frequent cause of a hen's refusing to sit when she has laid three eggs—that is, removing the eggs as laid, and failing to put a dummy in the nest in place of them. One dummy is sufficient, but if none at all are inserted, if the hen is only going to lay three eggs the desire to sit will often pass off before the eggs are replaced on the third evening. It is also quite possible, as you suggest, that the nest was too glaringly exposed. Next time try covering that portion of the cage just before the nest with a light covering of some kind. You may put them together again at once, but do not give nesting material until the hen seems ready to use it.

Trouble with Hens (Gwavas).—You probably paired the birds before the hens were quite ready, and in consequence they have so far been merely playing at nesting. You can only patiently await results, which, as the hens appear to be coming quite forward now, may not be delayed much longer. You ask if I think your hens are too fat or too thin, yet give no idea how you feed, nor whether the birds are plump or otherwise to handle; therefore, I can form no judgment on the point. You might try giving but little soft food, and sprinkling it with a few grains of inga and gold of pleasure. Also add a pinch of Epsom salts to the water for one day.

Average Number of Eggs (P. Murphy).—The average number is rather a misnomer here, as I expect you wish to know what is the usual number in a full clutch. To go to the two extremes, clutches vary in number from one to eight or nine, but the commonest numbers in normal clutches is four and five. Five is the commonest number during the early part of the season, and four towards the end of

A Hen-pecked Hubby ("Brightonite").—The cock cannot have been in proper breeding condition yet. If he has not yet made any further progress, confine him to one compartment by himself, and feed him on a staple of two parts Canary to one rape. Three times a week give half a teasponful of hemp, and on alternate days same quantity of egg food, with a pinch of inga and gold of pleasure mixed in. Give a small stool of dandelion, five or six small leaves and the flower heads, daily. Continue treatment until he is in full, vigorous song, and making advances to the hens. They should breed alright flying together, but you should hang up at least five or six nesting sites in different places for the three hens. No. 2 hen making grimaces at the cock when he starts singing, does not necessarily mean she is a cock.

Hen Not Sitting (B.H.).—There is only one really practical way out of your difficulty, and that is to mate up a pair of common birds of a good feeding strain at the same time as the Norwich, and transfer the eggs of the Norwich to the common feeder to be hatched and the young reared. The eggs of the common hen would, of course, have to be sacrificed. The only question you have to consider is whether the Norwich hen is sufficiently well bred aud valuable to make this engagement of a "wet nurse" for her young worth the trouble. If the Norwich is berself nothing out of the ordinary, the game is scarcely worth the candle, and I should discard her without a solitary qualm.

Yorkshire with Cold (Sal Chund).—First see the bird is perfectly protected against draughts and chills. She has probably been exposed to a severe draught in some way. Stop bread and milk, and give instead half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it every second day for a week. On the alternate days give a few grains of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and linseed. Give a supply of green food—dandelion, chickweed, or groundsel—daily. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil two days in every three for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary. Sbake well together.

Egg-binding (Dandy).—It seems clear to me you interfered about egg-binding quite prematurely, as if any such attentions had been really called for at the time the bird would not have lived on for three days and then laid the egg. Again, your treatment of giving "two drops of castor oil several times" was quite enough in itself to kill any ordinary Canary. Look up reply to "Mrs. A. Sinkins," in last issue, and treat as therein advised, except that you must omit the first week's treatment with Epsom salts, and instead of tbis give a pinch of salts in the water for one day only, and afterwards twenty drops of whisky, six of dandelion juice, and three of tincture of steel every second day for the remainder of the first week. Continue afterwards according to reply named.

A Failure (Young Beginner).—I think you solve the trouble yourself when you say you fear you interfered with them too much. Many hens are quite spoilt by undue interference at hatching time. As long as a hen appears to be doing her duty and attending to the eggs, she and the nest should be left severely alone. Do not give bemp next time on the day of batching You will see several fully detailed replies for feeding when young are hatched in the last week or two. Look up these replies, and next time act upon the advice given. Certainly you may allow her to go to nest again. When the young are hatched, if she does not seem to feed them, give a small scrap of green food, fresh, two or three times a day.

Complete Failure (X Rays).—You do not mention green food, so if this silence means you did not give any, this alone is doubtless the cause of your last failure. Begin to give a little chickweed, groundsel, or lettuce on the fourth day after the young are hatched, or even earlier if the hen does not seem to feed well. If you look up replies in this and the last issues, you will find several giving full details for feeding and treatment from the time young are batched, which, with the help of the book you have, should enable you to succeed. The salt bath is just an ordinary one, the same as you give the birds to bathe in regularly, with the exception that you dissolve a small quantity of common table salt in the water—just enough to make the water taste slightly of the salt. It is very useful to give a ben to bathe in when she seems to flag in feeding about the fourth or sixth day, and will often reinvigorate her. Of course, you may let her nest again.

A Low Average (Novice).—There must be some general mismanagement, I fear, for your hens to be so erratic in laying: but your letter does not give sufficient information to show just where you go wrong. It is therefore impossible for me to say whether it is the result of overfeeding during winter. Are the hens young or old? You would be best advised to send for one of CAGE BIRDS' practical handbooks, and read up the information regarding general treatment, and see if you cannot discover where you have gone astray. Meantime feed on a staple of two parts Canary to one rape, with a pinch of hemp two or three times a week, and a teaspoonful of egg food with a sprinkling of inga and gold of pleasure in it to each pair every second day whilst nesting and laying, but discontinue it as soon as a hen begins to sit. Give a little chickweed, groundsel, or watercress, daily. Keep cages clean, well supplied with gritty sand, and a flake of cuttlefish in each one.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Winter Stock Mixture.

Nemo.—As a winter stock seed mixture for old-caged Goldfinches, give hemp and teazle 3 parts each, Canary two parts, linseed one part, with just a sprinkling of charlock and summer rape. For Bullfinches, Canary and teazle two parts each, charlock and summer rape one part each, linsced and saffiower half part each (or give a little of both saffiower and sunfiower). A cage 2ft. by 16in. won't hold many birds; I often give the whole of a 30 by 12in. cage to one Goldfinch. Two or three would be the outside number. A good deal depends on the individual tempers of the birds; some are extremely quarrelsome and not fit to be associated with others. And in a cage 2ft. long, the quiet birds can't get out of the way of the "bullies."

Management of Skylarks.

Anxious.—This is a matter I have frequently touched upon in this column. You should try your bird with a more generous supply of live food; if you can get some live ants' eggs let him have a daily feed of them. Your stock mixture isn't one that I should use myself. A good and simple stock food, which any good corn dealer or seller of bird food will mix for you, is:—Chicken (or game or pheasant) meal (without grit), four parts; meat meal, good ants' eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measnre. Damp quantity required for daily use with a little hot water, and reduce to a crumbly consistency by adding a little barley meal (or packet Lark food), mix in a little grated raw carrot or cold boiled potato, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg-flake or half a hard-boiled egg twice or so a week. Give four or five mealworms daily, and any other of the live foods so frequently mentioned by me that you can lay hands on. Give a little seed in a separate vessel (not along with the soft food), about a teaspoonful of canary seed daily, with, for a change, crushed hemp, groats, maw, or rape. Let the bird have a fresh clover turf as often as possible. Cover the floor of the cage with (or give in a deep pan) a mixture of fine road dust and sand, in which a teaspoonful of insect powder, or powdered sulphur, has been mixed. The bird will dust itself in this. It is a very excellent plan, too, to have a second drawer bottom to the cage, made of tin or zinc, which is run in occasionally filled with water, in which the bird will paddle, and so keep its feet in order, or you can fill it with very wet chickweed.

Concerning a Thrush.

Wild Bird.—I should recommend you to hang his cage in a corner of the room that is well-lighted, but away from the window, and in a spot just about breast high. Perhaps your food helps to make him wild; it is poor stuff, anyway, and hardly conducive to his "peace of mind." You give bread and cracked hemp-seed. I am often pointing out how inadequate this is. It would be better if you let the bird have a finely minced hard-boiled egg among the food occasionally. But far better if, instead of using bread and hemp-seed, you get a bag of some good brand of chicken meal (without grit), or puppy meal, from a corn-dealer's, and use this softened with hot water, mixed into some good maker's packet Thrush food (dry). The latter, used dry, will absorb any superfluous moisture. See another reply this week.

In an Outdoor Aviary.

Philomath.—I don't see that you could expect to get much song; only the two Greenfinches out of your list can be termed singers, and they are but wheezy, indifferent vocalists at the best. In the latter part of your letter you mention "Goldspinks," a name for the Goldfinch; but in the list you give no Goldfinches are enumerated. You seem, too, very uncertain about the sex of the birds, and unfortunately I can't help you, without seeing them, to decide. The Chaffinch ought to be singing stoutly. But if very wild, this would tend to keep him mute; the same with the Greenfinches. Your feeding seems carried out on excellent lines, and you certainly deserve success. You should give a good quantity of dandelion; not a "few sprigs." I should advise you to turn in a cock Canary that is singing well; also a cock Linnet and a hen Bullfinch. Remember that it is still full early for the British birds to attempt nesting. The hen Canaries are a puzzle; but probably the presence of a cock Canary would set them off.

Sexing and Life of Skylarks.

W. Rolph.—The average healthy Skylark will live into the teens of years; what is the record I do not know, but I expect it goes into the twenties. Many birds well into their teens have been known to compete in Lark singing contests, and with success, I believe. As regards the sexing: The cock and hen Skylark are coloured and marked exactly alike, practically speaking, and no beginner could sex them by these points. The cock Skylark is always an appreciably bigger bird than the hen, and has a longer sweep of wing. The difference in these points is very apparent when a good cock bird is compared with an average hen. Even when folded, the wings of the cock can be seen to reach farther down over the tail. Once one has had a little experience with the species, the sexing is by no means difficult. Any dealer worth his salt can pick you out a cock bird with absolute certainty. Pay him a fair price for doing so. For feeding methods, see reply to "Anxious."

Feeding Blackbirds & Thrushes.

Constant Reader.—This is a question I answer with amazing frequency. And it is an odd thing that almost everyone who asks it signs himself "Constant Reader." Here you are again, however. Feed the bird on the following lines (any good corn dealer would mix you the stock food. Stock mixture (store it in tins): Finely ground chicken (or game or pheasant or partridge) meal, six parts; ground silkworm pupæ, meat meal, good ants' eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measure. Get the chicken (or other) meal without grit. If you have any difficulty in doing so, finely crushed puppy cakes (or puppy meal) makes an excellent substitute; or the "broken" biscuit obtainable from the grocer. If the latter be used, add an extra part of meat meal and silkworm pupæ. Damp quantity required for daily use with grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some mealworms daily, and any other live insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. "Black-beetles" are very much relished, likewise snails, by the Thrush.

Bringing Up a Starling.

Countryside.—You should have no difficulty in bringing up a nestling Starling by hand. I advise you to take at least two, however; it is far the best, and two (or even three) represent very little more trouble than does one "baby." It is generally best to take the whole nestful, as the youngsters keep warmer when all are togetber, and thrive better. Proceed on the lines recommended by me for rearing young Thrushes, etc., this week. You can certainly occasionally moisten the food with water instead of milk. You must, however, give it animal food of some kind, either mealworms or small garden worms (cut up to a suitable size), etc. Also you could scrape a little raw lean mutton amongst its food fairly frequently, or give a little grated dried liver. When it commences to feed itself, give a good insectivorous mixture designed for the coarse-feeding Softbills, and let it contain finely minced lettuce or other green-meat or vegetable ingredient in liberal quantity. The Starling is fond of a little scraped raw meat, hard-boiled egg, fruit, finely chopped green stuff, berries, worms, snails, beetles, wasp grub, gentles, and, in fact, most forms of suitable live food. You will have no difficulty in providing him with a good varied diet, on which he will live in health for a long period. Keep in a very large box-pattern cage, and clean out frequently.

Painful Legs.

Puzzled.—It is nothing that need really puzzle you, for it is quite a common thing for aged birds to develop unsightly scales on their legs; often they are painful to the birds (as you believe to be the case with yours), and impede free movement. They certainly ought to be removed, which is not a difficult operation, nor is it dangerous providing one handles the "patient" firmly yet carefully. I have known fanciers simply pick off the scales with the sharp point of a pen-knife blade; others adopt the same procedure after soaking the legs in fairly hot water. Personally, I use heated oil—olive or salad oil put in a suitable receptacle, the latter then being stood in a basin of boiling water until the oil attains the desired heat, and of this one's finger is the best judge. After soaking the legs in the oil, the scales can be loosened and brought away, either by the thumb-nail, or pen-knife point, or nail clippers. It should be done as gently and carefully as possible, of course, care being taken not to wrench the leg, or a toe, or to squeeze the bird's body. Hot water and carbolic soap (a thick lather) I have also used with equal success for soaking the scaly parts. Afterwards wash the legs in warm water, dab dry with a soft towel, and anoint with a little cooling and healing ointment—say, Zambuk, or boracic ointment, or even lanoline. If blood should chance to show, paint the spot with "new skin" (obtainable from the chemist); failing that, with a little Friars' Balsam. Any pain is only momentary, and the operation makes for the sufferer's future well-being.

Treatment of Woodlark.

Miss Barton.—If the Woodlark is not well on soft food, treat it on the lines recommended for meating-off small Softbills to "P.M., Mon.," last week. A good stock cage can be made out of the usual type of Skylark cage (bow-fronted), one perch being placed in same (the bird likes a turf; and must also have a dust bath). The cage I myself like best is one of the pattern known as the "Lark runner" (only longer, and wider from front to back), with doors at each end, and a canvas ("false") roof. A large turf fits in at one end, a perch over the other (the "dust bath" end), and the food and water vessels hang on the front. Try this stock food: Powdered Osborne biscuit, four parts; best ants' eggs, and dried flies, two parts each; powdered silkworm pupæ one part; meat meal, half part, by measure. Take the quantity required of this, and mix it just crumbly moist with grated raw carrot, or finely chopped lettuce, watercress, or chickweed (use young leaves only), or cold boiled potato, varying it frequently and adding a little water (but only a few spots) if necessary. Woodlarks ought certainly to have a regular supply of live food—many droop for want of it. Many real good insectivorous stock foods are advertised in CAGE BIRDS every week. A little seed (especially Canary) should be given now and again; while crushed groats and coarse oatmeal are relished.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hard-bills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Hand-rearing Thrushes, etc.

Beginner.—Only three weeks ago I gave this information, and then I exhorted other readers likely to want the information to cut the reply out and keep it by them. Blackbirds and Thrushes are very easy to rear from the nest, and many people do so on nothing but bread and milk. Equal parts of stale bread and best ants' eggs (freed from rubbish), made very moist with new milk, would be a very fair food. To rear strong, lusty youngsters, however, I prefer to proceed as follows:—Boil a fresh egg twelve minutes, and, when cold, well mix with a fork the yolk and half of the white into two crushed Osborne biscuits; add to this a small tablespoonful of best ants' eggs (removing bits of stick and rubbish, if present), stirring all well together. Just before you feed, take the necessary portion of food and make it into a sloppy consistency with new milk. In hot weather (and at all times) be careful the food is always fresh and sweet. Feed a little at a time only, but very often, from dawn to dusk; and a feed after dark is not at all a bad thing. Cut a few mealworms in to pieces, also, dip them into milk, and drop them into the nestlings' mouths. As the youngsters grow, too, add now and then a pinch of small but gritty sand to the food. It seems to act as a preventative of looseness of the bowels (or diarrhœa). Give also at all times flies and like small insects; and live ants' eggs if you can get them. Very young birds want feeding once an hour (do not "stuff" them at any time) at first; every two hours or so at later stages. Cease hand-feeding when they cease to "cry" to be fed, and are picking up food for themselves. Keep warm, cosy, and scrupulously clean. No special appliance is necessary for the feeding. I have used a large, blunted (with a pen-knife) match stick with every success; likewise a quill tooth-pick with all sharp corners removed. The handiest implement I ever possessed, however, was a little bone mustard spoon, which I cut to a suitable shape and different sizes at each end (handle and bowl), and smoothed off with very fine glass-paper. Different fanciers have different ideas though. Put the food well down at the back of the tongue, and always be careful not to bruise or lacerate the tender mouths of the nestlings.

Brevities.

All Together (A. F. Lamerton).—It is certainly possible to breed both Mules and pure Canaries in the same aviary. In my opinion, in a large place like yours, the "mixture" you have therein (six hen Canaries and two cocks, with two cock Linnets and a cock Greenfinch) is a good one, and should bring success. You might add one or two more hen Canaries.

A Redpoll's Red Breast (Joyce).—Your Redpoll must have a fine "waistcoat" if its breast is like a Robin's. It is not at all unusual, however, for all adult cock Redpolls possess a red breast and poll during the breeding season. In the autumn and winter, like their near relative, the Linnet, they are brown only.

Mating a Mule (Young Beginner).—The best mate for a cock Goldfinch Mule would be either a hen Canary, or a tame hen Goldfinch. It is very doubtful whether you would get fertile eggs, though odd instances of this being done seem to have occurred. There is one apparently well-authenticated case of an escaped cock Goldfinch Mule breeding successfully with a hen Goldfinch out of doors.

Thrush Lost its Voice (C.H.H.).—Dissolve a crushed chlorate of potash lozenge in a little hot water and make up to about three tablespoonfuls with cold, then stir in a small teaspoonful of honey. Give this the bird to drink, fresh daily, for a week or so, when an improvement should be evidenced. Let the bird have some finely minced hard-boiled egg mixed among the stock food you name, three or four times a week.

Young Lapwings (Peewit).—You take me out of my depth; I have never tried to hand-rear Lapwings. If I did do so, I should follow the method advised "Beginner" this week, but adding finely shredded or scraped meat (beef or mutton) as the birds grew older, cut garden worms, and the like. I should think it would be necessary to take them at a fairly early age. These birds are not "cage" birds, strictly speaking, but your letter shall appear in the correspondence column, and maybe some reader will see it who has tried band-feeding Peewits.

Young Thrushes in a Cage (Southside).—It would not be necessary to remove the nest to the cage until the Thrushes were just about to leave the nest. If taken inside at night, you'll need to be up very early in the morning to place the cage outside again. The youngsters would have to be out of the direct rays of the sun, out of the reach of boys, cats and other vermin, and protected from rain. Let them have some water in the cage (securely fixed) when they commence to move about; also a supply of food, with a few mealworms amongst it. You will have to "cram" them if the old birds desert them prematurely, or the youngsters seem to be drooping.

Blackbirds and Song Thrushes (A Novice).—Both Blackbirds and Song Thrushes ought to be in full song now. The song of hand-reared birds is invariably somewhat disappointing unless they are given the chance of hearing a proficient old bird perform. I should say you have one cock and two hen Thrushes; the only sure guide to the sex is the song. Your description of the Blackbird puzzles me. Couldn't you get an experienced fancier to look at it? I should say, at a guess, it is a cock. Pity you don't say how you are feeding them.

A Linnet (W.J.H.).—I think you are quite right; the Linnet has been "over-fed." Probably the feathers will not come right again until after the moult. The only treatment would be smearing the part lightly once daily with sulphur ointment. But as the bird is singing well, it is quite unnecessary to take notice of what is, after all, a trifling matter. You could get heaps of chickweed, and shepherd's purse is coming along well. The best plan would be to get one ounce of sesame seed from an advertiser, as a sample.

Shall I? (Jim Wild).—Your birds must be very nearly ready, judging from the behaviour you describe, and as the weather has been fairly favourable since you wrote your letter, I certainly think you can let the couple run together right away with prospect of success. The Goldie and the Canary seem to be on very good terms. Have you tried the hen with a little nesting material? The feeding cannot be bettered.

A Siskin-Canary (H.J.P.).—I presume you mean a Siskin-Canary Hybrid, and not a couple for Hybrid breeding? This stock mixture will suit admirably: Canary and teazle two parts each, summer rape and charlock one part each, and just a small sprinkling of linseed. As a change, give occasionally the packet Finch mixture put up by some good maker; also a little thistle, dandelion, maw, wild seed mixture, etc. Any of the usual green foods will be relished; especially seeding chickweed and shepherd's purse.

Concerning Two Thrushes (O. J. Stupple).—I don't consider bread good fare for caged Tbrushes (nor bread and milk); have often said so in my answers; see other replies this week. The overgrown beak should be trimmed down to the normal size by the aid of sharp scissors. Into the drinking water of the other Thrush I advise you to stir a small teaspoonful of Condy's fluid daily, using a pot or glass vessel only. The places you will have to anoint gently once or twice daily with just a little sulphur ointment. This will improve matters.

Goldie and Linnet Couples (Dunelmian).—It often happens that the Goldie goes off song, or sings not so freely, after he has been put with his mate. The same thing happens with cock Canaries. The eggs won't hurt so long as the pan is lined with something—say, a felt or swansdown lining. The eggs may be fertile; a hen will often lay but three eggs, and that alone does not prove them unfertile by any means. If clear, then let her sit about 10 days. You can keep the two hens with the Linnet providing they do not disagree, or interfere with one another's nesting arrangements, which it is probable they will do. Pleased to know my advice has brought you success.

Half-a-Dozen (A.S.T.).—You will find the following half-dozen agree very well if given a fair amount of space, and not barm the Canaries: Linnet, Goldfinch, Siskin, Twite, Redpoll, and Bullfinch. They are not expensive, either, especially if fresh-caught (or not house-moulted); though then, of course, they are likely to be somewhat unsteady (wild). For advice on Foreign birds, please address your query to our F.B. specialist, Mr. W. T. Page.

Redpoll-Canary Mules (M.G.P.).—A very light-plumaged bird would be valuable; likewise a very large and good coloured dark—exhibition specimen, that is. Your birds with just white tails are of no special value; they are only suitable for songsters, or pets. Yes; a good dark can be improved by colour-feeding. I don't believe that the feeding of any hen on saffron, or anything else, would make her produce light Mules. Try it and see for yourself.

A Point Abont Mule Breeding (H.E.S.).—If you keep taking the Goldfinch away, and introducing, etc., birds of other species to the hen, you will never do any good. Take my advice and leave the Goldie and hen Canary together. It is characteristic of the Goldie to appear to quarrel with his partner—to "slang" her frequently and make as though he were about to dash at her. He likes to show his authority. But it is all noise and no wool, in almost every case, and the average hen Canary soon weighs him up. There is no cause for worry in the food; let the hen eat the same seeds as the Goldfinch—all my own do when serious business commences. Not much fear of getting fat in the breeding season.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Roseate Cockatoo with Growth.

A. Searle.—From the details you supply I take it the growth is not of a festering character. Of course, if this should be the case, it must be lanced and cleansed from all pus by gentle pressure, and fomented with tepid water, and then anointed with a little healing ointment. However, I take it that it is merely a fleshy swelling, or the bird would be in pain. I should advise painting it with tincture of iodine and keeping the bird's bowels moving freely by occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful to the ounce of water, given as drinking water. If the bird is a valuable one—good talker, etc.—I most certainly advise you to let your local vet. see it; very probably he could, by a simple operation, give the bird relief at once. If the voidings become watery, the magnesia must be stopped at once; it should not be given two days running.

Breeding Zebra Finches.

Perplexed.—You do not give size of cage; this species, however, is so ready to reproduce its kind in captivity that you need not hesitate to try them in an ordinary Canary breeding cage; but to give Foreign birds a reasonable chance (they are not domesticated like Canaries) they should have a box-type cage, 30in. long, 15in. deep, and 18in. high, with nesting receptacles at either end, well screened with heather sprays or twiggy branches. Canary, white and spray millet seeds, with green food, grit, and water will be sufficient to keep these birds thoroughly fit. When they have young to feed, a little of some good soft food mixture should be given daily. As soon as the young can feed themselves they should be removed to a separate flight, or they will interfere with the future nesting arrangements of their parents. Your Canary query has been passed on and will be answered in next issue

NESTING OF THE GOLDFINCH.

SIR,—I quite welcome a criticism of any remarks I may have occasion to make in any lecture I give. I have not, as your correspondent says, "made an error." In support of my statement, apart from personal experience, I quote the authority of Aflalo, Johns, Bowdler Sharp, and Pratt. As regards the natural phenomena; what Mr. R. J. Clark quotes, re Mr. Davis, I cannot accept; it is altogether outside of my experience. If the statements made are the results of aviary breeding, well, we hear of some astounding results. Some of them happen once in a life-time.

BARKER CLEGG.

CINNAMON BORDER FANCIES AND THEIR COLOUR.

SIR,—I am pleased to see that the discussion on the above subject is still to the front, although it is rather a strong statement to make, viz., that I haven't seen "half of the Cinnamon Borders shown last season." I think myself the pick of these birds would be at the Scottish National, and with those I have seen at the local shows, I can claim to have seen a fair share. The point on which I disagreed with "Cinnamon Border" was that he said there was not a self Cinnamon Border cock previous to six years ago. I think I have fairly proved my statements, and Mr. Jas. Alexander and Mr. J. B. Moon, have corroborated it. Surely "Cinnamon Border" doesn't still dispute the fact! Since this argument commenced, information has come to me from different sources. One in point, says he has won 34 first and second prizes. He has had as many as three self-Cinnamons in one nest. I know of another who has bred both cocks and hens (self-Cinnamons) in one nest. Both of these fanciers are of very old standing, and they agree with me as to the colour not being as good now as then. In proof of my statements, I send you a letter of one of them. I am sorry to see "Cinnamon Border" refuses to disclose the catalogue numbers of the "cardless" birds he refers to, also the name of the show. If he had done so, perhaps, these particular birds would be fresh in the mind's eye of brother fanciers, and would have helped us to have formed an opinion between them and the winners, and it would perhaps have aided us generally in this discussion. Perhaps "Cinnamon Border" will oblige us with his name, and if he requires any information that would help him, it may lie in my power to be able to give it him. If he still chooses to remain in the dark, I will not go any further as to the breeding of self-Cinnamon Border cocks.

JOHN DIXON.

The letter to which Mr. Dixon refers is as follows: I have been reading your letters in CAGE BIRDS. Your friend "Cinnamon Border" wishes to know why they were not shown. Well, I can tell you why they were not shown. Our Border Fancy judges would not put them in the money. Now, I should know, as I have won 34 firsts and seconds. When breeding I have had as many as three Cinnamons in a nest. It was no use entering them, as it was just giving money away to show them. As for breeding Cinnamon birds the late William Morrison bred Cinnamons, both cocks and hens, but he went in for marked birds before ever I went in for showing. I have bought both cocks and hens from him. I can tell "Cinnamon Border" the reason they were not shown: it was because the whole of the prizes went to the Greens against Fouls. At some shows the prizes went to Greens or Fouls, at others Greens or Cinnamons. Who showed at Wigton? Was it not I? And did I not win second? I have bred Cinnamons before there were any classes for Borders at City Shows. I thought this might help you to fight "Cinnamon Border."

STRAY NOTES ON MULE AND HYBRID BREEDING.

SIR,—Mule and Hybrid breeding here (Ramsey, Hunts.) last season, seeing everything promised so well in the early part (fertile eggs from the Goldfinch and Canary being got in April), I am sorry to say did not turn out so well as was expected. I did not hear of a single specimen being raised. There were plenty of eggs about. A nest which my hen Bullie sat on had four eggs, which made the third lot for that year, she being paired to a cock Redpoll. These I had seen to pair time after time, but I was obliged to let the Bullie hen have the eggs herself, as I had no Canary to put them under. She accidentally broke the eggs of two nests, after sitting like a Canary. I hope she will this year reward me for all my patience, of which, I can assure you, I exercised plenty; but my luck was most cruel. Another pair, the Linnet-Bullie, again nested. The hen laid five eggs at the cage bottom. I replaced them in a nest box, and she seemed quite content, and sat well, but I had no luck with them. She had seven eggs before this in two nests, all of which were laid at cage bottom. Some got broken, and only one of them proved to be fertile. Also a friend of mine had no good luck with any of his Hybrid pairs. He had plenty of eggs. One pair, the Twite and Bullie, he had two nests of eggs from. The Bullie sat well, but the eggs, I believe, were all clear. He also had a Redpoll-Bullie up, but those eggs which were laid were all three clear. He tried, too, to breed a nest of Bullfinches in a cage. I believe he got the Bullie hen to build, and she laid; but all the eggs were clear. I know it is very rarely that a cock Bullfinch will breed in a small cage. This season he intends, I believe, giving them a trial in an outdoor aviary. Another friend of mine, who, early in the season, bred a good, nearly clear Goldfinch-Canary Mule, had no more luck with this pair. He had only very bad luck with all his Canaries. In fact, the season was the worst I can remember about this district. Only one, a novice too, put up one pair of birds and had three nests, two of four eggs each, and the last one of five.

A FATAL ATTRACTION.

SIR,—I noticed the following account in a weekly paper recently, sent by "H. G. H.", which may interest readers of CAGE BIRDS. The writer states: I have a piping Bullfinch, a cock, in a cage which usually stands on the window-sill of a ground-floor room. It was in this position a day or two ago when, on passing the window outside, I saw lying on the ground a dead hen Bullfinch. It was quite warm, and had evidently just been killed. There was no mark on the bird except a contusion on its head, which was only visible when the skin was removed. There seems no reasonable doubt that the little bird met its death by dashing itself against the window-pane, and, again, no reasonable doubt that it did this in a too energetic courting of the handsome male within. It seems to be a great deal more interesting than if there had been a hen bird within and a cock bird trying to get at it—that is the normal wooing with birds and all animals. It is a little abnormal that the hen should thus fall a victim. It is a tragedy which has a moral—too obvious to be worth insisting on.

C. HALSTEAD.

MY EXPERIENCE IN THE BREEDING OF SCOTCH FANCIES

SIR,—These few notes may be of interest to the beginner taking up with this beautiful variety of Canary. In the first place, I would advise the beginner to purchase nothing but good stock. Let him place his orders in the the hands of some wellknown Scotch Fancy breeder, whose strain he can rely upon. Even if he has to pay a few shillings more, it is far better to do this than purchase birds of inferior quality. But avoid purchasing birds with a frill, which I consider very objectionable, as a good Scotch Fancy should be (as they call it in Scotland) clean cut; that is, having no frill protruding from either the throat or breast. The birds should also be of good size, as the smaller birds have to give way to the more commanding specimens on the show bench. I have kept and bred Scotch Fancy Canaries for a considerable number of years, and have always found the majority of them good feeders. Still, there are exceptions. Some Scotch Fancy hens (like hens of other breeds), are not to be relied upon; so it is a safe guide to always keep one or two common hens for feeders, as I have myself at the present time. The breeding of Scotch Fancies is very interesting to the beginner, as when you get a nest of young on to the perch, it is very amusing and exciting watching them pull themselves together; you will then be able to form an idea as to which of them will turn out to be the best specimens. But the beginner must bear in mind not to expect to get show birds out of every nest. I have found in my experience that if I can get one or two good birds (off one pair) in a season's breeding, I have done remarkably well. The Scotch Fancy (like the Belgian) is a bird of position, which I consider is the most graceful bird we have, and as hardy as any other variety. The beginner would have no difficulty in keeping singers, and the majority of them are fairly good. I would advise the beginner to look well after his hens through the winter, as on this depends his future success. In breeding I give my hens in the very cold weather a pinch of maw seed about twice a week. I also give in addition on the alternate days half a tea-spoonful of the following mixed seeds:—Inga, maw, rape, linseed, and gold of pleasure; which they seem to thoroughly enjoy. As regards egg-binding, I am seldom troubled with hens having this complaint, as by giving a small quantity of the above-named seeds to each hen a few weeks before pairing them up, I find that this prevents the troublesome complaint. If I get one egg-bound I give her a little gin and glycerine in the drinking water, which soon puts matters right. I trust these remarks will be of some benefit to the beginner. A good specimen of the graceful bird will always command a fair price. I hope every fancier of this variety, who gives the proper care, study, and attention to his birds, will have the success he certainly deserves.

A SELF-ACTING FOUNTAIN FOR AVIARIES.

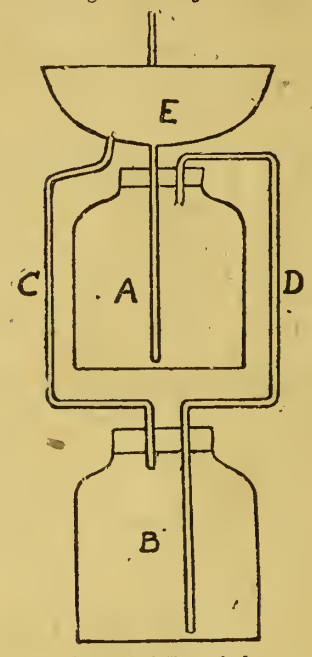
SIR,—I see in CAGE BIRDS, dated April 10th, two ideas for fountains for aviaries, but only one of them will work, and that is F. C. B.'s fountain. I don't like to contradict it, but Mr. Hawes has made the same mistake as "Bird Lover" did the other week; in fact, it is the same idea, only in a slightly different form. If you consider the diagram, as published, you will note that when you fill the top bowl E, the water runs down A into tank E2, but with the return pipe being at the top the water forces the air before it and out at the nozzle, and consequently you get no pressure at all, and the fountain does not play. The two taps on the pipes, too, are quite superfluous. To make it play, pipe A should be cut off just inside the tank E2, and the pipe B should go within ⅜in. of the bottom.



"A. M's." Fountain.

When you fill the top tank after these alterations, and the water has risen above the bottom of pipe B, the air is trapped and the weight of the water above compresses the air and forces the water up pipe B and out at the top. If made perfectly airtight it would not stop playing till the water had evaporated or been used. I might suggest as improvements, that the pipe A be of a larger diameter than B, and that a biscuit tin be used for the bottom tank, which paint inside and out except where the lid fits on, and solder that up well; this without the taps would make the cost about 2s., and cover it well at that (6½d. bowl, 6d. tin, leaving 11½d. for piping and paint). A gentleman wrote the other week asking how to make "Bird Lover's" fountain work. Although I am not "Bird Lover," I will explain how it can be made to work in two different ways, and am enclosing a diagram which will explain. If you will note the difference between "Bird Lover's" diagram and mine you will find that the pipe I have marked C is cut off just below the cork in jar B, and the pipe D is continued nearly to the bottom; that is all the difference required to make it work for the same reason I have explained in the other idea. Another way in which to make it work is to leave it as you have made it, and fill the top jar before filling the top bowl; by doing so you will trap the air that is in the bottom jar and so get the pressure; but not so much as if it were made the way I have described. If altering the one you have made, make the down-pipe C of a larger diameter than the up-pipe D, as it will greatly increase the throw of water. If this will help those who wrote, I shall have written to some purpose. I wish CAGE BIRDS and all fanciers every success.

A BURGLARY IN THE LEYTON DISTRICT.

Some Birds Stolen.

SIR,—Much to my regret, I have to announce that a most daring and callous robbery in broad daylight took place at my residence between the hours of 3 and 5 p.m. on Wednesday, the 21st of April. The first notice reached me when my wife came to the firm I work for, and informed me that my house had been broken into during her absence from home—she having taken the two children out for a "blow." I at once got leave of absence from work. On going upstairs, the first room I made for was my bird room, the door, which was closed safely when leaving, was wide open, and all the sitting hens off their eggs. On looking around the room, I was amazed to find three of the very best Norwich I possess missing. This loss in connection with my hobby is most painful to me, owing to the fact that two of the stolen cock birds had put their hens to nest, but were partitioned off from them for the purpose of running two hens with one cock, and were in different parts of the room. Perhaps these cocks, singing so stoutly, drew the intruder's attention. I proceeded to the front bedroom, and found everything upside down, like a rag and marine store, all the drawers of the dressing table, etc., thrown in all directions, and on taking an inventory of my losses here, these were a gold locket and chain, gold ring, gold brooch, gold chain and pendant, etc. I hope you will be good enough to publish this letter in your journal, which I sincerely trust may be the means of putting fanciers on their guard, especially where hawkers, etc., are concerned. I may further state that the police have the case in hand, but up to the present there is no clue to the culprits.

A. T. BILLINGSLAY.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF AN OUTDOOR BIRDROOM.

SIR,—In reply to J. G. Leigh, allow me to state that the matchboards for the end section should be nailed to the inch-and-half side of the sparring and the side sections to the two-inch side. With respect to the matter of laying the floor, before nailing in matchboards on the end sections inside, get three spars the exact length of your floor space (inside measurement); lay them at equal distances apart on the bottom cross bar of the end sections, and then drive a two-inch nail into the end of each spar, from the outside, to keep them in position; cut the matchboards to fit round the spars when nailing on. For greater support, you may run a piece one-inch square along the sides to carry the ends of flooring boards. It is not necessary to nail the floor boards except the last one, which you put in. After laying the floor, cover with oilcloth, and then run a beading or skirting board all round the room; this will keep your floor in position, and will be a deal handier to take up in case of removal.

J. W. LAWTON.

THE BORDER FANCY CANARY IN THE SOUTH.

SIR,—As I fully expected, "Wee Macgregor" either cannot or dare not answer my questions, nor deny that he and Mr. J. Robson are one and the same person. It being usual to take silence as an admission, I must express my gratitude to Mr. J. Robson for publicly charging me with being J. Smith and W. M. Thomson, because I can now refute such a malicious and slanderous statement. I am not a disappointed exhibitor, as he now suggests, but I fear he may be influenced in his attitude towards me by my action with regard to him in connection with a certain London show. Don't think for one moment that you can silence me with Mr. R., inuendoes or your proverbial slashing attacks. I defy you to repeat the statement. A pleasant little action would be interesting, would it not? It would, I think, reveal who you are? I am sorry, John, I cannot accept your foolish challenge, because (1) I am not J. Smith who made the statement; and (2) it is utterly impossible, as you know, to get the birds together at this time of the year. But if you are really anxious to provide money for the Fresh Air Fund, I will give that amount if you can prove I write under noms de plume. It is not that others see the similarity, but because I am afraid your brother in Carlisle spread the story. Finally, think well before you attack me again. I am long-suffering, but even a worm will turn; and again, "a cat may look at a king." Are you a king, John?

SIR,—Once more I crave space to answer "Wee McGregor" with regard to the above. In the first place, he seems to doubt that any breeders who devote their whole attention to the Border fancy (or, in other words of his, "the so-called specialists"), judge this bird on its all-round merit, but get some fad about some particular point into their heads, and are "blind" to all others; further, his experience is that an all-round judge is a more capable person to handle this variety. I would ask your readers to carefully consider the above points for themselves. I am sure they can come to the same conclusion as myself, that the man who breeds, exhibits, and studies every little point (in this breed of birds so delicately fine) is in a much better position to give entire satisfaction on points which go to make up the true and only type of a Border Fancy. Perhaps those "all-round judges" are taking a few points from the head and neck of the Norwich Plainhead, and using the same to denote some outstanding point of the Border Fancy likewise! In certain reports we often see the remarks "too sparse in head and neck." The Border Fancy ideal of excellence of the B.F.C.C. gives: "Head, small, round, and neat looking; neck, rather fine, and proportionate to the head, and likewise the body." Therefore, if Mr. Smith or any other person sees birds in the money at shows not conforming to the above points he is quite justified in either drawing the judges' attention to it, or, should he think fit, to use the fancy Press as a means to gain information, and he cannot be put down as a "crank." To my mind, to state that an all-round judge has superior knowledge to the man who makes the variety his special study, and to say the former is to be "more depended on" for all-round merit of knowing a bird, can only be compared with getting a tooth extracted by an all-round family doctor and a proficient dentist. This correspondence was started in the columns of CAGE BIRDS, and so far as I am concerned will finish there. He still holds out that Mr. Smith (and myself, by supporting him) belittles (not "libels," now, note) some of Scotland's best birds. To say "Scotland's best" were at the shows he mentions is a little premature, as I am afraid that some of Scotland's best birds have never been sent so far south. I don't want anyone to run away with the idea that some good birds are not sent, but to openly state that I am trying to libel Scotland's "very best" specimens is away from the truth. Seemingly "Wee McGregor" applies the distinction "down South" to London and suburbs, for he says that it was on account of the allegation being made against the South that his letter was written, and that what kind of bird wins in other parts of England does not concern him. I am happy to say that I take a wider and deeper interest in the breed, as my letters were penned to place all on a more equal footing, so that all might have the same ideal to breed up to. Seemingly this "Wee McGregor" must have a deep interest in the London district alone, and I am rather afraid the letters which have appeared in your columns have "rubbed him the wrong way." He has treated the writers in anything but a gentlemanly manner. His letters all through appear to me as from some person whose "dignity" had received some shock. It brings to my mind the story of a "lady of position." Husband: "Why are you so vexed, dear?" Wife: "I'm so exasperated, John. I attended the meeting of the Social Equality League, and my parlourmaid presided, and she had the audacity to call me to order three times." Now, I have no personal interest in the matter, and the B.F.C.C. has nothing to either gain or lose. I am not misleading the novices by telling them to discard all thick-necked birds from their room. It was my own experience in my struggling days, when I was trying to obtain a footing with this variety against fanciers of more experience. To this day I can see it happening in other rooms I have had the pleasure of visiting occasionally. Let us take his query to me: "If you have a good bird, except he is a little thin in neck, is it not a rule to pair him to a thick-necked bird, with the object of improving the young from both these birds, etc.?" Seemingly, he does not quite see the point at issue. I state "free" neck, and not "thin" neck, and may tell him I have not a "thin necked" bird in my room. Let us take the case of some struggling young fancier, who is placed in the same position as I was. After he looks over his stock, he finds that they are not up to the club's standard in head and neck. (I have sent two drawings, as a further guide). Perhaps he may have seen some fanciers' birds at shows which had "these" points. He writes for a good bird, perhaps pays a good price for it. The progeny will all be a little finer in head and neck, but yet a long way from the ideal. He pairs up some promising young the following year, but his chagrin is great to see them throw birds as thick in neck as was the former stock. The young fancier has, therefore, made no progress, and wasted two seasons, whereas if he had discarded all those thick-necked birds from the room, and brought a good mate to the other bird purchased, he would have had his wishes gratified in the first season; therefore, neither time nor money would have been wasted. When I am asked for advice I never give it unless I am sure of my ground; therefore, I cannot misguide anyone. I know that as water will find its own level, so will one's own actions.

NOT A SUBSTITUTE.

Ask your Corn Merchant for it. Do not be put off with substitutes for Egg Food, which naturally show a larger margin of profit than the genuine article could do. We guarantee our "EGG & BISCUIT" to contain 50 % of actual fresh eggs in a dried state, and the analysis is the same as occurs in a raw egg with the exception of moisture. Furthermore, a point of vital importance, it is perfectly soluble, a quality which greatly assists the hen in feeding her young, thereby increasing the chances of rearing ALL your young birds. Our "EGG & BISCUIT" is of a very concentrated nature, and it is advisable to feed at full strength only until the birds are from 8 to 10 days old, after which a further 50 % of Biscuit can be added, thus making it cheaper than the home-made egg food, besides being more suitable and less trouble to prepare: neither will it turn sour in the cage.

SIR,—As a Border Fancy breeder and exhibitor, I am very interested in the above discussion, which I hope may prove a great help to all breeders of the "wee gems." Now, whatever may be said to the contrary, we cannot disguise the fact that there are two types of Borders wanted—one for the south and the other for the north; and when I say north I mean over the border into Scotland. Especially is this the case in regard to greens. I am now speaking from experience, and will cite one or two instances. At the show held at Swansea last year, we gave two classes for green Borders, and a friend of mine, who, by the way, is a big exhibitor of Borders, and especially of greens, sent down a trio for exhibition. Now, seeing that Scotland is such a long way from Wales, I arranged with him to send his birds on to me a few days before the show, so they could meet our's on common ground, and be in condition after their long journey. They arrived at my house, and when I unpacked them I could see at once that they were perfection itself, from the standpoint of the Scottish standard of the B.F.C.C. By the way, one was a champion, and the other two were winners, and without a doubt were the three best greens it has been my privilege to look upon, but they stood cardless at the show. I asked the judge the reason why the champion was cardless, and he told me that the bird was too long for him. Now you may say that the judge did not know anything about Borders; but this is not the case, as in this instance the judge happens to have "made" the Border in Wales, and I have seen the standard in CAGE BIRDS that he has drawn up. Again, I have a yellow green cock Canary, which stood third at the Scottish National this year, but it is not a bit of use my showing him down South, as I cannot get in the tickets with him, although each time he has been exhibited in Scotland he has won, and I am beating him each time by my own birds, which it would be useless for me to send north, because they would be considered too cobby according to the ideal set up by the B.F.C. Club. And this year I have paired my birds up so that I can send to Scotland the bird that is wanted. The longer, higher shouldered, longer winged bird, is the one that takes the eye of the Scotch judges, and the bird that is wanted down here, in Wales at all events, is the rather shorter, more cobbily built, shorter winged bird. As I say, this is more pronounced in the green variety of the Border.

LINNET SINGING.

SIR,—Will you allow me a space in your valuable paper with regard to the question of the way in which we sing our Linnets in Lancashire? The conditions are as follows: In time singing, two birds are put up at once, half a minute face to face; then a screen is put between them for five minutes—every bird to sing a song of three seconds or over before it counts. What they do in the first half minute face to face does not count in time singing, but counts in quality singing.

LENGTH OF THE GOLDFINCH AND THE LINNET.

SIR,—In answer to "Lintie," in reference to my remarks re length. There would be no difficulty in finding either species at 5in. or 5¼in. C. A. Johns gives both as being 5in. Sharp, in "Lloyd's" "Natural History," gives the Goldfinch as 5.2in., and the Linnet (Linota cannabina) male 5.5in.; female 5.3in. I quite agree that some authorities do give the measurements stated by "Lintie." But in my experience of the measuring of birds the average of 5.2 comes out with both these birds.

GREENFINCH HENS FOR HYBRID BREEDING.

SIR,—I should just like to thank Mr. Johnson for his excellent essay on Hybrid breeding (published in CAGE BIRDS). I always read everything touching Hybrid breeding, but it is, in my opinion, the best I have ever read. I have found from experience that the hen brown Linnet is an excellent feeder and a good mother, keeping the nest beautiful and clean. I have bred Canary-Linnets, Goldie-Linnets, and Greenfinch-Linnets, these being each time reared by the hen Linnet. But I had the misfortune to get the Goldie-Linnets drowned. I have also bred the Goldie-Bullie, but have not had the luck to rear them. I am going to take Mr. Johnson's advice, and try the hen Greenfinch, as I have just bad five beautiful hen Greenfinches sent me.

MOCKING BIRDS AND THEIR YOUNG.

As Told by an "American Cousin."

SIR,—An old friend of mine, away in the United States of America, now and again sends me an interesting letter, and as I have recently received a long missive, I thougbt a few extracts therefrom might be of interest to readers of CAGE BIRDS. My friend remarks:—"Ever since I was a boy I have heard, over and over again, the story that if you take a nest of young Mocking Birds, place them in a cage and hang the cage outside, tbe old birds will come and feed them, and will continue to do so until the young reach a certain age; then, when the old birds see all hope of their ever being able to get their young from captivity is gone, tbey will feed their offspring on poisonous berries, and thus end their existence." To combat that somewbat inhumane theory my friend proceeds at some length. He says:—"Now, the trutb of the matter is this—and my knowledge of tbe case comes from a long experience with birds in their wild haunts, as I have handled thousands of them, and reared the young by hand—the old birds having fed their young up to a certain age—that is, when instinct tells them the young should be able to fly—some fine morning the parents disappear, and are not seen again until the afternoon of the same day, wben tbey both appear with tempting bits of food. They stand off a little, and call and coax the young birds to come to them for tbeir food. Tbe young birds, having fasted all tbrough the previous night and morning, are ravenous, and as soon as they see the tempting food in their parents' beaks they bolt from the nest in a hurry; in fact, it may be said that tbeir parents starve them out. If they did not do so—if tbey humoured and fed them—the young birds would remain in the nest, grow fat, and never make any attempt to fly. This can be seen in tbe process of raising the young Squab Pigeons. If you examine them you will find that at a certain age they are like a ball of butter, but as the time approaches for them to leave the nest the old birds feed them less frequently, so that when the time has fully arrived for the young Pigeons to try and fly, they are found to be very light in weight. Nature also assists in reducing weight at this period, the extra rapid growth of the flight feathers drawing a great deal of nourishment from the body, and helping in the reduction of the bird's weight to the right standard for immediate flight. This will illustrate my meaning with regard to the young Mocking Birds. The time having arrived and passed for them to take flight, and the parents seeing no hope of getting them from the cage, simply desert them—leave them to tbeir fate." My friend gives a very homely, but very apposite, illustration. He says:—"On one occasion I knew of a nest of young Mocking Birds, and watched them grow up. One day I missed the old birds, and got very anxious about them, fearing someone had shot them. I had about made up my mind to raise the young birds by hand, but a thought struck me, and I went to the edge of the woods, not far from my home, to see if I could see anything of them. I found them making love, and getting ready to raise another brood. To make sure that they were the right pair, I stayed tberc on the edge of the woods until they were ready to come home, and, boy-like, followed them, and had the satisfaction of seeing them coax the whole of the brood off to the woods. In a short time the old birds began to build again, and they raised a second brood. In those days of my boybood I could stay in a place all day to verify a moot point, although now I do not seem to have tbe same amount of patience." Then follows a sharp criticism of the person who takes young Mocking Birds, places them in a cage for the old birds to feed, and concludes that because they die they are poisoned by their parents! He says:—"If this man had not shirked his duty he would have raised the young birds by hand. But what does he do? He puts strange food into the cage tbat tbe young Mocking Birds know nothing of, nor have ever previously seen. The poor little birds sit there with a feast spread before them, of the nature of which they know nothing, and simply starve to death. Would a professional bird man adopt this method? Not likely. He would, when the critical time arrived, take each young bird out of the cage separately—pry its bill open, and force it to eat—tbat is, stuff it. Then he would put nice soft food in the cage, and watch the while he kept up the system of feeding by hand, until he saw the young commence to feed tbemselves. Wben they did so freely, he would put their food in the cage and bother no more about them. I think my views are sound logic. They come from a life-long experience with birds—the birds I love so well. Even now, when an old man, the love of them is still as strong in me as it ever was, and will not down. The first I ever noticed of old birds staying away as I have described was when I was a boy, and put up plenty of boxes and had several pairs of Blue Birds—Blue Robins, I think you call them—breeding around home. I watched them closely. I thought someone had shot two of the parent birds, but suddenly tbey appeared with food, and the young bolted from the nest. I had plenty of time to watch them in those days." This letter was written to me just at the time when, my friend says, "the Robins, Crows, Blackbirds, or Purple Grackles are with us. Their plumage is fine until they begin to mate up for the season. In their frequent battles for possession of the love of the coquettish females, the males frequently ruin their plumage. The latter generally arrive here two weeks in advance of the females, until the arrival of whom all is peaceful. Then the battles royal begin, and the females make up with the victors."

THE CURIOUS EXPERIENCES OF A CANARY BREEDER.

SIR,—Being an appreciative reader of CAGE BIRDS, from the No. 1 issue to the present one, I feel I should like to write a few lines for your Special Spring Number. I have kept birds for as long as I can reasonably remember, and have reared by hand nearly every species of British bird, including Cuckoos and Kingfishers. Who amongst Canary breeders has not at some time or another had his most ambitious hopes dashed to the ground? I for one only last year bad a nest of three good eggs from a pair of my best Yorkshires. All went well for six days, when, alas! one morning I found the hen had left her nest and nothing would persuade her to take to it again. Being at my wits' ends to know what to do, I suddenly thought of a Hedge Sparrow's nest in the garden, with five eggs in it, and as the hen had been sitting four or five days, thougbt I would risk my three good eggs, under her. So I took out four of the blue eggs and put the others into the nest, and awaited results. To my great delight at the appointed time, three young Canaries and one Hedge Sparrow duly hatched out. I then wondered how the Hedge Sparrow's bill of fare would suit the Canaries. I found, however, that the latter grew daily, and I left them for five days, when I had an opportunity of giving them to a feeder. I successfully reared the three, one of which I am breeding with this season—a fine buff green marked cock. I think I can safely call this a curious experience, and say nil desperandum. Here is another instance of what some Canaries will do. For several years a friend had a nest of Oxeye Tits in an old chimney pot in his garden, and the old birds usually reared their nest of young, 10 or 11. But two years ago his cat caugbt the old birds wben the young were eight or nine days old. I called on my friend one morning and found him in great trouble about the Tits; he said the young were all dead; but I found three still alive, and brought them away with me, and gave them to a hen Canary that was an extra good feeder. She tried her very best to feed them, and did so. However, two were too far gone to receive her attentions, but the third she successfully reared, and when he could feed himself, I let him go; for his saw-sharpening song was more than I could stand. For days he kept about the garden, and was very tame. I have had some strange experiences witb birds, but relate these two, as I think few Canary breeders have had similar.

A LOVER OF BIRDS.

WHAT IS A CLEAR?

SIR,—I had no intention of writing further upon the above subject, and would not have done so were it not for the statement which appeared in your last issue to the effect that the new bye-law passed by the N.P.C. was simply playing into the hands of fraudulent exhibitors, etc. This is so directly opposite to the ideas of those who are in favour of the new rule, that I think it is only right that those fanciers who may not have followed the recent controversy upon this question, should know what these ideas really are. I migbt say that I have been a breeder of the Norwich Plainhead for a good many years, and when I placed the proposition before the members of the Sunderland C.B.A. (to the effect that "a bird showing no dark feathers while standing on the perch should be eligible to compete in clear classes"), I did not do so without having carefully considered the advantages and the supposed disadvantages of the proposed change. Neither did I do so without having first discussed the subject with most of the principal breeders in this district, with the result that I found the great majority of them were of the same opinion as myself, viz., that it would not affect in any way whatever existing methods of breeding and exhibiting the Norwich Plainhead, and that it would do away with a good deal of fraud, and also do away with the unnecessary handling of exhibition birds. I believe I am correct in stating that societies in other districts were, quite unknown to us, also discussing this question, practically at the same time, and practically with the same result. It will therefore be readily seen tbat the opinions of the members of the Norwich Plainhead Club, as expressed in the bye-law they have recently passed, have been, and are, shared by more fanciers than was generally supposed to be the case. Now, sir, I believe the reasons for these opinions will be apparent to every fancier who knows anything about breeding and exhibiting, although whether the reasons are strong enougb to warrant the general adoption of the new bye-law, is of course, a matter of opinion, to which everyone is entitled. One point greatly in favour of those who support the rule is that they have stated their reasons why the rule should be adopted. What are tbese reasons? First, the well-known fact that many thigh-ticked birds are shown in clear classes, whether they are allowed or not—minus the dark feathers, of course! Even the opposition side admits this. Suppose a man had not a really good clear bird, but had several goods ones witb one or two dark feathers at the thighs, do you think he would hesitate for one moment to make one of them into a clear? Would any sensible man blame him for doing so? The chances of being found out are so remote tbat the temptation to remove the feathers would be hard to resist. Is it not much better to allow these thigh-ticked birds to compete witb clear birds and thus preclude the possibility of being tempted to remove the dark feathers, especially so when we know that in many cases the birds do compete with the clears, whether allowed or not. It may be said that we who favour this method are judging everybody by ourselves, but that is a line of argument which no sensible man will take, and generally emanates from those who are naturally mean and narrow-minded. Let fanciers look at the matter broadly, and with an open mind, and they will see for themselves that by adopting the bye-law of the N.P.C. they will, instead of playing into tbe hands of fraudulent exhibitors, etc., be actually purifying the Fancy to a great extent, by simply removing the possibility of a special kind of fraud, which has been going on for many years. We now come to the question of handling exhibition birds. I and many others contend that there is no necessity to handle birds of the Norwich, Yorkshire, and Border varieties, when they can be judged without being handled, for, as I stated before, an exhibitor of the short feathered varieties sends his birds out to be judged, not handled. What possible good can it do to have a judge handle a class of supposed clear birds, when in all probability one or two of the birds may have been made clear before they were sent to the show? Cases where ticked birds have been found in clear classes can only have had three origins: first, the bird may have been exhibited by a novice, who would naturally not be so expert in knowing where to look for ticks as an experienced breeder; secondly, an exhibitor may not have removed every dark feather, although he thought he had done so; thirdly, it is just possible that even a practical man may have overlooked a tick and sent the bird out under the honest impression that it was a clear. But would his explanation be accepted? I doubt it. One would be hearing sundry remarks such as "Aye, he's an awd hand; he knaws awl about a ticked bird being a better colour than a clear, etc., etc." Now such remarks as these would be obviously unjust to the exhibitor, especially if he had made a mistake, and the aspersion on his character would cling to him for some time. These things could be avoided to a great extent by adopting the bye-law of the N.P.C. which, after all, is merely legalising a condition of affairs which has always been in vogue, although not supposed to be. And I contend tbat by allowing thigh-ticks and clears to compete together we do not alter in any way whatever the conditions under which the birds are bred and exhibited, and that it is most decidedly a step in the right direction. We have not yet been given any real reason why these birds should not compete together, other than tbat those wbo favour the bye-law cannot have much confidence in our judges, or in their ability in handling birds; also that it opens the door to fraud, which I think I have proved is in direct opposition to the true facts of tbe case. It is absolute nonsense to talk about our want of confidence in our judges, etc. We do not doubt tbeir judgment, or their ability in handling birds. What we doubt is the advisability of judges handling exhibition birds at all, when they can judge them without handling. We contend that the varieties I bave mentioned should not be handled, and that it is quite unnecessary to do so. We might just as well say that anyone who favours the handling of exhibition birds shows a want of confidence in the exhibitors, or they would not want the birds handled to make sure whether they were clear or not. The cap fits both ways, which only shows the foolishness of adopting such flimsy arguments. Does anyone imagine that a judge delights in handling the birds which come under him? I don't think he does. Many of our best judges never handle the birds at all. Others handle them because they deem it their duty to do so (according to the wording of the schedule), although they would rather not, while a few (and I am glad to say, very few) with the idea of "showing off," and letting other people see how expert they are, handle every bird that comes under them. The only objection to the new bye-law is tbe fact that it does not keep the real clear birds to themselves. I know perfectly well tbat many of the older breeders have a great love for a perfectly clear show bird, and that they consider it the acme of perfection. I candidly admit that these are also my views. Yet what is the use of providing Clear classes when every fancier knows perfectly well tbat these classes are not always what they seem to be, and that in all probability one or two of the birds may not be naturally clear, although they may bave been handled and appeared to be so? No one but the exhibitor himself really knows whether or not the bird is what it seems to be. Then why not adopt the ruling of the N.P.C. and allow the birds to compete together? Should anyone desire to know which of the birds were clear and which were ticked, this could easily be done by exhibitors writing "clear" or "ticked", as the case might be, upon their entry forms, for insertion in the catalogues. The only other objection to the bye-law is the generally accepted idea that a ticked bird is a better colour than a clear bird. This would be all right if it was always correct. But is it? Most decidedly not. We all know that green blood is the "fountain-head" of colour (or is supposed to be, for at least one expert breeder does not agree with this), yet that does not necessarily prove that every marked bird is a better colour than its clear brother. Breeders of exhibition birds know perfectly well that a great deal depends upon how the birds are bred, and that it is always possible to breed a clear bird in one nest a far better colour than a marked bird in another nest may be. Taking the Border Fancy Club as an example, it certainly seems that they do not consider a ticked bird to be superior in colour to a clear bird, for we generally find their classes worded "Clear or Ticked," even where their patronage is given. Now, sir, I tbink I have said sufficient to show tbat the only real objection to the new bye-law is the question of not keeping the clear birds by themselves, which after all is only a matter of sentiment. I have endeavoured to prove as clearly as possible that it is impossible to do so, and that the adoption of the bye-law of the N.P.C. "that a bird showing no dark feathers while standing on the perch be eligible to compete in clear classes" is a step in the right direction, and I again express the hope that the other leading Norwich and Yorkshire specialist clubs will take the matter up and follow suit. I might say, sir, that this is my last letter on the subject, and I would not have written it had it not have been for the assertion made that the bye-law opened the door to fraud, which I think I have clearly proved to be otherwise. I am perfectly willing to discuss in a friendly manner any reasonable objections to the bye-law, but I do not propose to reply to further communications which simply state "objections" without anything to prove a reason for them, and which have no direct bearing on the subject.

GREEN-FOOD FOR LINNETS.

SIR,—I find that Linnets are fond of the young sprouting leaves of whitethorn which can be obtained in abundance in the early spring when green food is scarce. Having seen wild Linnets eating these, I offered a twig to my birds, and they soon stripped it. I cannot recall seeing this mentioned anywhere as a suitable food, so I thought I might notify it to CAGE BIRDS' readers. Probably other birds, Bullfinches for instance, would appreciate these sprouting buds. Another easily obtainable food is seeding grass, such as grows in any neglected back lane almost. "Meadow fescu," I think, is the correct name. Canaries and Finches relish this greatly.

SIX YOUNGSTERS IN FOUR EGGS.

SIR,—The following account of my experiences with one of my Norwich hens may interest readers. I paired up on the 27th March this particular pair, a clear yellow cock and clear buff hen. The hen laid her first egg on the 29th, she missed laying the next day, and laid again on the 31st what appeared to be a double egg, and again on the first of April she laid another double egg. On the second of April she laid an ordinary-sized egg. She then sat for twelve days, when she commenced to show signs of illness and left the nest. I am sorry to say that owing to my being away at work all day, the eggs got chilled, while the hen got so bad that I had to destroy her to put her out of pain. When I thoroughly examined the eggs, I found they were all fertile, and almost hatching. In the four eggs there were six perfectly formed chicks. Have any of your readers had a similar experience? It would be interesting to hear how they got on. This is the first time I ever had a Canary hen lay double eggs and fertile ones.

IS IT NECESSARY TO COLOUR-FEED BRITISH BIRDS?

SIR,—For pure unadulterated effrontery, I think Mr. Prior's reply to my fair criticism on his lecture re Colour-feeding British Birds, would be hard to beat, even for a novice. In this, my reply to that streak of "Old Adam" of Mr. Prior's, I will endeavour to explain to interested readers on this subject in as simple English as possible that the "rambling" is not all on my side. As I read on I became somewhat amused at the "frantic" efforts of our friend to extricate himself by his contradiction of his own utterances, and as he was compelled to give vent to something like spleen in the attempt, he leads off and finishes with branding myself with that "Honourable" title of novice, which he created at this lecture. May I suggest, Mr. Prior, that before you again attempt to correct any more "baseless travesties," it would be as well for you to enquire if the printers have misreported you; or were you led away with your own transcendence? As to novices, I'm happy to say that I know many whose experience goes a good bit beyond Wagtails, some who travel as novices, but all very carefully marked down as "Champions" in the club books, as in my own case (please refer to your own rule book of the City and Suburban for confirmation, Mr. Prior). I criticised the item of the "Bogey," and as there is much "Bogey" that many of us novices cannot understand, therefore we look to the champion experts to educate us to higher things. I'm pleased to note Mr. Prior knows "all" about the wheezes, and many more, and in thanking him for that admission, may I ask him if we are to believe him to be the expert he claims to be, and yet has never heard or read of a trimmed head of a Yellow Hammer? If he has not, then I strongly advise him to get CAGE BIRDS of a recent date and to read and inwardly digest it. Now, leaving our friend to meditate, I must, in fairness to Mr. Ramsden, admit that his statement is quite correct as to the over-feeding on "Hot Pepper," in Canaries, and I hasten to tender my sincere apologies to that gentleman, but would explain that had Mr. Ramsden kept to his subject on colour-feeding Canaries, his lecture would not have troubled me in the slightest, but Mr. Ramsden, at the tail end of his lecture, made the assertion that colour-feeding Britishers is very essential. I used his own illustration to show that in whatever form colour-food is used, it is injurious to the subject treated. In conclusion, I wish to point out to Mr. Prior that, in his lecture he called for fair criticism, and I must submit he got it. Last, but not least, as I have neither the time nor inclination to become a public penwiper to Mr. Prior, or any one else, I here dismiss further interest in this particular discussion. But should my hand be forced, I'm like the colliery lad after killing a mate he'd been fighting with, as he lay on the ground he invited him to "Coom up, Lad, I'm ready for thou." I conclude in the words of one of our greatest poets, that: "Evil is wrought by want of thought, and sometimes by want of heart."

Mr. John Allan's Outdoor Window-Aviary.

A WINDOW AVIARY.

SIR,—I beg to enclose you a sketch of an outside window aviary which I am making, with the object (primarily) of moulting out some British birds this next season. I think, also, I shall find it do for a Hybrid pair. I have found it very simple to make, and anyone handy with a hammer can put one up at a cost of a few shillings. The wired parts can be bought to size, made out of the punched bar, now so widely used. Of course, half-inch mesh wire netting could be used, but does not look so neat. The two ends are wood, with glass panels let in.

JOHN ALLAN.

A TRIO OF AVIARY BIRDS.

SIR,—Perhaps your many readers would be interested to read about my small beginning in the bird hobby. In an aviary, three feet long by three feet square, I have one hen Norwich Plainhead Canary and a pair of Zebra Finches. I have had the Canary for about eight years, and she is so tame as to be able to take a hemp seed from my lips. I used to let her out in the room, and she would hop about the floor quite contentedly; but, alas! we found that she made too much litter, so this practice had to be stopped, and she is confined to the aviary at present. But in the summer time we shall let her loose on the lawn. The Zebra Finches were given to me in December on my birthday, and a very nice present they were, too. They were ouly bred that year, and they were extremely active, keeping up their little "squeak" all the time. I gave them a cocoanut to build in some time ago, but they speedily turned it into a bedroom, and still sleep in it at nights. The little hen has been egg-bound lately, though I give her cuttlefish, grit, and egg-shell. But perhaps being only a young bird, she would not have so much chance this year. I find they like chickweed to eat, but I gave them grass-seed, and they did not seem to care for it. Their chief bill of fare is Canary seed and millet. I hope to enlarge my stock when I have more time to look after them. I think foreign Finches are more interesting than Canaries, except in regard to their song.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION, MIDLAND DISTRICT.

SIR,—Owing to ill-health, it has been necessary for Mr. W. Roslyn, of Mansfield, to resign the secretaryship of the C.B.U., Midland District, No. 7, and Mr. J. H. de Maillet, of 121, Somerville Road, Small Heath, Birmingham, has been appointed in his place. All communications should therefore be addressed to him.

ROBT. RHODES.
Chairman for the District.

A SUCCESSFUL START IN CANARY BREEDING.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper to relate my experience with four pairs Norwich and one pair of Cinnamons. On March 18th, I paired them up, and have now four young Cinnamons 18 days old and flying about; also four young Norwich about a week old, and three hens sitting on five eggs each, all due to hatch during this week. I have visited several well-known fanciers round about here, and I think we are going to have a successful breeding season. I wish CAGE BIRDS every prosperity.

WM. ELLIOTT.

THE COLOUR-FEEDING OF CANARIES.

SIR,—I have read very carefully Mr. Ramsden's lecture on the colour-feeding of Canaries. I would like, for the sake of those who find colour-feeding to be too expensive, to say that it is not necessary (as Mr. Ramsden says) to give daily attention or to feed everyday to be successful on the show bench. I tried last season to find out whether colour-feeding every other day would do, but I kept it to myself that I was trying the experiment. But when the moult was a bit advanced, and I had some birds very nearly through, I saw that it was going to be a success. So I told the other fanciers in this district, and they started on the same plan, and I can assure you that we had as good a colour on our birds as on any others that had been fed every day, and they were as level. My advice to any fancier who does not believe what I say, is to put a few birds to one side that he does not intend to show, and colour-feed them every other day, and I am sure that he will be quite satisfied with the result. I give each bird one tea-spoonful every other day, which you will notice is only half the amount required for the season that the colour-feed vendors themselves would have us believe is required. Then you save half the eggs and biscuit, and half the time necessary in the ordinary way. The reason that I write this is because I have heard so often that it is the expense of colour-feeding which hinders so many from being fanciers, and sends so many out of the Fancy. I thought I could put such up to a way by which they could save one half. I think it is the best thing to do the best we can for the greatest number, and you see there are a lot more colour-feeders than colour-feed vendors. I have colour-fed my birds now for thirteen years, and I think that it would be a grand thing if it could be done away with altogether, as it is only expense and humbug. But as long as it is allowable, in my opinion it is not "faking," as some other writers would have us believe. I have asked some of the leading judges what they thought about the colour of my birds, and they said they could see nothing wrong with them, as they were hot in colour and level throughout. So you see that I have others to prove what I have said, and I can mention their names if necessary. Those who find it too expensive, should take my advice, and give colour-food every other day. Save one half. Let those who have plenty of money feed every day, and if they have the right stock of birds in other respects, they need not fear the every-day colour-feeding; but let them make sure and withdraw the seed, and make the birds eat the food when it is given.

JAS. STEWART.

WHOSE IDEAS WERE THEY?

SIR,—I notice a letter in CAGE BIRDS of April 17th date, signed by Messrs. Mallett and Fuller, in which they suggest that a special committee meeting be called by the Leyton and District C.B.A., to discuss the above question. With all due respect, I cannot see how such a purely personal matter can concern the committee of the Leyton C.B.A. Furthermore, the slight discussion which arose at a previous meeting was ruled out of order. I must therefore respectfully decline to call the meeting suggested, and trust that the Association will not again be mentioned in this purely trade question.

B. F. FORSE, Hon. Sec.

SIR,—In last week's issue you publish a letter from Mr. Mallett and Mr. Fuller. Not knowing Mr. Fuller, I should like a word or two with Mr. Mallett, on the above question. In the first place, he says he does not wish to have any controversy through your columns. Why? But as he has started the ball, may I be permitted a free kick? Now, Mr. Mallett, you state those inventions have been on the market two or more years. That may be so. May I remind you that in my presence you saw the inventions in dispute in use six years ago in the inventor's bird-room at West Ham? As to whether or not they had been placed on the market two years ago by someone else, it does not interfere with the lecturer's claim to their invention. If you know anyone who has a prior claim, who is he?

J. ASHWOOD.

THE PROPOSED ROLLER CANARY CLUB FOR THE MIDLANDS.

SIR,—I must thank you for your kindness in publishing my two previous letters calling a meeting of the Roller fanciers at the "Swan and Peacock," Wolverhampton, for April 22. Your readers will be pleased to know that we had a most enthusiastic meeting, and decided at once to start a club under the title of the Midland Roller Canary Club, membership open to fanciers residing in the Midland Counties. It was a pouring wet night, which no doubt deterred some from being there; but 24 of the most prominent breeders and exhibitors of the Roller in this district, braved the elements to put in an appearance, and seven others informed me previous to the meeting that owing to business and other previous engagements, they could not attend, but desired to join should a society be started. These brought the membership up to 31. Several franciers present said they knew of others who will join, so that in a few weeks' time I have no doubt the club will be 50 strong. Everyone present seemed desirous of getting the club under way, and at once tackled the business of electing officers for the year. The following gentlemen agreed to take office:—President, Mr. Max Jacquemin (Wolverhampton); Vice-Presidents, Messrs. S. Albiston (Wolverhampton), and Smith (Blackenhall); Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Cadman (Wolverhampton); Hon. Secretary, Mr. J. H. Willows, Lindum House, Wednesbury. A strong committee drawn from the various towns interested is composed as follows (with the district they represent): Messrs. A. E. Freeman (Birmingham), Harrison (Bradmore), Bird and Harper (Bilston), Dimmock (Cradley Heath), Humphries (Moxley), Crowson (Short Heath), A. Crouch, Holland and Maybury (Wednesbury), and Turpin and Wakelane (Wittenhall). It was decided that the headquarters should be the "Swan and Peacock," Wolverhampton, the monthly meeting night the last Thursday in each month, and the subscription the low one of 2s. 6d. per annum, with 1s. entrance fee after the next monthly meeting, which will be held May 27, at 8 p.m. It is hoped all members and friends will turn up at the next meeting to discuss and pass rules, which will be prepared by the committee in the meantime. It was getting late when the correspondence had been read, so the President, in a few well-chosen words, asked all present to put their shoulders to the wheel and make the club a huge success. After the usual vote of thanks to the chairman a most encouraging and enthusiastic meeting was brought to a close.

The Colour-Feeding of the Norwich Plainhead.

By W. N. MIDGLEY.

In this article on "The Colour-feeding of the Norwich Plainhead," I fear I shall at the outset, incur the criticism of our "anti-colour-feeding friends," by at once declaring that, after some years' experience and close observation, I have failed to trace any of the harmful effects ascribed by them to the process, and that I am an advocate of the system, believing that the colour-feeding of the Norwich gives a pleasing finish to a taking bird. I have, however, noticed lately that the opponents of the system are inclined to shift their ground somewhat, and we hear rather less now of the alleged hurtful effects, and are treated to more diatribes about "dyeing" "faking," "being dishonest," and so forth! But in spite of these opinions, the average fancier goes serenely on with his colour-feeding, knowing that his birds' prospects on the show-bench are heightened, their value improved, and their general attractiveness considerably increased. His aim is therefore, to get the best colour that he can, and he feels amply repaid for any additional trouble he may have if his birds come through that level, deep tone, finished off by the lustrous sheen that we so much admire.

The trite axiom that "one must breed for colour as well as feed for colour," holds with as much force as ever, and the alert fancier pays as much heed to obtaining a good natural colour in his birds as to their subsequent colour-feeding; indeed, in the keenness of present-day competition he can afford to neglect no single item that goes to make up the ideal specimen. He will, therefore, use as nearly as he can, the correct proportion of marked and ticked birds to secure the necessary foundation for the added charm.

I noticed with interest recently that a discussion of the pros and cons of colour-feeding in the nest took place in the columns of the Fancy Press. Several years since I tried the experiment for a season or two, but discarded it, as I came to the conclusion that at this early stage of a bird's development nothing was gained, and that as good a colour could usually be obtained during the bird's subsequent moult—and it is to a good quick moult that we look, in order to secure the best effects of the colour-feeding.

The adult birds must, therefore, not be overworked during the breeding season. It stands to reason that birds which have been spending their strength and energy in rearing nest after nest of youngsters cannot be in that vigorous and robust condition to withstand the further inroads of the moult on their vitality, and that the depth of colour to be obtained is likely to be much less than in birds moderately worked and in good condition. Hence it is advisable, if possible, for birds to have a week or two in which to recuperate before striking the moult. As far as I can, therefore, I break up the pairs early in July (usually taking two nests only from each pair), and place them in the flight, or flight cages. The youngsters I keep in the cage in which I place them for a week or two after leaving the parents; then I transfer them to a larger cage, and then on to the flight. With the earlier hatched birds I begin the colour-feeding when they are about eight weeks old, with the later ones when about six weeks old, and generally by about the middle of July in each instance, commencing with a very small quantity—just sufficient to tinge the egg-food. I continue this for about a week, and then on each succeeding three or four days I increase the proportion of colour-food until I get it to the full strength—four teaspoonfuls to a basin of egg-food.

Perhaps, however, the reader will here remark: "But he hasn't told us how he mixes the food. Let's have the Alpha of the matter in its right order!" I will, therefore, supply the omission, and say that to each pound of tasteless pepper, I add 2ozs. of hot Natal and 2ozs. of brown sugar, and to the bulk a teaspoonful or so of salt, well mixing the whole together. As far as I can judge my requirements, I procure my colour-food in bulk at the near approach of the season, as I fancy it is better to get it mixed alike throughout, and, moreover, it has time then to get well blended. A few years back I used to put 4ozs. of hot Natal to the pound of tasteless pepper, but I find I get equally as good a colour now with the 2ozs. only.

I do not think that during the moulting season it is necessary to have the egg-food quite so rich as when feeding the young, and as a rule I use eight Osborne biscuits and about an equal quantity of bread crumbs to two eggs. Probably, one of the patent foods advertised would answer the purpose, although I have not tried them, as I am still a believe in the old-fashioned egg-food.

As soon as I commence the colour-feeding, I cover up the cages and flight with blinds of nun's veiling, either red or yellow. This is not of too close a fibre, and allows more air to penetrate than would a closer woven material.

After trying both ways of feeding—i.e., in the cages, and in the flight—I am entirely in favour of the feeding of birds in the flight. Of course, any exceptional birds I remove to the cages, when they are about three parts through the process, to finish off; but it seems to me that birds in the flight, having more room for exercise, are consequently more vigorous, shake off their feathers more rapidly, eat their food better, and generally come out a better colour than birds kept in a more confined place. Nor do I think that feather-plucking goes on to the same extent in flights as in cages, as the birds have a better chance of getting away from each other. I also favour the use of the bath during the moulting season; I feel convinced that if the bath is given with discretion, benefit arises from its use.

The Use of Marigolds, &c.

Up to the last season I used to grow considerable quantities of marigolds and nasturtiums, both of which I was in the habit of giving to the birds rather freely; in fact, I now think, rather too freely, as although they imparted a nice tone of colour to the birds I fancy the colour lacked permanency and used to fade somewhat. This last season, therefore, I discontinued the marigolds and nasturtiums, and had a better lasting colour. I would, in consequence, advise anyone who desires to use either of these flowers, to use it in strictly limited quantities. It may be deduced from this, therefore, that if the birds are eating these flowers at all liberally, they don't eat so much of the colour-food. I give the colour-food twice a day (morning and mid-day)—about half a teaspoonful per bird per meal; and for the evening feed I give plain Canary seed. Twice a week during the earlier stages of the moult I give as a change from the Canary seed, either linseed or niger, which I supply more frequently towards the close of the moult.

With a view to fixing the colour, I do not neglect to put sulphate of iron in the drinking water twice or three times a week, using a small teaspoonful of it to a quart jug of water. In the early part of the moult I procure twopennyworth of saffron, to which I add half a pint of boiling water, and from 14 to 16 knobs of lump sugar. (one need not be particular to a lump or two); and to each basin of colour-food I add one teaspoonful of this decoction, which, if it has no other merit, at least sweetens and moistens the food; but I believe it assists the birds in throwing off their old feathers more readily.

The reader will thus observe from this description of my methods that I have no deep secrets to impart, but that I follow much the lines usually adopted. To my mind regularity and evenness of quantity and strict cleanliness are the keynotes of success. It would be invidious on my part to recommend any particular vendor's food, but I would advise all to procure the best, remembering that mere cheapness is not necessarily economy. I leave off my remarks as I began—with the reiterated opinion that the colour-feeding of the Norwich Canary gives a pleasing finish to a taking bird, when the colour is even, deep and glossy. And in finally bidding the reader adieu, I add my good wishes for their success in this year's colour-feeding. May the pepper be cool and the colour hot!

FREE TRIAL OF SANDOW'S GRIP DUMB-BELLS

For every reader of "CAGE BIRDS."

WITH every pair we also send a Booklet of Exercises, showing in detail the way to perform each of the original exercises of the Sandow System, also a Chart showing how many times each exercise should be done daily by the average man or youth, together with hints on how, when, and where to exercise, how to take a cold bath, and other useful information.

This Chart contains one Month's initiatory course of Exercises suitable for the average Man or Youth, and it has been carefully prepared by Mr. Sandow for presentation and use with every pair of the Grip Dumb-bells.

If, after using these Dumb-bells for Seven Days free, you decide to keep them, send us a deposit of 2/6, and promise to pay the remainder of the price at the rate of 2/6 per month, which only means the small sum of ONE PENNY PER DAY.

Everyone has heard of the wonderful career of Eugen Sandow, who, although a delicate lad whose life was often despaired of, by his own efforts made himself the strongest man the world has ever known, and by performing feats of strength of unparalleled magnificence, defeated every strong man who appeared against him, and won for himself a name which will live for ever.

Such a career is of interest to every young man who wishes to improve his health and strength, for it shows that success is to be obtained by those who put their whole heart and soul into their efforts.

SANDOW'S GRIP DUMB-BELLS.

Sandow's Grip Dumb-bells are now acknowledged to be the most perfect Physical Appliance ever invented, and hundreds of thousands of pairs are in daily use in every country on the face of the earth. They are equally suitable for the delicate and the strong; their resistance can be adjusted to the strength of the weakest and increased as occasion arises.

From five to fifteen minutes' exercise daily with this apparatus will give health and strength to the weakest and increased strength and stamina to the strong. Exercise with the Dumb-bells quickly develops the muscles of the arms, deepens and strengthens the chest; whilst exercises are also included for developing the leg muscles and improving the general physique.

Don't delay, fill in the form below, and try them for yourself, you will then know they do more than we claim for them.

A Noted Norwich Plainhead Breeder and His Methods.

This Article is the Record of a visit paid to one of our best known breeders and exhibitors of the Norwich Plainhead Canary, Mr. S. Cook, of Newton Heath, Manchester, and is written by Messrs. J. & J. Hopkins, (Bolton).

Of the countless number of breeders of Norwich Plainheads in this country, one of the most popular and highly respected is the subject of our article, in the person of Mr. Sam Cook, of Manchestor. He is one of Lancashire's premier breeders and exhibitors, and is the winner of the Norwich Plainhead Club's challenge cup for 1908. Mr. Cook, although not by any means the oldest breeder (having commenced in 1893) is without doubt one of the most successful, having bred winnors consistently year after year; and his strain is now acknowledged to be one of the finest in the Fancy, whilst his career in the exhibition world is too well known to need commenting on, his birds invariably being found to come out on top, no matter where he shows or in what competition. Of a quiet unassuming nature, "Sam," as he is familiarly known, has made a host of friends in all parts of the United Kingdom, and is a well-known personage at all leading shows; and feeling sure that a very large number of the readers of CAGE BIRDS would greatly appreciate anything that he might be induced to say (as he is a man of very few words), we took the opportunity and accepted a long outstanding invitation of journeying over to Newton Heath to hear him give his views on the Norwich Plainhead Canary and his methods of breeding same.

Some of the Winning Specimens.

As could only be expected of such a breeder as Mr. Cook, everything in the bird-room was in first-class order, the cages being very clean and well arranged, while the birds themselves were in grand condition and looked very fit for the breeding season. On looking over his stock we noticed many birds which had rendered a good account of themselves during the last show season, and which are as well-known to the majority of Lancashire exhibitors as their owner; notably (1) the ticked yellow cock bird, first Bolton, Manchester, Accrington, Liverpool, Scottish National, etc., a grand bird possessing everything that is needed in a good Norwich, viz., type, quality, size and colour; (2) the big dark-tailed Buff hen which was the sensation of the 1907 Burnley show, a slashing hen, rather too big now for an ideal show bird, but a grand mate for the yellow ticked cock, from which pair some tip-top stuff should be produced; (3) the old champion Buff cock bird which had such a successful career on the show-bench for two or three years, winning at practically every show of note, including Manchester and the Scottish National; (4) the wing-marked unflighted Buff, winner of second at the Scottish National. This bird is bred from the old champion Buff cock and Buff hen, and is a gem for shape and quality, and looks like making even a better bird than his father. He is paired with (5) the clear yellow hen, first at Burnley, Bolton, Manchester, Scottish National, etc., one of the best yellow hens on the bench to-day, these making a rare pair; (6) the clear unflighted yellow, first at Bolton, Manchester, Scottish National, etc., a bird which should have a grand future before it; and (7) the eye-ticked yellow unflighted, first at St. Helens, etc., a big, slashing bird of grand shape, quality and colour. We also noticed several excellent young birds which have not as yet been out, the pick of which, to our mind, were a grand clear buff hen, a regular model for shape and beautifully feathered—one which, if it goes on in the right way, will take some beating—and an unflighted variegated yellow cock, shorter and thicker than many buffs, and of grand quality and colour; this, too, with luck, should be found not far behind during the next season.

The Uniformity of Stock.

What claimed our attention as much as anything was the uniformity of the stock throughout, overy bird in the room possessing grand type and quality; and especially was this noticeable with respect to the hens, the majority of these being hard to find fault with. Their only failing (if it can be termed a failing) is that several were a trifle small, but as Mr. Cook explained, he did not care much for the large hens for stock purposes, but preferred the hen to be the model of what a Norwich Plainhead should be. But he liked the cock, he said, to be as large as possible, provided, of course, it had the other points in proportion, as he considered that the size came from the cock bird and the shape, etc., from the hen. And an inspection of his stock will convince anyone that this is the practice he follows out, and he always turns up with some good big birds. As a matter of fact, he does not care for very large unflighted hens, as he finds out that they generally get a little too loose in feather the year after; he prefers the medium-sized hen as the best unflighted one for moulting out into a good show bird the second season.

Methods of Breeding.

As to his methods of breeding, whilst following largely the usual method of putting yellow and buff together, he is a firm believer in double-buffing, and if every one could only do it as successfully as he has done it, there would be more good birds on the show bench to-day. He has bred many winners in this way, the old clear buff hen of 1907 (which won in that season firsts at Sheffield, Bolton, Pendleton, Altrincham, Halifax, etc.), the wing-marked unflighted buff referred to, and the unshown clear unflighted buff hen, also referred to, being typical examples. Of course, as he says, care is needed in selecting the type of bird for this purpose, and also a knowledge as to how it is bred; but if both birds are nice, tight-feathered specimens, bred from good stock, and there is plenty of colour in them, he cannot see how they can fail to produce something really tip-top. And he has always found them to be quite satisfactory as regards compactness of feather; in fact, we noticed that several youngsters were even tighter in feather than the cock bird from which they were bred. Mr. Cook has bred several good birds by double-yellowing, but he has had better results by double-buffing. The only thing he has against double-buffing is that the yellow blood is reduced and that thero is a tendency towards shortage of yellows. If, however, he wishes to double-yellow, he uses the thickest, shortest-feathered birds he has, as the youngsters are apt to run a little slimmer and longer.

With regard to inbreeding, although not believing in such close relationship as father and daughter, etc., he is convinced that judicious inbreeding is absolutely necessary in the building-up of a strain, and his stock birds are all related to one another, one strain running right through tho room. One thing we noticed about Mr. Cook's stock was the number of green-marked birds he had in his room, thus proving that he believes in the use of green blood, and tho rich colour of his birds goes to show that there must be something to gain by its introduction.

Questioned as to his method of feeding, Mr. Cook said that he had always found the old-fashioned way to be satisfactory. He therefore rears his youngsters on egg-food prepared from hard-boiled eggs and home-made bread crumbs, and he did not think it advisable, he said, to make any change now. He is a believer in a liberal seed diet, especially during the show season, and when he has paired up he gives a fair amount of linseed as a preventative against egg-binding. For green-food he prefers water-cress during the early part of the season, whilst it is young and tender, and afterwards young lettuce leaves. He is still of opinion that the best method of colouring is colour-feeding, and that the best results are attained by mixing the colour-feed with the ordinary egg-food daily, adding, of course, a little sugar to make it more palatable and a little maw seed.

Replying to the question as to what he considered the most essential point of a Norwich and the one to which he attached the most importance, Mr. Cook said that a Norwich was not a good bird at all, in his opinion, if it had not a fine bold head. He did not fancy a bird which was at all "snipy" in head, even if it possessed every other good point. His ideal Norwich was: Head nice and round, having a good width at entrance and back, yet free from browing, with a neat rise at front and full cheeks; neck as short and as thick as possible, and well filled in under beak; chest deep and broad; shoulders wide; back well filled in; body short and well cut away behind; wings and tail short and well packed; legs well set back, so that their is as much body before and as little behind as possible, as he personally likes the bird to be all front, finished off with feather of the best possible quality and of a nice hot colour. He is fond of a good big one, but he wants the size in the right place and not in length; and he must have a short chubby bird with plenty of quality and colour.

Our final question before taking leave of Mr. Cook and of Mrs. Cook (who, by the way, seems to be thoroughly interested in the birds and to know each individual nearly as well as Mr. Cook does), was: Whether the Norwich Canaries of to-day were superior to the Norwich which were exhibited when he first joined the Fancy? We also asked Mr. Cook where he considered the hot-bed of the Norwich was? He replied to the effect that the Norwich of to-day were a great deal more typical, taken all round, than was the case formerly, and that there were moro birds of the correct stamp being exhibited. Although there were some good birds down South, and grand birds bred every year all over the country, Lancashire breeders, he considered, turned out a greater number of excellent birds than were produced in any other part of England.

OUR COLOURED PLATE.

THE ROLLER (Coracias garrulus).

A Beautiful Occasional Visitor to Our Shores.

The bird so admirably depicted by Miss L. M. Medland on the coloured plate accompanying this issue, is known as the common European Roller, to distinguish it from the dozen or so other members of the genus Coracias. The great beauty of its plumage will be readily appreciated by a glance at the life-like portrait Miss Medland's brush has given us, and any detailed description of the colouring of the bird would be superfluous. We may mention, however, that the sexes are alike in plumage; also that the feathers lie very close to the body, and carry a metallic gloss which adds considerably to their owner's attractiveness.

The Roller gets its name from its habit of occasionally rolling, or turning over, when in flight—not unlike the manner of the Tumbler Pigeon. The Common Roller is spread widely over Europe and Western Asia during the summer, and breeds as far North even as Sweden; but in the winter it retires towards Africa, where, at that time of the year, it is to be commonly seen. The bird, however, is not, by any means, numerous anywhere. Occasionally it strays to our own shores, individuals being found almost yearly somewhere in the British Isles, from Cornwall to the far-away Shetlands. The size and noticeable colour-scheme of the bird invariably bring it trouble should anyone with a gun happen to get within range. The Indian Rollers (two very handsome species) are slaughtered in large numbers to provide an "adornment" for the hats of women (in this connection our pen refuses to write the word "ladies").

The Common Roller is not quite so large as our Jackdaw, and has affinity with the Kingfishers and the Bee-eaters. In his very helpful book, "The World's Birds," Mr. Finn describes the Rollers as: "Tree birds of medium size, with Crow-like bills and feet with four free toes, the hind-toe smallest." They nest in holes of trees or banks, lay white eggs, and the young are born naked and helpless. The food is "almost exclusively animal, consisting of insects and any small vertebrates they can swallow whole, for they do not use their feet in holding food. They usually watch for food from a fixed perch, and dart down on it. They cast up pellets." They have no song, but utter loud, harsh notes in noisy fashion.

In captivity the Common Roller is not exactly a success. A glance at its long wings and short legs shows that it is essentially a bird of flight, seldom on the ground (except when it alights to pick up some item of food), where it progresses by a series of long hops. This, however, applies more particularly to a caged existence, for it has been successfully kept in aviaries (where it looks very beautiful flying about), and has even bred under such conditions, and reared its young. It is not a safe species to keep with much smaller, weaker birds; if they were tiny enough it might swallow them. A hand-reared Roller might turn out an excellent cage pet, however, if allowed a certain amount of liberty in a room. Adult-caught birds are exceedingly unsteady and intractable, making sad havoc of their plumage; further, they are sullen, and strike one as unsociable and lacking in intelligence. They need to be fed very like a small Hawk, allowing for the fact that they do not hold their food in their feet and tear it to bits—it should be cut into pieces of convenient size for swallowing. Eggs are relished, and green-food also will be eaten; but flesh food of suitable sorts must be the mainstay, with beetles and the like.

Some Breeding Season . . . . Troubles Considered.

By T. W. WILSON.

A Lecture before the members and friends of the Halifax O.S. on April 3rd.

Whilst I try to give you a few experiences of my own in the breeding and rearing of the Canary, I am alive to the fact that there are older and consequently wiser hands at the business present, and, it being my first essay on the subject, I hope you will be "to my virtues very kind," and "to my faults a little blind."

The Egg-bound Hen.

One of the first troubles that is apt to arise to perplex and upset the equanimity of the beginner in this fascinating hobby is that of the egg-bound hen. This is a complication that all young fanciers should keep a sharp look-out for in the early part of the season, as it is mostly when the keen east winds are blowing that it arises. I may say that it is the young untried hens that are on the small side that I have found to be most subject to it. Hens that have bred alright before are fairly safe on this score, that is, unless they have put on an undue amount of fat during winter. Keeping hens in large cages, or better still, in a "fly," is the best way to ensure their hardness of condition and freeness from superfluous fat.

The first sign of egg-binding is the finding of your hen crouched in the far corner of the cage with her face to the wall, as it were, and her feathers puffed up till she looks like an orange or a lemon with a tail on. The moment you see her in such a ball, it is high time for action. On such occasions I gently pick the bird up, about the doing of which there is usually but little trouble, as she is feeling too ill to resist, or to try to dodge you; and I examine the vent and abdomen, and if I find them looking a purplish, angry red, and very swollen, I give one drop of olive oil in the beak and drop two on to the vent from a warm stocking-needle. Then I put her back in the cage—not the nest, for if you try to do that she will simply tumble her self over the side and into the cage bottom with a bump.

After this treatment I have generally found the egg in the nest, and on one occasion I found two of them next morning. But if not, as sometimes happens in acute cases, I repeat the process at once, and also take a long narrow jug of boiling water and hold the bird over it (allowing the tail to rest on the far edge of the jug) for three or four minutes. By this time the bird looks nearly dead, and you are fit to give her up. Be careful not to put any pressure on the inflamed parts in handling; put her gently back in the cage bottom, and though seeming almost dead she somehow scrambles up into the nest and deposits her egg in a very short time; in fact, she often drops it into the jug whilst you hold her, and in a marvellously short space of time she is going about her work as though nothing had been the matter.

Here I must say that after a hen has been badly egg-bound, I never yet found one to be hearty enough to do her work right for that round; so now I always take the cock bird away and give the hen a few weeks' rest, putting her eggs under other hens, if I have reason to think them worth the while and trouble.

Nesting Diarrhœa.

Another early trouble that occurs much oftener than the last is what is termed "nesting diarrhœa." This may occur in the middle of the period required for incubation, or later when the young are, say, a week old. It generally arises from the hen not having been in thorough hard condition at the beginning of the season, and results in loss of general tone. Depend upon it, if a bird is not in real hard condition before commencing to breed, be it soft ever so slightly, it is almost sure to give way in some form or the other. Egg-binding, "nesting diarrhœa," non-feeding, the leaving-off sitting, clear eggs, or the sweating of young, are very frequent troubles. If you notice watery looking blots or patches about the bottom of the cage in which there is a sitting hen, they are signs of the diarrhœa trouble.

To combat this "nesting diarrhœa," I give a salt water bath, and I moisten a piece of powdered arrowroot biscuit for her, when the trouble generally ceases. I put a teaspoonful of salt in the bath, and this tones her up wonderfully. I have had obstinate and bad cases though, where it has caused the hen to desert her eggs; but such are happily rare. In fact, it often happens in a mild form and passes off before you have noticed that anything has been wrong. And perhaps this is one of the least of the many troubles that one meets with in a good-sized stud during a season's operations; yet it is perhaps as well to know how to recognise and combat it.

The "Dead in Shell" Trouble.

There are also cases of eggs not hatching, which we generally refer to as the "dead in shell" trouble. One thing is patent to me from a long experience in connection with the breeding of Canaries, and that is, that it most certainly pays to make allowance for this contingency beforehand by immersing all eggs in warm water on the evening before they are due to hatch, especially so, if the hen is not a free bather. It is even well to dip any late egg in again, supposing the others have hatched and the one is overdue. The breaking of the shell yourself almost invariably results in a broken abdomen to the chick, and consequent death, though I have known of a delicate-fingered woman succeeding in saving a young one.

It has often been said that the shelling material given influences the hardness of the shell, and the consequent inability on the part of the chick to force its way out. With this theory I do not agree altogether, as I find that the hens themselves can supply a little information. I have long observed that certain birds have an ability for putting a harder shell on their eggs than others, whatever the grit or shell used

The Non-feeding Hen.

Next in the list of natural or unnatural concomitants to breeding comes the case of the non-feeding hen, and here is a subject which taxes the originality of the most resourceful of fanciers. There is not, nor can there be in the very nature of the thing, any hard and fast rule to follow; nor can anyone advise anything warranted to cure in every case, as what will suit some hens may be of no use to others.

I have dealt with this oft-recurring trouble by giving the youngsters a morning and an evening cropful (with a pared match-stalk) of pure yolk of egg, which keeps them going whilst I try to "tempt the old girl" with a variety of foods; and if I find one suitable to her taste, she gets plenty of it. If nothing seems to awaken her slumbering or absent sense of maternal duty, I fetch over the cock bird and give him a chance. It is very rarely you will find a non-feeding cock bird, if only the hen will give him a chance, though he is not such a good hand at the job till the young ones get a week old, after which time he is generally better than any hen. If the youngsters still seem to be going back and losing ground, I transfer the lot to other likely nests in the room, provided I have some containing birds at about the same age; failing which, when I expect a good bird will be in the clutch, and am extra anxious to save it, if I have a hen nearly due to hatch, I give the neglected young one to her, one every few hours, gradually withdrawing her eggs in the same way and sharing them out again if I can. In nine cases out of ten she will take to them alright.

How serviceable this sometimes proves as a last resource, will be fully appreciated when I tell you that my first (and most successful) bird was saved in precisely this way; but in that case it was at the cost of losing all the removed eggs, as I had nowhere else where I could place them. But it was well worth doing, you'll agree. One bad feeding hen I had when quite a boy was conquered by my adopting the suggestion of my mother to give it stiff rice pudding. I had tried all sorts of food, but to no avail, and the chicks were almost too far gone to be able to lift their heads. When I introduced this somewhat novel menu to her ladyship, it met with her prompt approval, and in twenty minutes every little crop was like a little white bladder, and both the situation and the chicks were saved. I may say that my mother made rice pudding every other day all that summer, and two subsequent nests of youngsters were reared on this diet by that same hen. Some of the other hens did not evince the same liking for the rice, but all would eat it when, out of curiosity, I occasionally gave them some.

Soaked rape, and boiled rape, both separate and mixed with the egg-food, I have found to be of great service at these times, but I do not use these habitually, as I think the fewer sloppy messes you supply the better; still they are absolutely necessary sometimes. I have also chopped lettuce fine and mixed that with the lot, with improved results; but if you do this the food needs changing very often, as it soon turns the egg sour. Crushed hemp in unlimited quantities is one of the best of foods at all times, and many an indifferent hen have I coaxed into a sense of duty by the use of this and the heart of a lettuce.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

The Carriage of Birds . . . . by Passenger Train.

By G. WHELLER.

A Lecture delivered before the City and Suburban A.C.B. on March 22nd.

I propose dealing with the sending of birds by passenger train "unaccompanied." This is a term used in the railway world to signify that the bird is being conveyed by a passenger train unaccompanied by a passenger. From this I don't wish you to understand that railway companies carry birds in this manner free, although I am afraid if many of the gentlemen we see on Sunday mornings returning from Club Row and the various resorts of some bird fanciers with the familiar black cloth parcel under their arm, were challenged for their excess luggage tickets, many would be found wanting.

The Duties of the Sender.

Railway companies make it clearly understood to the public that they are not, and will not, be common carriers of birds, and receive, forward, and deliver solely on, and subject to, certain conditions; and they require the sender in all cases to sign an undertaking agreeing to their conditions of carriage. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that the sender should see that everything is done by him to ensure a safe and speedy transit, and it is upon the duties of the sender that I would like to address a few remarks.

A little practical experience in the parcels booking office of any of our great railways would soon convince anyone that the public do not carry out their obligations in properly packing and labelling parcels they wish conveyed by rail, and although railway companies are justified in refusing to accept, in many cases in the rush the parcel gets away, and in the ordinary course being subjected to many tranships at junctions, etc., the labels sometimes get detached, and then the trouble commences. Claims are put in, and in a number of cases the sender, through his own neglect, finds his chance of recovering damages gone—through his own fault.

We will now presume that one of you gentlemen wished to send a bird to a friend. Invariably the first thing that affects you is the cost of carriage. In this respect no difference exists in the respective charges of the railway companies serving the town to which the bird is to be sent, so that it only remains for you to settle to which company you propose handing the bird for transit. In deciding this point, I think the company having a station nearest the residence of your friend should be favoured, for being the sender, you are able to hand the bird in to your station when most suitable, but your friend is not always able to judge as to the time of its arrival, and a speedy delivery often obviates trouble.

Packing the Bird.

Having settled this point, it is now your duty to study the best means of packing the bird, and this is a point upon which much depends. It devolves upon you to satisfy yourself that the health of the bird is such that under reasonable conditions it will endure the journey; anything that can afterwards be proved to the contrary will be of service to the company in resisting any claim that may be made for loss or damage, and would come under "culpable negligence."

You should then see that sufficient food is put in the cage to meet the requirements of the bird during the journey. In the event of its being a very long journey entailing a number of tranships, the company would at your own cost arrange for its feeding, although accepting no liability to do so.

The labelling, too, should receive special attention. I think it is beyond dispute that a very large proportion of delays and other troubles in transit of parcels traffic can be attributed to the bad labelling and addressing by senders. Undoubtedly the best means of labelling is by sticking it on the package, and in all cases the address should be carefully given. The omission of the county often leads to confusion in cases where there are more than one town of the same name. Then, again, many cases arise where the Christian name of the addressee is omitted and delay in delivery occurs before it is discovered which of the Jones', for instance, it is intended for.

Another little matter that often gives trouble is the question of carriage charges. The bird has probably been sold "carriage paid." In the course of transit the railway way-bill gets lost, perhaps; attempts are made by the receiving station to collect charges, and the consignee thinks he is being "had." All this trouble could have been avoided if "carriage paid" had been endorsed on the label. Moreover, you must always bear in mind that whether you consign your bird carriage paid, or arrange for the carriage charges to be paid at the other end, you are always liable for the carriage charges as well as all charges connected with the transaction in the event of the railway company failing to secure same from the party to whom the bird is addressed, the company holding that the contract had been made with you; and their contention is that the collection of any charges at the receiving station is only a matter of convenience. The law also gives them power to hold your bird as a lien for any charges due by you to them for any previous transaction, whether for carriage of birds or parcels.

At the Dispatching Station.

Now, having carefully packed and properly labelled your bird and decided from which station you will dispatch it, the next thing is to take it to the station. I am presuming we are dealing with valuable birds, in which case it is usual for the sender to hand them to the company at the starting point, personally. The bird has now been accepted by the railway company, who give you notice that they will not be responsible for any loss, damage, or delay, except upon proof that the same was occasioned by neglect or default on their part or their servants', neither will they in any case be responsible beyond the sum of five shillings for any bird lost or damaged, unless a higher value be declared at the time of its dispatch and a percentage of 1 per cent. paid upon the excess of the value so declared; and they will further require you to sign a declaration to this effect before accepting the bird for transit.

It should be borne in mind that although you might declare a bird to be of the value of £50 and pay accordingly, in the event of its being lost, the claim would be considered with every regard to its actual value, to arrive at which the company would, if they thought it advisable, consult an expert, and it would devolve upon you to satisfactorily prove the value you set on it. Hence, any attempt to overvalue the bird when declaring should be avoided. Personally, I am in favour of giving a conscientious value to the bird, and thus save money and complication in the event of any loss.

VOTING papers for the election of officers of the Y.C.C. are now in the hands of the members, and must be returned before May 8th, so as to allow time for full arrangements to be made for the annual general meeting which is to take place on Saturday, May 15th, at 6 p.m., at the headquarters, Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford. It is hoped a large gathering will assemble here to do justice to the important business in hand.

THE Norwich Plainhead Club are already making arrangements for next season's competitions, and there is every promise that a good array of specials will be upon the books. The club are giving five prizes in each section (open and novice), and any extra prizes that come will be added to the list. One is already promised for the novice, and with the addition of the three CAGE BIRDS amateur prizes, make in all fourteen specials already in hand for fanciers of this cobby variety. So hurry up, ye intending members, and join the ranks of this enterprising society.

BRADFORD City O.S. held their third discussion of the session on Saturday evening last, when a large gathering turned up to hear what "Philip" (Mason) had to say on his favourite variety, the Yorkshire. The company, which numbered some 50 odd, were a very representative lot, and included many judges. Surely, Philip must feel highly flattered at having such an attendance to hear him open the discussion. He gave his hearers the benefit of his long and valuable experience with the Yorkshire bird, and assured the Cinnamon Marked breeders present that he would give them "what for" in the coming season's competition, as he is going strong on this variety. He also is one who goes in for early breeding, and likes to have some youngsters knocking about in early April, the earlier the better. Much interesting matter was discussed, and plenty of valuable information was brought out during the evening, the time passing all too quickly. The usual votes brought to a close one of the pleasantest evenings it was possible to have. "STRAIGHT-'UN."

On Easter Monday, as I was looking out, I noticed a Robin scratching a worm out of the garden. He got the worm out, but could not carry it away. Presently a Sparrow came and tried to take the worm from him. The Robin immediately flew away and fetched his friends, who helped him to recapture his worm.—Sent by H. F. ### An Exciting Morning.

A friend of my mother's had a Grey Parrot which was an exceedingly good talker. One of her Canaries had got out of its cage when being cleaned, and was fluttering about the room from curtain rails to pictures, getting itself thoroughly dirty. Its mistress and her maid were chasing it about, flicking at it with dusters and any available thing to try and get it down to the floor. Polly, witness to this rather exciting scene, was naturally enjoying himself immensely. Suddenly he burst out laughing, and exclaimed: "What a morning we're having." He had never been heard or known to say this before.—Sent by T. Stoney (age 14), 11, Rue de Bourgogne, Paris, France.

*"Give the Knave a Groat."

A Parrot belonging to King Henry VII., who then resided at Westminster in his palace by the Thames, had learned to say many words from the passengers. One day, sporting on its perch, the poor bird fell into the water, at the same time crying, "Boat! Twenty pounds for a boat!" A waterman who happened to be near, hearing the cry, made for the place where the Parrot was floating, and taking him up restored him to the King. As it seemed the bird was a favourite, the man insisted that he ought to have a reward rather equal to his services than to his trouble, and as the Parrot had cried twenty pounds, he said the king was bound in honour to grant it. The King at last agreed to leave it to the Parrot's own determination. The bird hearing it, cried out, "Give the knave a groat."—From Buffon's "Natural History," sent by Theresa Smith (age 14), 90, Richmond Hill, Penkhull, Stoke-on-Trent.

Some Possibilities in . . . . Canary Culture.

What Can We Do with Our Canaries?

By FRANK FINN, B.A., F.Z.S.

"Look at the Canaries, Mother!" said a little girl in my hearing one Bank Holiday at the Zoo; as the birds she was drawing attention to were Sugar-birds, I felt that that little girl's ornithological education had been neglected. But all the same it struck me that the Canary Fancy would be considerably enlarged and edified if we could breed Canaries of the brilliant violet which Sugar-birds display! We could, in fact, do with a little more variety in the appearance of this favourite cage-bird, and I hope that a few suggestions as to possible means of securing this may not be taken amiss.

What we Started with.

In considering a matter of this kind, it is useful to recall what the Canary was like before we took him in hand three centuries ago. The true wild Canary, which is confined to the Azores and Canary Islands, is very seldom imported now-a-days, but specimens of it can be seen in the entrance hall at the South Kensington Museum. For the benefit of those who cannot have a look at them there, I may say that the bird is green, poor in colour and of small size, not bigger than a German Roller. It is easy to see how our ancestors compared it with the Siskin; and there is no manner of doubt that the great reason for domesticating the bird was its beautiful song.

The Canary's Relatives.

The wild Canary is treated in the British Museum catalogue as an island race, or sub-species of the Serin-Finch, a well-known bird on the continent, and one which has very occasionally been observed over here. Others give the Canary full rank as a species, and with these I am disposed to agree; it differs from the true Serin in being a bigger bird, with shorter wings and a longer tail. But the difference does not amount to much, and the two are nearly as closely related as the Common and Mealy Redpolls. The Serin group of Finches is rather a numerous one; there are many species in Africa, and a few in Asia. Two of the African ones, the Green and the Grey Singing Finches, are among the most commonly imported of foreign cage-birds. The Serins display but a small range of colour, olive green, yellow, grey, and brown, being their only colours as a rule, so that it was only to be expected that the colour-variations of the Canary should be decidedly limited.

Examination of the Canary's relatives, therefore, gives us no hope that we shall ever be able to evolve a blue Canary; but that we may do a little in the way of introducing new colour-variations I will now attempt to show.

How to Introduce Novelties.

Now, there are two ways of getting a new point in anything cultivated. One is by breeding from any variation which shows itself, to do which you have got to wait till Nature obliges by presenting you with such a variation to start with, and in addition to take the chance of the said variation being hereditary, which is not always the case with "sports." The other is, to introduce on outside cross. This is easy enough in plants, which are readily hybridised, and often produce fertile hybrids; but in animals it has very rarely been done. There are, however, a few cases on record. For instance, ingenious Americans have invented new animals called "cataloes" by crossing cattle with bisons, or buffaloes as they are there wrongly called, this hybrid being fertile; and an English breeder has a strain of ferrets which have the blood of the stoat in them, the stoat-and-ferret hybrid being also fertile. However, as Finch Mules are so generally barren, it will be best to start with suggestions as to what may be done with the pure Canary.

Black Barred.

I have been asked whether it would be possible to breed a black Canary; and, as far as present appearances go, I fear I must reply in the negative. There appears to be no tendency in the Canary to vary in the direction of blackness, such as one sees in the fowl, duck, and pigeon, among all of which black specimens are frequently produced as "sports." By mating heavily-streaked greens together something might be done, but I know of no evidence which would lead me to suppose that a black creature has ever been bred by such a method. Black breeds only exist in the cases where black "sports" occur, as in the birds alluded to above.

White to Win.

Now, nature has kindly vouchsafed to favour us with occasional white Canaries. Although that which was exhibited at the last Palace show was the first I had seen, it was not the first I had heard of, for the breeding of two was recorded some years ago in the Fancy Press. Let us, therefore, diligently look for white Canaries, and cultivate them when found; no doubt very pale buffs would do to mate them with in the highly probable event of two pure whites of opposite sexes not coming to hand at the same time. There would be some pleasing problems in the colour-feeding of white Canaries, by the way—I suppose they would come out salmon-colour!

Why Not Brown?

Another Canary colour which might be worked upon with advantage is brown. This, like white, is very rare, but about twenty years ago I saw one or two Canaries of a distinct brown, not at all like Cinnamons, but a decided colour with dark streaks. In fact, they might easily have been taken for Linnet Mules, and it needed close examination to see that they were in all points true Canaries; as a matter of fact, their owner and breeder had not a Linnet on the premises.

But what does one want brown Canaries for, anyhow, may be asked? Simply because with a new colour we get a new departure, and we do not know what may come next—perhaps a black, or a red. It must not be forgotten that the only blue Budgerigars which have gladdened a weary world—and there have been only two instances of their production—were bred from yellows. This, it will be admitted, is not at all what one might have expected; if they had come from Greens, which have a good deal of blue in them, anyway, it would not have been so strange. But the moral obviously is, always encourage any new colour. Of course, one could probably colour-feed browns, and they ought to come out a nice rich mahogany colour.

Where to Look for Freaks.

Now, in order to get hold of new colour-variations, it is before everything necessary to cast a frequent eye on the humble common or singing Canary. It is among such birds that I saw the brown specimens above-noted, and among such I also once saw—this was in Calcutta, and the birds were Chinese-bred—a green with yellow markings in the wings and tail like a Greenfinch. I satisfied myself it was not a mule of any kind. When a bird is bred selectively for any point, its power of variation is decreased; hence, new departures must be sought for among specimens allowed to breed anyhow. You can easily appreciate this by looking at a thorough farmyard lot of fowls and ducks, and comparing them with those which have some breed in them.

Will Hybridising Do Anything?

The older writers were fond of repeating a statement that the colour of the Canary has been considerably modified by crossing with various European Finches. I can see no warrant whatever for this suggestion. Setting aside the fact that Finch-Mules are so very generally barren, I do not see how any of the Canary colours as we now have them can have been got from any of our wild Finches. It is quite sufficient to regard them as the result of simple variation, such as has given us the white Dove, the white Java Sparrow, the yellow Budgerigar, and so forth. When you get a Canary-and-Finch Mule, you do not get any very startling new tint, and, hence, even if such Mules were fertile, the object of starting novelties would not be much forwarded by trying this method.

A Shot at the Red.

There exists, however, a charming little bird which may give us a fresh start in the way of Canary variations. This is the Hooded Siskin (Chrysomitris cucullata), South America, of which the male is a lovely vermilion-red with black head, wings and tail, and the hen, grey, with a little red on wings and breast. Although this bird has very rarely been imported, a few have come over, and a pair are at the time of writing in the small birds' house at the Zoo. This exquisite little Siskin will breed with the Canary, as one might expect, but, curiously enough, the hybrid has proved fertile! Here, then, there is a chance of introducing a strain of red blood into the Canary constitution, which might ultimately enable us to breed red Canaries! The chief difficulty would be in getting these Red Siskins to start with, but this is only a matter of expense; they are to be had, if people can face the price. It would be advisable to mate them with very small Canaries, as they are smaller even than our Siskin; the Border Fancy would be suitable.

Producing Self-greens.

Another idea in hybridism which might be tried is the crossing of the Canary with the Grey-necked Serin (Serinus canicollis), of South Africa, with a view to breeding real self-greens. What we now call a self-green always has some of the dark streaking of the original wild Canary, and I think we shall agree that greens would look much better if we could get them even and without any streaks. The attempt to breed out the streaks seems to me about as hopeless as breeding them with the idea of their making a black specimen!

Now, the Grey-necked Serin, though otherwise exceedingly like a Green Canary, has no streaks, and, judging from what we see in hybrids between the Canary and the unstreaked Greenfinch, by crossing with this Serin we could eliminate the streakiness from our greens. I do not know whether the Hybrid would be fertile, but I should certainly expect it to be so, as the relationship of this handsome Serin to the Canary is obviously very close indeed.

A Beautiful Serin.

None of the other African Serins are likely to be of any use for crossing with the Canary, as there is no fresh colour to be gained from them, but there is one Asiatic species, ranging from the Caucasus to North-West India, which would be of extreme value for a cross, supposing the hybrid from it proved fertile. This is the Red-fronted Serin (Serinus pusillus), a bird about as big as our Redpoll. In colour it is mostly black, with yellow edgings to the back, wings, and tail, and a yellow abdomen; but on the rump is an orange patch, and on the head a fiery-red one. The hen is very similar to the cock. A cross with this bird ought to take us some way in the direction of a black Canary, to say nothing of the introduction of the orange tints, and I should say the probabilities are in favour of the fertility of the hybrid. Unfortunately, I do not know that this species has ever been offered for sale in England, and only a few turned up in the India trade; of these my friend Mr. E. W. Harper got some, and I believe sent specimens to the Zoo.

Alteration in Form.

Here, then, I end my suggestions as to the production of new colours in Canaries; but it is perhaps worth while to say something about shapes. No cross is likely to be of any use in effecting any introduction of novelty in this respect, and we must trust entirely to the generosity of nature. Here again, the common singing Canary is more likely to produce novelties than any fancy breed, but it is impossible to say beforehand what these may be. A point to be looked out for is the possible appearance of an unusually long tail; I have never seen a long-tailed Canary, and, in fact, no tame bird seems to vary in the direction of unusual length of tail, except the common fowl, which is, even in its wild state, a long-tailed bird—at any rate, the cock has long "sickles." Another point which might at any time appear is some new kind of crest; I have somewhere seen a suggestion that Canaries might be developed on the lines of Whydah's tails and Cardinal's crests, but for the present all such ideas of Canary improvement must remain as suggestions. The great thing is not to despise a novelty, but preserve and improve upon it.

Our Round Table.

Mr. Cullington (Norwich).

I have been a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Canary for more than 25 years, and have always been associated with bird societies. So that I have had a good experience of the Norwich Plainhead through hearing the opinions of others expressed as well as being able to hold my own. The bird of to-day is far different to the one at the time when I started, and I think a great improvement has been effected, as at about that time the Crest-bred was introduced to increase size; but with it came the long tails and flights which we too often see on the show bench even to-day. The Norwich Plainhead is a bird of colour which we all admire—the Yellows in particular, and especially the one with a good back and short tail and flight; but we do not see the Buffs with such colour and frosting as we should like to see.

I use double breeding cages on racks which I find can be kept clean as you can remove any single one out. And as I have over 30 pairs, I find it very useful to take them outside to clean. My nest boxes are made so as to hang 1½ins. from the back of the cage. I find that then the bird can turn completely round. I never get a badly-built nest. I supply very fine grass for nesting material; this is not so hot as hair and moss, and it assists if I have a sweating hen.

When the young birds can do for themselves I turn them into a flight cage where they can exercise their wings. I find that this improves their carriage. In conclusion. I think all young fanciers ought to belong to a society, and that they should exhibit birds at times. —F. Cullington.

Mr. T. H. Dent (Preston).

extends over 25 years, and a most pleasant one it has been, as I have had the pleasure of breeding a good few winners during this time not forgetting the noted winner, "Little King," which I think is the most typical Norwich out, especially in shape and quality; and if it were a little stronger in head, it would be about perfect.

Regarding the points one should pay attention to when breeding the Norwich, I may say that I am a great believer in pedigree breeding. I don't care about breeding from a bird without I know something about it, even if it is a winner, as you sometimes get a winner which is the best of a bad lot. I would rather breed with a bird that does not look much, but has the blood of winners for many years back in it; then, if they breed back you get the right sort. I like one bird of a pair to have plenty of style and quality, and the other to have good size. I don't care if the latter is a bit rough, providing it has been bred from the right sort. It does not matter whether the cock or the hen has the points mentioned above, so long as you have them in one or the other. I use single cages, and run one cock with two hens, or three on occasions, giving to the hens plenty of crushed hemp and groats, along with egg food fresh three times a day when they are feeding; also green food (dandelion leaf for preference). I look in each nest three or four times daily to see that the young are alright. Giving the hens plenty of inga seed a few weeks before pairing them up I have found to be a good preventative of egg-binding.

My opinion of the stamp of bird exhibited to-day is that the Norwich are better than ever they were in every respect, being larger and having better heads and necks, and more chest than formerly; and in most cases teeming with quality. I mean, of conrse the most noted winners; not the long-sided, coarse birds that some of the judges "put in the money" occasionally. If the judges would only put the right birds up, I am sure we should have the intelligence and skill amongst present day breeders to still go on improving, as I know a great many breeders of the chubby ones.

In conclusion, I should like to mention one more improvement; I refer to show management. I think the present shows are better managed by far than was the case some years back. I might also say a word in praise of the specialist clubs for one great reform (in fact I think it the greatest of all), and that is the standard cages. What an improvement this, on the old-time show system when you could tell every man's birds by the cages, which were all shapes, colours and sizes! There is a great contrast now when an exhibitor can scarcely pick his own bird out in the clear classes, if he does not know his numbers and has no catalogue.—T. H. Dent.

Mr. Eynon (Aberdare).

In accordance with the wishes of the Editor, I will endeavour to give a short account of what I think, and know, about the Norwich Canary. In selecting birds for breeding, I do not mind if the cock is a bit rough, so long as he is a big one, and of the right type. But to suit such a bird the hen would have to be smaller, and also finer in feather, as it is on the hen a fancier must depend to get good-shaped youngsters.

I have visited many shows, and, to my mind, the Norwich that are now winning are rather large and long in flights and tail, also too browy. For my own part, I prefer rather a medium-sized bird, cobby and thick-set, of the Bullfinch type, and short in flights and tail. I find that different judges have their different tastes; therefore, I must keep two or three different types of birds to suit the different judges. I should like if all of them went in for the one style of bird; then we would know exactly what to go in for. I wish Cage Birds every success.—David L. Eynon.

Messrs. Cleminson & Taylor (Preston).

It will be seen by our photograph that our cages are all in racks. We consider these the simplest and the least expensive. They are made of six-inch boards, with holes bored in and thick wires running through them. Our stock consists of Norwich Plainheads and British birds. This season we are putting up 40 Plainhead hens. We use one cock bird to two hens, and at the present time have about eighty eggs and twenty young ones. Now, as to what we consider the most difficult points to breed in a Norwich Plainhead. We feel certain they are: a good head and short wings and flights. These good points are generally lost by using the Crest-bred to keep size up. Personally, we have not seen a Crest-bred yet we would give twopence for to cross in with Norwich; and to anyone wanting to increase the size of their birds, and keep to type and style, we would advise them to go to some fancier whose stock is good in these points, for we are certain it is the quickest and cheapest way, and will save a lot of disappointments.

What do we think of the present-day Plainhead compared with the past? When we look back to the teams turned out by Messrs. Wellings and Woods, Irons, H. Taylor, Vardy, and a host of others, a dozen years ago, we are none too certain that the Norwich are as good to-day as they were then. And yet, when we think of some of the winners at the late Scottish National Show—Messrs. Midgley's Yellow, Tom Seed's Unflighted Buff, Watson's Variegated Buff, and Grey's Buff hen (the last-mentioned we consider the best Buff hen we ever saw)! On the whole, we think they are a little more feathery now than they formerly were. No doubt fanciers have sacrificed a lot for colour, having got the notion into their heads that colour wins; but by a little careful handling by the judges we feel certain there will be no need to look back to the past for good Norwich Plainheads. Looking back at the times before there were any Norwich Plainhead Club or clubs to foster the breeding of the variety, the birds exhibited were not so large, but were more uniform in quality of feather—a point sadly lacking in a lot of the present-day exhibits.

The craze for size has undoubtedly led many fanciers to overlook this most important point, as, in our opinion, a real good Norwich should have a coat of that soft, silky feather which carries that delicate and most desirable pinky shade of colour. A bird of this description, with nice type and style, is sure to catch the judge's eye, and we think would almost please the average grumblers who are to be met with wherever an exhibition of cage birds is held. We think that if fanciers interested in the variety (and they are legion), would only join one or other of the specialist clubs whose sole object is the advancement of the breeding and keeping of the variety, we should very soon see the last of the big, long-sided, red-hot, or browy birds being exhibited. That the time is not far distant when this will be brought to pass is our wish.—Cleminson and Taylor.

Mr. Midgley (Winslow).

My introduction to the Fancy was in this wise. The town of W-nsl-w is (as ought to be generally well known) the hub on which the universe turns! I mention this because there still appear to be a few ignorant people who are not aware of the fact, and if anyone is inclined still to disbelieve it, I can only refer him to any good W-nsl-wite, who will at once affirm the truth of what I say. The matter is thus beyond argument!

It follows then that W——— is nothing if not up-to-date, and the time came when to continue to be so, we had to hold a show. Not one of your local teashop, stick-em-on-the-table, sort of affairs; not a bit of it. But a mammoth open event with liberal classification and good prize-money, etc., as befitted a town of such magnitude and importance. So there we were, with a show decided upon for Cage Birds, Poultry and Pigeons; the hall engaged; to say nothing of a large tent as an annexe—and myself on the committee, but with never a feather of any sort or description in my possession. A committeeman of such an event, and nothing to show? Perish the thought! And yet there I was with the show looming nearer and nearer, and still at my wits' end to know what I could show. Certainly I could tell what a Fowl, or a Pigeon, or a Canary was when I saw it, but as far as practical experience went in the breeding, rearing, or exhibiting of birds, I was a complete stranger. So which was it to be? I had little room for Fowls, no place for Pigeons, and thus there only remained the Canaries. But which variety should I got, and where should I get it?

In my dilemma I consulted a fancier friend and committeeman. Said he: "Why don't you get a Norwich from old —— of ——? You'd get a swinger for a sovereign." Happy idea—I acted upon it! In due time the bird arrived—a buff cock—and to me, who until this, had been a stranger to Canaries and to colour feeding, never was there such a bird! With what eagerness and expectancy I looked forward to that show! In due course the great day arrived, and the bird was carefully taken. How the time dragged! Should I win? Should I lose? What had happened (I was engaged in another department)? At length, however, the news comes, "You've got first!" Reader, you will remember your first win, and can enter into my elation. Here am I, thought I, at the top of the tree right away. My enthusiasm knew no bounds, and I need scarcely say that my first achievement only whetted my appetite, and like Oliver Twist, "I asked for more."

I sent the bird on to another show—and found my level! Not a mention! Of course I went to the show, and of course I found—as all novices have to find—that one can't make a full-blown fancier in a day. But the interest had been roused, the flame fanned; and I set myself to the study of the Norwich Plainhead. My subsequent ups and downs (with often more downs than ups) must, as the serial story writer says, be reserved for a future chapter. — W. N. Midgley

Messrs. Walton and Noakes (Leicester).

It is with great pleasure we hear it is your intention to devote a supplement entirely to the Norwich Plainhead Canary. To us it is the one bird of the Fancy. As to whether it should hold pride of place among all other "varieties" is, of course, still undecided; its claim to this distinction must be very great indeed, as it is to be found bred in goodly numbers North, South, East and West, and really good specimens are exhibited from all quarters. When asked by beginners what variety it is best they should take up with, we never tire of extolling the many virtues of the Norwich Canary.

Our own experience dates back twelve years, and has been one of great pleasure. The difficulty of breeding the Norwich is nothing compared to the troubles encountered in the breeding of several of the other varieties. It is hardy, and usually is prolific in its breeding, and can be managed successfully after a little tuition by almost anyone possessed of a little patience. It is bred by thousands of working men, which proves that it is within the reach of nearly everyone, and no difficulty is experienced in disposing of stock unless one is in the hot-bed of another variety. The Norwich can be bred in almost any kind of room or aviary, and no great expense need be incurred in making a start. The one thing to avoid is the keeping of more than you have time to attend to properly. If you do overstock, the chances are that your labours will be in vain. It is doubtful whether any other hobby is better catered for than the Canary hobby. The difficulties that are met with can always be remedied if one will only take advantage of the information supplied in Cage Birds, and also in the Cage Birds Annual, which both deal with everything that is likely to arise, in a plain and masterly manner; the latter also gives the standard of points, and the model of the true Norwich. We would advise all would-be exhibitors to wait until they have thoroughly mastered the art of breeding, rearing and staging, before speculating with high-class birds, as this is usually the main cause of our "red-hot" exhibitors growing tired and disgusted, and leaving the Fancy. If they had only waited, such fanciers would have been a great help to the Fancy in general.

As regards what are the most important points to pay attention to when trying to breed the exhibition specimen, of course this depends upon the stock one has for this purpose. Some birds would excel in some points and fail in others. To breed a winner the birds would have to be paired together judiciously, and the fancier should be careful to avoid the pairing up of those having the same faults, and to try to counterbalance the failings of one by the excellence of the other, thereby striking the happy medium, as it were, which would bring us near tho model given us to attain. By the many good birds we see with a failing in the head and neck, we should say that this is the hardest point to breed and to retain; it is, therefore, a point which should not be lost sight of when one is pairing his stock. Quality of feather is, we all know, very essential in a show Norwich, but it is a point we consider it not difficult to obtain and to keep, and we opine that some of our judges pay far too much regard to it when placing the cards at shows. Oft-times we find it scoring over type, which every breeder must give first consideration to, as without it no bird can carry the hall-mark of a true Norwich.

We consider the present-day winning Norwich far in front of what was able to win 10 years back, as regards type and size. A sure proof that improvement has been made year by year can be seen by comparing the around excellence of the present-day winning exhibits in their various classes (so many now being so close on each others' heels that very little separates the winners from those having the last cards) with the birds in the classes of 10 years ago, when it was often the case of the winner standing "right away." Now many birds can be seen in one class which would a few years ago have been acclaimed "champions." What can be said of several of the well-known winners of 1903 and 1909? We can only describe them as of around excellence, good in every point, and as near perfection as possible. That many more like them will be bred in the present season to grace the show bench is our sincere wish.—Walton and Noakes.

Mr. Cameron (Kelso).

I have been a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead since 1898, when I started in the Fancy with one pair—a Buff cock and a Variegated Yellow hen. Well I remember the first nest of young which I reared. I had been away from home on one occasion, however, when the young were about six weeks old, and on my return I was at once greeted at the top of the stairs by my mother with tears in her eyes, and she told me that an awful thing had happened. She had been up to the small room where I kept the birds, and having put up the window for the purpose of admitting fresh air, left the room, and when she went up to put the window down again, she found that the cage door had fallen down, and that three of the four youngsters had flown away! I was fairly staggered. I thought they would be killed by cats. One of them was picked up, however, on the bowling green the next day, and I got it safely back. But the other two were never heard of again. The success which I had with these two youngsters (the one which was left in the cage turned out to be my Crystal Palace Champion of 1901, and winner of 12 firsts, and the other, an Uneven Buff, won for me five firsts), fairly set me up for a larger stock, and two years later I bred my other champion, and the "Memorial Medal" winner at the Palace in 1902. I have bred winners every year. I have always gone in for shape, quality and colour, and I am not a lover of great size. I like the birds to be proportionate, everything to match with a close-fitting jacket. Many of the winners at some of the best shows I have visited had any amount of size, but lacked the beautiful, rounded body, and the sprightly carriage which I so much admire; and many of them were suitable as stock birds only, being feathery at the thighs and open at the front. In breeding I prefer both birds to be of medium size, and I like the hens to have nice short wings and tail, and good quality, with legs well set back. I owe much of my success to paying great attention to the hens, and breeding from this stamp. Large hens I have found to be not very good mothers. From double Buffs I have bred some grand birds teeming with quality, but I prefer the putting of a Buff cock to a Yellow hen, to any other way of pairing. The most important points to pay attention to are head, neck, shape and oloseness of feather.—A. G. CAMERON.

Mr. E. Baker (Cowes).

I am well aware that far more able pens than mine have so often written on this subject, that one feels somewhat nervous in subjecting ones own ideas to the criticism of the Norwich Plainhead Fancy. The present-day Norwich, what is it? That is a query. I question whether in all the different breeds of Canaries there exists a greater difference of opinion as to what constitutes a really good specimen, than in the case of the Plainhead. I remember some years ago being at the All-England Show at Norwich. A discussion took place then between Mr. J. Mackley and a well-known London birdy paper representative. Says Jacob to the paper man, "Yes, you can make them in London; perfect specimens can be made in your office; but" (with a merry twinkle in his eye he said), "they are only paper ones." How often have so-called perfect specimens been portrayed, and ideals have been sent out showing breeders what they should breed for, and with what results? In many cases birds have been bred that have been like the models adopted by the Specialists' clubs. The breeders themselves have looked at these specimens with no small amount of pride, and the thought has flashed through their minds that they have hit the mark this time. How many times has this specimen been run into the show cage, and the admiring breeder has said, "Yes, he is a real topper"? How anxiously he awaits the date of the show, and how confident is he that when that event does take place, he is sure to be the lucky winner! But—oh! the buts. The lucky day dawns, and the promising specimen is staged to perfection, and takes its place on the show bench. Later in the day the owner makes his appearance at the show with a very smiling countenance, so confident is he of success. The class in which this grand specimen is entered is eagerly sought after, and, when found, what a change takes place! Surely the darkest cloud that ever obscured the glowing rays of the sun never equalled the dark look on that exhibitor's face! How he rubs his eyes and looks again; but he is not mistaken. This specimen from which he has been anticipating so much has, to use a real Lancashire expression, "Got nowt"; and often, in not very Parliamentary language, he asks the question, "What do they want?"

Sorry should I be to arrogate to myself the right to dictate to the Fancy what they should breed for, or to what model of perfection they should aspire. In this article I only give my own humble opinion as to what points I think necessary to make a good show specimen of the Norwich Plainhead. First, I like a good-sized bird. Don't let me be misunderstood here. When I say a good-sized bird, I do not mean a long, heavily-built bird, that is too lazy to move about, but a good, short, bold bird, full of life and vigour, and one that goes from perch to perch in such a way as to give an onlooker the impression that the bird's idea of himself is that there is no other bird equal to him. Then that all-paramount necessity, quality. What can there be more disgusting to a real fancier than to see a good-sized bird with long open feathers down its back, and enough dropping from its thighs to make a small pillow? Give me that short, silky feather with plenty of good under-colour, the sheen on which, when well got up, shines almost like a beautiful hoar frost.

Without doubt, one of the greatest points is type, and this, in my opinion, is where, if we are to judge by the awards given at many shows, those making the awards differ very much in their opinions. If at any time any bird fancier would like to send me a Christmas-box in the shape of a good bird, please don't send me a long-sided, flat-headed, long-tailed, coarse-feathered bird. If he does, it will give me a bad impression of his judgment; and I do like, above all things, to have the best of opinions of fellow fanciers. I must have a bird with type. By this I mean a bird with a good head, a nice wide entrance (not a V-shaped one, but one rising from the beak to a nice round skull), a short, thick neck, and the bird must be well-filled in down the back, and have wings well braced, just meeting nicely at the tips; it must have a neat, short tail, and be short in legs, but not too short; it must have a nice, jaunty carriage, and must take his perches in the best of style as before described. This, in my opinion, is a Norwich much to be desired.

Now, I can imagine many fanciers saying, "Yes, that's all right, Baker, but how do you make them like it?" Well, I don't make them, I leave the birds themselves to do that. But so much do I love the perfect Norwich Plainhead that, if my personal experience is of any value, I am quite willing to place it at the disposal of the Fancy, for I am proud to say that many a Palace winner has been bred in my rooms, as many fanciers can testify. I have often smiled when visiting a show to hear the remark passed, when the keenest of fanciers have been criticising my birds, "I wonder where he picked this one up." Well, I have never picked up a good one yet. I have bought some, but I have bred a great many more. How often one has read of writers when giving hints on pairing up, advising fanciers to put a large cock with a small, cobby hen, also advising one to pair birds with bad points to the opposite with extra good ones. The latter method I do not believe in, although good birds may have been bred that way. Personally, I like two good, medium-sized birds, the cock a little the bigger of the two. I try to select the very best with as few bad points as possible, for one invariably finds that in the progeny the bad points generally predominate; hence the necessity of selecting those with most perfect points in type, quality and colour. Then, with good, sound health one's birds should produce something that will do some good on the show bench. Don't run away with the idea that even then you are going to breed all winners. Experience, painful and costly, has taught me that the gems are few and far between. Were it not so, the Fancy would lose its charm.

Doubtless the question will be asked, where are we to get the birds which you mention? There are many good breeders who can and do supply real fine stock birds, providing one is prepared to pay a fair price for them; but, unfortunately, people are not willing to pay. But when a man has paid a big price to get a good strain together—a strain that possibly has cost him hundreds of pounds to produce—he has a right to expect some return for his outlay, not considering his time and trouble. Who is there, however, amongst the breeders but has had pitiful letters stating that the writers are only working men who cannot afford more than a few shillings? The birds they want are gems of the first water. Well do I remember a man coming to me; he wanted a good pair. He wished to start in the Fancy. His appearance did not suggest great wealth, and he assured me he could not afford much, and being slightly crippled (this appealed to me), I let him have a good pair at a very low price. He being a stranger to me, I naturally thought it a deserving case. You may imagine my contempt when in less than a month I found he lived only five miles away, was a very prosperous tradesman, and, in fact, in less than a twelvemonth sold his business and retired. I am afraid my readers will have grown tired of this article, but I should like in conclusion, to most earnestly wish one and all the very best of all breeding seasons.—E. BAKER.

Mr. Grey (Morpeth).

The most important points in breeding exhibition Norwich are, first, the head. What we require is a well-rounded, dome-shaped head, having a good, wide entrance between the eyes, rising nicely up from the beak, forming a fine curve, and falling into a good stout neck. A narrow-headed bird is very objectionable. To get the good head I have paired two of my largest and best-headed birds, and have produced stock cocks which have proved very useful to me. Unfortunately in using this "big" blood you also get extra length in wings and tail. Therefore, to obtain this head without these undesirable qualities, I consider is the most difficult thing in the breeding of the Norwich. In fact, in my opinion, more birds fail in this point than almost any other on the bench. Secondly, the chest. This is a very important point in an exhibition Norwich, for without chest properties the bird looks long-sided. What is wanted is a good, deep, well-rounded chest, nicely tapered away to the vent. To obtain this I have used with success the very large stock cocks mentioned above, and have paired them to hens selected from my stock with the shortest of wings and tails. The tail of the hen I like to see carried well up, showing no droop, and leaving no space between root of tail and wings. The wings should fall to the back, so that even when the birds are frightened about the cage, the wings will not cross, but drop down on the back and fit like a book-leaf. The third difficulty is in regard to the wings and tail. Nothing looks worse than long wings crossing like a pair of scissors on the back; and a long tail takes away the nice chubby effect so much desired in the Norwich. However, if these short hens I have mentioned are used, there is little fear of one's getting birds too long in wings and tail.

Fourthly, as to feather. This is another important point to be reckoned with. The feather we like to see on our show birds is that close, silky kind which has a nice sheen on it. Many of our Norwich which have come from "big" blood carry too much feather at the vent, and this takes away the taper from the chest, thus spoiling the fine sweep and clean cut so much desired. But as I have found that the type comes from the hen, if you have selected the correct style of hen this fault ought to be avoided. Fifthly, in regard to colour. I have always made it a practice as far as possible to pair a Variegated or Ticked bird to a Clear, as it is from the Variegated or green birds that we get most colour. But, as to colour-feeding, this is unknown with me. On this point I must admit that I am in the dark, for with all the hundreds of prizes I have won, I have never yet won an award for colour.

As to the stamp of Norwich Canary now being exhibited, I admit at once that the Plainhead is not perfect, and that there is a good deal of room for improvement, for which I am very thankful, as it leaves something for one to look forward to and to accomplish. It is very easy for disappointed fanciers to write to the papers that the judges ought to place birds with nice short wings, short tails, good, bold heads, close silky feather and fine deep chests; but it is a very different matter breeding these birds. And my experience has been that whenever one of these birds has made its appearance on the bench, no judge has ever passed it. The difficulty is that there are none of these perfect specimens to be seen Every bird, even the very best that I have seen winning, has a fault. Here comes in the sporting spirit of the true fancier. He always runs the risk of being beaten, or has the luck to win, for he knows, if he will own it, that his bird has some fault, and the judge may find it. Some judges are more lenient as regards certain faults than others, and this is where one may win. Other judges cannot stand certain faults, and this is where one loses. For my part I have very nearly always been satisfied with the judging, for on looking over the classes I have been able to see the type of bird the judge happened to be going for, and if he stuck to his type right through, then I have been satisfied, for he then selected the type he fancied, and that was what he was there for.

There has been a lot of correspondence of late in CAGE BIRDS on the type of the winning Norwich Plainhead. But I must say that every judge we have had in the North has practically placed the same birds in the Norwich section. And as I have had my birds last season under eleven different judges, and have won first prizes under every one of these, there can't be such a difference of opinion as to what constitutes a "Winning Norwich" as some fanciers would have us believe.

Now we will take the type advocated by one of these disappointed exhibitors from a sketch produced in CAGE BIRDS of March 6th. To start with, the writer gives his ideal length of a Norwich as 5½ inches. Why! good gracious! this is the Border Fancy standard length, and the Border Fancy, or "Wee Gem," as he is called, is allowed to win at this length. Surely we don't want to make our fine, bold Norwich into "Wee Gems"! That beautiful plate drawn by that able artist, Mr. Norman, and which was selected by the Norwich Plainhead Club as the best model Norwich, is the ideal. This model, I think, was about 6½ inches long. In my opinion, there has never been such a model before. We do not want to go back 50 years to find a model, for there are now many birds on the show bench not so very far off the standard. What we are to do is to breed out the faults we have, but, as far as possible, to keep the Norwich up in size. A good bird ought to be from 6 to 6¼ inches long. Under this length I don't think we can get the necessary chest and head properties, and still have that fine, clean sweep to the vent so much admired. By all means let us breed out these crossed wings and the superfluous feather; but to accomplish this I don't think it will be necessary to go back to the Border Fancy standard. I am confident that in another year or two we will have a fine, large, bold Norwich on the bench, and I for one will try my best to produce it up to the standard.—ALFRED GREY.

A Chat about Yorkshires.

By W. MUNDELL.

How to Avoid Flat Heads.

At the conclusion of the reading of this paper, the lecturer resumed his own remarks. He would speak first, he said, on the subject of the head of the Yorkshire Canary. They would find in the Yorkshire Canary Club handbook the following description :—"A small head, skull narrow." One of the greatest difficulties the fancier had to meet was to know how to breed good Yorkshire heads.

Flat-headed birds, he thought, would not come from proper-headed Lancashires or Belgians. He had an idea that flat-heads were caused by the dryness of the atmosphere in which the birds were bred, and that the proper method to avoid getting such heads was to see that the young birds had sufficient moisture while finding their way out of their shells. Of course, they would have to ascertain how to impart any additional moisture that might be necessary, but this was, to his way of thinking, the only means by which to avoid having flat-headed birds. If they could only find out what to give the young birds in order to get moisture into them, they would never need to fear having flat-headed youngsters. He failed to see how it was possible for them to breed flat-headed young from two birds with round heads. He had seen many a young Canary, after it had come out of its shell, which had a piece of shell stuck fast to its head; and as soon as that piece of shell came off it took with it a little of the down from the head of the youngster, which left the bird, therefore, a little flat-headed. That was the way in which flat-heads were produced. He would advise fanciers, he said, to supply the old birds whilst sitting with plenty of baths (for moisture purposes), also to let them have plenty of fresh air.

The neck, according to the standard, said the lecturer, should be full and long and straight. Many of his audience went in for full-necked Yorkshires; for his own part he did not like such birds. Neither did he like shoulders round and heavy, as then the bird was usually sluggish, and such was of little, if any, use for breeding purposes. Another reason why he did not like round-shouldered birds was because their wings came too low down on the breast, making the tips to cross, which was a serious fault. Breed with two square-shouldered birds, said the lecturer, then you will not have round-shouldered youngsters, with crossed wings, lacking position and nerve, but the opposite : birds with grand wings full of nerve and position.

Selecting for Pairing Purposes.

Referring next to the selection of cocks and hens for pairing purposes, the lecturer said that given a right good and typical clear yellow cock bird, the question arose as to what was the best bird to pair it with. They should always remember that when they had a typical clear they had a small bird; so that if they bred from clears alone the birds would sure to deteriorate in size. Therefore, they should pair such a good clear yellow cock as they had supposed to a good ticked hen. There were, generally speaking, four classes in which the best Yorkshires were to be looked for—the clear yellows, the clear buffs, the ticked yellows, and the ticked buffs; so that if there were nothing great in those classes they would not find many good birds in any other classes. The best way to pair them was to put a clear yellow cock with a ticked buff hen and a ticked buff cock with a clear yellow hen. They would always get a bit more strength in their birds this way. It was a well-known fact that a clear bird was clear because it was weak. It was also well-known that all albinos of whatsoever species of animal, were weak. So that if a fancier were to go on constantly breeding with clear birds only, he would eventually get essentially weak ones.

"What would you do if you had a variegated cock bird?" some one might ask. In that case, said the lecturer, you would, of course, know that that bird, because it was variegated, was a heavy bird; therefore, they should pair it to a clear quarter-bred Belgian hen, or one showing a lot of breed. Otherwise they would get birds which would be far too heavy and strong for the show-bench. We had too many birds that were short and thick, and had not enough length in them. Again, supposing they went in for evenly-marked hens, they did not want to pair them with any marked birds at all. What they should do was to pair such birds with clears bred from even-marks. The lecturer remarked parenthetically that he did not say that there were many successful exhibitors who were the breeders of the birds they exhibited. (Laughter.)

The Breeding of Cinnamon Marks.

Regarding the breeding of cinnamon-marked Yorkshires, said the lecturer: I will tell you what I did when I bred my best cinnamons. I happened to go into a certain bird-room and found a small, but typical buff ticked hen; she was beautifully made, but, as I said, not large. I had this cinnamon-marked bird, and I bought a clear yellow dark-eyed cock (bred from a Cinnamon marked yellow and dark-eyed hen), which I paired with her. Strange though it may seem, every bird I bred from them was a yellow hen. I then went to a house to hunt for some buff cinnamon-marked cocks. I heard of a bird which someone was intending to buy cheap—his outside limit for a good one was about five shillings—but the owner had been trimming the bird for about a fortnight, getting it into good condition for the prospective purchaser, to whom he was going to sell it for five shillings. Well, I happened to be there one Sunday morning when I thought, this is the bird for me. Mind you, this was before I had heard anything about the possible sale of it to another. The man asked twelve shillings for it, which I paid, although I thought it a big price. I took the bird home and put it in a flight. It was from that bird that I bred my old cinnamon-marked yellow which won at the Palace and other places; and I had, besides, seven of the grandest birds living at that time. Well, when I heard how the man from whom I purchased the bird had been trimming it, and the tale connected with the trimming, naturally I wanted seven shillings back. (Laughter.) I couldn't have it, he said. But I did get it—I had drinks and cigars many times until we settled the matter in a friendly way. The bird having proved a good investment for me. (Laughter.) In order to establish a strain of cinnamons, continued the lecturer, you should always pair your marked cocks with clear pink-eyed hens, and your marked hens with clear cocks; under no consideration should anyone breed with two marked birds, unless the birds happened to be only very slightly marked.

Supposing, said the lecturer, warming to his theme, you had bred these birds for some time and had "run down" in stock; what would you do to bring your stock up again? Many fanciers, he said, as soon as they begin to think they know more than anybody else—(laughter)—stop procuring fresh birds. This was a fatal error to fall into. The selection of stock birds was a most difficult thing. He would personally never select a bird unless he knew from the breeder of it what kind of bird it was. And by "the breeder" he did not mean an exhibitor, nor a salesman, but the one who bred it, and who bred lots of others. When selecting, one should get a right good stock bird, and be very careful how he paired it. Without an occasional introduction of fresh blood no one could hope to be very successful. But a fancier should not wait until the stock really needed replenishing, but should try and breed a stock bird or two in readiness; he should always, at any rate, keep one or two good breeding stock birds.

Speaking of colour in birds, the lecturer stated that if a breeder wanted to get a proper green marked Yorkshire, he should cross a good buff hen with a typical yellow green, which would beat all the cinnamon blood in the world for colour. (Hear, hear.) And there were no yellows on the show bench today like there were twenty years ago. From Cinnamon Yellows one did not get the depth of colour that was necessary.

There were, of course, different shades of Greens. For breeding Greens they wanted the grass-green birds, but for producing colour in the Yorkshire he should select the bronze-coloured ones. But if they wanted even-marked Greens, then he would advise the use of the grass-green bird, because you obtained a darker eye and wing mark, which showed the bird off to better advantage. Most of our dark-eyed marked Yorkshires showed a tinge of brown in them, which proved that they had crosses of Cinnamon marked blood in them.

Concerning Belgian Blood.

Crossed wings were, said the lecturer, brought about, as he had already pointed out, by being round-shouldered birds. How, then, was it to be stopped? There was one thing which he would always advocate—something which all great Yorkshire Canary fanciers adopted—viz., the use of the Belgian-blooded bird. There was no Yorkshire Canary that was worth anything at all that did not have Belgian blood running in its veins, and there was not a Yorkshire, fit to go on a show bench, that was not full of such blood. They would find hundreds of Yorkshires put down, and yet not find two good 'uns amongst them. There were some pretty little ones, it was true, but he liked a pretty big 'un. (Laughter.) Why should they not have big ones that were also pretty? The main thing was to see that with the size there was also proportion. You must have substance, and if you get that in a strong, heavy bird, to tone it down to the necessary point, you must have Belgian blood in it.

If you get hold of a Belgian, continued the lecturer, and feel its neck, you will find that, like a Swan's, it will seem to have more joints in it than it really has. He playfully said that it might be possible, as in the case of a rabbit, to cut a piece out of the neck of the Belgian, and by shortening it, do away with the frill, which was the greatest drawback we got through introducing the Belgian.

The occasional introduction of Belgian blood was absolutely necessary, said the lecturer, and without it they could hope to do but little. He had known during the last thirty years all the great exhibitors, and most of them had "gone down the river," having become so bigoted in the idea that their own birds were much better than everybody else's, only to awaken at last to the fact that their own birds were too small to be of any further use to them or to anybody else. It was impossible to expect that a bird would stay on top if it had none other than its own Yorkshire blood in it.

Pedigree of Value.

Pedigree is of great value in breeding the Yorkshire, continued the lecturer, in fact, it is useless attempting to breed from anything but good and reliable pedigree birds. Pedigree and the knowledge of your own stock are the great pivots upon which success or failure rests in all breeding operations; and it is only after many years' of careful study and breeding that a fancier is enabled to know how to mate certain birds to produce certain results.

Like produces like, but only when it is from a good strain. Two good birds picked up haphazard, and mated together, may hit happily; or on the other hand, they may produce a lot of mongrels. If, however, you pair two really good birds together from a reliable and old-established strain, you are almost certain to breed a few birds from them that will repay you for your trouble.

If you fail to attend to this question of pedigree, you may by one false move, undo the work of several years' breeding, and completely spoil your stock for the future. No man can pair another's stock up. The fancier who knows his own birds is the only one for the task, and he should be very careful in selecting and matching up his birds. In all my breeding career my idea and practice have been to get the length from the cock side and position and quality from the hen, and many old fanciers and myself have found this way the best. With this the lecturer sat down.

Incubation Troubles.

Many and varied are the troubles that beset the path of the amateur Canary breeder who is serving his probation in the Fancy, from the time of pairing up his birds until the young are safely weaned off, and able to paddle their own canoes through the rocks and shoals of life.

To commence to give a brief reference to the most common of these difficulties, a starting point is required, and the time when the eggs are all laid may be taken, especially as this is the time when the novice most frequently has his first chastening drawback. Hens differ tremendously in temperament, and whilst one will go about all the duties of nesting with machine-like regularity and precision, another will scarcely make a fair start before she gets bewildered, and appears sorely in need of some feathered "Sairey Gamp" to advise and direct as to the way they should go.

If a hen has just prior to our starting point mistaken the purpose of the nest, and in youthful ignorance deposited her eggs upon the floor of the cage, and ignores the presence of the nest-pan, the breeder may just as well try to muster up a nice good-natured sunny smile, and taking the hint that the hen does not wish to be bothered, look around for a good-natured, right-minded, feathered dame who will undertake the onerous task of hatching the eggs and rearing the precious babies. Such a hen, if a very young one, may be given another chance, and she may very probably amend her ways.

Clean Nests a Virtue.

But supposing the eggs have been duly deposited in the nest, and the hen then refuses to sit upon them. There may be many causes for this which can be more or less remedied. In the first place it is necessary to consider the temperament of the individual hen. If she is of a very nervous and restless nature, it is best to interfere with the usual remodelling of the nest when the full complement of eggs is laid as little as possible. She may resent, or be fearful of, the interference, and her only means of showing it, or, as she may think, of safeguarding herself, is to leave the nest severely alone. Indeed, when a hen has constructed only a fairly tolerable nest herself, it is quite the best thing to leave it alone, unless one knows perfectly well that that particular hen is of such a disposition as will allow liberties to be taken in regard to her arrangements.

Then if she refuses to sit on the eggs after having laid them in the nest, the first thing one should do is to examine whether the nest is infested with insects. One may be somewhat inclined to think that the short space of time the nest has been in the cage precludes the possibility of such a thing. This, however, is a grave mistake, especially when the cages have not been thoroughly overhauled and cleaned immediately before starting. As a matter of fact, a few days will in many such cases suffice to make the nest such a bed of torture that only the most persistent and exemplary sitter will be courageous enough to submit to it. If this is the cause, the remedy lies in making a new nest with clean and disinfected material in a perfectly clean pan, and put the hen to sit in the usual way. The use of impure material and that which is objectionable to the hen may also be a contributing cause, but if due care is taken in selecting clean and innocuous material in the first instance, this cause should never arise.

Privacy to be Desired.

The position of the nest will have a direct bearing upon the question in the case of nervous hens. It is very desirable to so place the nest pans at the beginning that the hens when sitting upon the nests are not brought too prominently and closely into publicity, and compelled to submit to prying eyes at close quarters, and similar proximity to all kinds of movements which are rendered necessary about the cage. As a rule the best all-round position for the nest is hanging on the back of the cage about the centre. In this position the nest is most easily get-at-able, although one cannot look into it without unhanging it and lowering it a little. But this should be no detriment, as the less of this kind of curiosity one displays the better; and if it is really desired to peep in occasionally to see how things are going on, the wish may be gratified by hanging the nest on one end of the cage about the middle, which will enable one to see into it as much as is really necessary, but has the disadvantage of bringing the rim of the nest very near to the perch, and thereby tempting the young to leave the nest before they are able to properly support themselves on the perches.

A Precaution.

In no case should the nest be hung close up to front wires. This position is all right to gratify the owner's curiosity, but is a terribly trying one for a nervous hen. If such a position has been inadvertently chosen, and the hen seems chary of sitting, or is constantly rushing off the eggs to escape suspected danger when anyone goes near the cage, a piece of brown paper or some other material should be fixed on the front of the cage just before the nest, so that the bird is screened off from the full gaze of everyone who happens to go near.

The poor little cock seemed deeply distressed and quite lost without his little wife, so in sheer pity I sent off at once for a helpmeet for him. A few mornings later she arrived, and I at once introduced her to her future lord and master. He, I regret to say, accepted her unquestioningly like the simple Trojan did the Olympian lady who appeared to him clad in grace, but otherwise scantily, from a rosy cloud. I believe he really mistook her for the moment for his late love; he soon, however, discovered his mistake, and before his reproachful glance I felt like a Sunday school child who happens to be taken to task for having skipped the Kings of Israel and Judah. His indignation was not, however, of long duration, for a few hours later I found him engaged in a violent flirtation, and the next day I discovered that the late lamented was entirely forgotten, and the gay Lothario was intent on founding a new Zebra dynasty. This time things all went on quite smoothly, and after about twelve days I heard some faint sounds proceeding from the nest, and by the frequent visits of both parents I felt sure that the eggs had hatched, and I began to feel some of the "solid joys and lasting treasures," that the hymn says "None but Zion's children know."

For one who had had so many bitter diaappointments, it was like "green pastures and still waters of comfort. "For ten days I possessed my soul in more or less patience, and then one fine morning my long and weary wait was over, and I saw my first little Zebra Finch. No young father ever felt more proud of his first baby than I did of that little bird. He wasn't very big, but he was all there, and the fascinating way in which he would sit on the floor, with his head on one side and beg for food, I was never tired of of watching. He was subsequently joined by four other little companions, and they made a picture I should love to have painted. In a very few days—it might have been weeks—it seemed to me that they became adults, their black backs changed to red, and their barring began to show, and then pretty spots to appear, and lo, before I knew it, they were busy housekeeping for themselves.

At the end of that season I had a flock of fifty Zebra Finches flying about, and I was as proud of them as I ever was afterwards of any of my most difficult achievements in bird-dom.

But now it strikes one I had better be drawing this experience to a close, or you will be reminding me of the young lady who had just returned from India, and was very full of her experiences. She had devoted herself during breakfast to giving a lively description of social life in India, and was preparing to spend the morning in continuing her lecture, when her aunt slipped out of the room and returned with some sermon paper, a blotting pad, and a pen. "Maud," she said, "this is too good to be lost, you must write it all down." The projected manuscript did not come to much. I often wish I had a maiden aunt who would say the like to me. I do hate writing out my experiences, but then my "Uncle," the editor, will insist on my doing so, and he says he loves reading what I write. "In vain," I cry, like the lobster in the Water Babies," "let me alone!"

Chapter xxix.—My Sacred Kingfishers.

One of my most pleasant memories has to do with the Sacred Kingfisher of Australia. It must be some ten or fifteen years since I one morning received a most seductive letter from a dealer telling me that he had just received a very fine pair of Sacred Kingfishers, and that he was sending them on for me to look at. Of course he knew perfectly well what "looking at" them would do; he would never see them again. I ought to have sent him an indignant wire marvelling at his effrontery, but of course I did nothing of the sort. I am not ashamed to say that I awaited their advent with much the same sort of impatience as a lad feels when the lass is just a little bit late at the trysting place. The next morning I sent a messenger to the station in good time to bring up the precious cage, and I could hardly restrain my impatience to unfasten the string; so eager was I to see my new treasures.

I had searched all the bird books I possessed to try to find out what manner of bird the Sacred Kingfisher was, but in vain; I could not find a word about them. They have a copy of Gould's "Birds of Australia" at the Leeds Public Library, but as Leeds is nine miles away from my home, the book might just as well have been non-existent, so far as I was concerned; and as I had no friend I could consult—for I live in an agricultural district—I had to possess my soul in patience.

On opening the cage I was fairly delighted at my first view. Sitting on the perch side by side were two demure-looking birds about one-third the size of an English Kingfisher, and so far resembling them that anyone could have told to what genus they belonged. I was sorely troubled to know how to feed them. I thought they might require a fish diet, and if so, how in the world was I to supply it, as not only is there no water here to speak of, but what there is contained no fish that I ever discovered. In some favoured places you can get out to the nearest bank and catch minnows by the pailful, but not so at Micklefield. Tho only creatures I ever saw in a pond here were newts, and I felt sure that no self-respecting Kingfisher would tackle them.

Up a Tree,

I was in a regular fix, much in the position of the boy who was chased by the bull; open to congratulations because he had reached the tree first, and to condolence because a fellow up a tree, and in the middle of a forty-acre field, with a disappointed bull for a companion, is in a mighty bad fix. There was I to be congratulated no doubt on the possession of a pair of Sacred Kingfishers, but open to condolence as I had to find out how to feed them; and while I was making the discovery, they would very possibly die. I thought of the saying of a friend: —To rear birds you've got to get up every morning with determination, if you're going to go to bed with satisfaction. I therefore determined that I would succeed if success were possible. There was nothing to help me in the cage, as the food-pot was empty, so that either the astute sender had given them nothing for the journey, or what he had given had been so much appreciated that it was all cleared up. They did not look at all droopy, so I concluded that they had dined well.

I knew, of course, that they would be birds that would either live on fish or live stuff of some sort. I had read that Australia is a barren and dry land where no water is—at any rate, for large portions of the year—so that I felt pretty sure that unless my Kingfishers had dwelt by the banks of a river, that they must have lived on something else than minnows.

What other creatures there might be in the Antipodes that would tempt Halcyon Sancta I did not know. I thought of grasshoppers, but grasshoppers were as much out of the question in February at Micklefield as minnows. The only live thing I possessed were mealworms, so I determined to try them, though, as I looked at their great beaks, my heart failed me to think where mealworms were to come from to supply so great a need. I went to the tin and came back with a small potted meat jar full, and placing it on the floor of the cage awaited developments. I had not to wait long. Hardly had I withdrawn my hand, before one of the Kingfishers was sitting on the edge, and after knowingly cocking his head on one side, he dived into the struggling mass, and the next moment he had a big fat mealworm by the waist, and was banging him against the perch in a way calculated to knock the life out of any living thing. After a series of bangs, he tossed the mealworm up in the air, defty caught him in his open beak, and so he was gone. It reminded me more of a clever conjurer making your best gold watch disappear, than anything else. Encouraged by his action, the wife now took a plunge, alighted on the jar and repeated the process, and so it went on for ten minutes, until not a worm remained behind.

Timely Satisfaction.

Then each bird carefully cleaned its beak on the perch, much in the same way as one sharpens the carving knife, and sat with its beak well tilted up, and eyes half closed, like a city alderman after a Lord Mayor's banquet, and allowed the meal to digest. It fairly frightened me to see how these mealworms went. I had solved the problem of food, so long as this food held out, but how long would this be? A quart of mealworms looks a lot, but not when such inroads are made upon it. I calculated that at the present rate of consumption the supply might last ten days with economy; but at this rate what would the Kingfishers cost? In about a quarter of an hour these birds seemed ready and willing to repeat their effort.

I thought that perhaps bread and milk might help to fill those awful beaks, so I made some of the most seductive kind and placed it humbly before them. They swooped down immediately, probably thinking that it was another dose of mealworms; but when they had tasted it they tossed it off their beaks with the most ineffable contempt I ever saw on a bird's face. I was fairly disappointed, and I showed it, for my jaw fell like a signal flag. I felt I must try something else. Now I like experimenting, but I like to do so on somebody else, in corpose aliene, even as Artemus Ward, when prevented by other engagements from taking part in the war, freely offered the service of all his relations. Experiments on Sacred Kingfishers I felt might prove very costly, as they had already caused me to part with £7; and that looks a bit of money to loose.

I therefore went and mixed them a pot of soft food, with plenty of egg in it and a few cut up mealworms. They treated this much like children do buns when they pick out all the plums; they ate up all the lot of mealworms, and then looked expectant, seeming to suggest that I had made a mistake and had brought them the wrong sort of food. However, I remained firm and left the pot and hunger to do their work. After a time I was gratified to see that the food was going, though not very swiftly; and I felt that I must be firm and sparing over mealworms, as so long as they could get the latter, they would take nowt else. I left them a good pot of food over night, and when I came down early next morning, a little bit afraid as to what I might find, I was delighted to see two live Kingfishers, though they were decidedly querulous until I had given them a good feed of mealworms, when they perked up considerably. I conclude they were saying to each other what the Earl of Chatham did when he remarked after the enjoyment of a good dinner: "Pitt's full!"

Wild Bird Life.

A Gathering of Warblers.

Although the weather is warm, and bright sunshine is seen during the greater part of each day, vegetation appears to be somewhat backward. Many of the woods and hedgerows are comparatively bare of leaves, giving an almost unnatural appearance to the countryside, considering the atmospheric conditions. We look for green woods and hedgerows with summer weather, and like to see some cover for the coming migrants; of these a large gathering of the dainty little Willow Warbler is now in our district. We first noticed them just outside the village, where a wood of firs and undergrowth borders the roadway. They are sweet little birds with pale yellowish breasts and brownish-yellow backs. They have a clinging habit when among the trees, very unlike the steady perching of the Finches and others. So much do they resemble the Chiff-Chaff and Wood Wren that it is impossible for the novice to distinguish them, and even the practised observers cannot always identify on sight. While the birds are flitting from tree to tree, the wings of the Willow Wrens appear as long as those of the Wood birds. And the richness of colour is no guide, for I have seen a Chiff-Chaff that equalled his cousins in beauty of plumage. But if they sing (and at this season of the year they are generally bubbling over with health and melody) one can tell in an instant, for the two-note song of the Chiff-Chaff is unmistakeable, and the singing of the Willow Wren is unlike that of any other bird we possess. Commencing with a high full note, he drops it both in pitch and force, and it gradually dies away as though the little performer was exhausted with the effort. We heard and saw many during a morning ramble, all with the same peculiar descending cadence; some of the notes died away almost to a whisper; some were very short, but sweet. Later in the summer months the song will be fuller, but of just the same character. On a piece of rough uncultivated higher ground these dainty little fellows were very plentiful, and their trilling song was heard repeatedly. Once or twice we heard the scolding note of the Whitethroat, and after a time detected the species. But he was very shy and retiring; possibly he had only just arrived, and was in need of rest and quiet. Away through the trees we occasionally caught a glimpse of a hen Redstart, and so frequently have I seen the hen bird first that one almost wonders if the gentler sex is the first to arrive. The beautifully mottled Wryneck, too, is in the district, but his shrill call has not been heard.

Where Swallows Winter.

All the Swallows now winging northwards do not spend the winter in Africa; we are told upon good authority that a fair number stay in the south of Spain.

The First Nightingale.

The Nightingale was heard in a Surrey wood on April 17th. Many others may have arrived, but have not yet commenced to sing. This is a few days earlier than usual for this particular district.

The "Rattle Wings."

Among the water fowl the Golden-eyed Drake is one of the most beautiful. He has a glossy green head, and a yellow eye. His scapulars are white tipped with black. The female is greyish black with a white collar. These birds have particularly short, stiff wings, which they beat so quickly as to produce a distinct whistling sound, and so are sometimes called "rattle wings" and "whistlers."

The Hardy Grouse.

Of all our native birds few are so hardy as the Grouse. They nest early, and their eggs are frequently destroyed by the frost. And it is well known that in some cases the parent bird has been snowed up and suffocated while sitting upon a nest. It is said that the eggs of the Ptarmigan, a species that nests in very high latitudes, are so constituted as to be uninjured by the action of the frost.

Which is the Greatest Favourite?

We all love the songs of birds, and most people have a favourite among the feathered songsters. If a plebiscite could be taken, the Skylark would no doubt take premier position, not only on account of his excellence as a songster, but also on account of his being plentiful everywhere; he is so well known, and his powers of song are easily noted. In the south of England a few people would no doubt accord the Nightingale the post of honour, but although none can dispute the beauty of his performance, it is unfortunately of but short duration.

TESTIMONIALS FROM PRACTICAL FANCIERS.

NORWICH WORKHOUSE.

I have for the past two years used your Cod Liver Oil Cage Bird Food and find it very good for the hens when sitting, also for rearing the young and weaning them from the old birds on to solid food, and I find it is much better and handier than the old-fashioned way. I am this year using your Canary and Cage Bird Food as well.

Yours very truly,

7, COLEGATE STREET,
NORWICH.

I am again this year using your Cod Liver Oil Food for rearing young canaries. I find from experience that it is very good for them with the addition of a little yolk of egg. What few young birds I have bred this season are looking remarkably well, being plump and fat, look like making fine birds. The chief thing I like about the food is, that it does not go sour so quick as the ordinary egg and bread-crumb, and the old birds like it.

I can thoroughly recommend it to all canary fanciers.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed) W. W. FREESTONE.

T. MILES, OF NORWICH, writes:

I must say what is right in referring to the Cod Liver Oil Food. I used it all through the season for rearing young birds. Moreover I COLOUR FED my birds with your foods, and they came out a fine COLOUR The birds were healthy all through the moult. I might say I did not use any eggs with it, but it brought me out colour enough to get first and special in the Pair Class, and fourth in the Clear Buff Class at the last Norwich All England Show last November; also second, third and fourth at Diss in December.

ALWAYS USE OUR
DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

HARRY ALLEN.
THE OLD ORIGINAL BRITISH KING.
Ladies and Gentlemen, I have the following for sale: A very large cock Hawfinch, steady as a rock, with a most beautiful bib, almost perfect, beautiful wing bars, and good colour, will moult out a sure winner, price 15/6. I have a very large Greenfinch and Canary Mule, with a pure Linnet song, taught by the Champion Linnet of the World; he is a most marvellous singer, can be heard 100 yards when hung outside of doors; he has a very loud voice, price two guineas; contest birds from 10/6 to one guinea, with instructions how to work them; having won more prizes than any other man in the world for contest singing, so I know just what is wanted; for proof, this paper. Also some very large, steady, muling Linnets, 2/6 each. I hold the world's record for mulers. Linnets, in full song, with a beautiful polished cage, and my book of secrets, and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6, this is a real bargain. Look! fierce singing cock Linnets, with blood-red breasts and extra loud voices, with new cage and my book of secrets, right for catching or contest singing, only 2/6. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Linnets, taught by the world's champion, will sing anywhere, only 1/6; deposit your money with the Editor of this paper for honest stuff; all on seven days' approval I have 200 beautiful Canaries, cocks, singing hard, 7/6, 8/6 and 10/6 each; good muling hens, 2/6, 3/- and 3/6 and 4/- each; cock Greenfinches, with hen Canary, 3/6; cock Linnet, with hen Canary, 5/-; cock Goldfinch with hen Canary, 7/6; 200 cock Greenfinches, Chaffinches, and Yellowhammers, to clear, 6d. each; the largest I have seen this season. My new book, just published, 9d. each. Larks, singing grand, and as steady as rocks, and as straight as arrows, 2/-, 2/6; a few singing extra loud, 3/6; cock Goldfinches, 5/- and 7/6; four packets of my special mixture, 1/-. I sell 20 stone of this mixture every Saturday in Leeds market. All the above are in the pink of condition. I have thousands of testimonials open for inspection; those who want real, honest value for their money write to the largest British bird dealer in the world.—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

My Dominant Motto:—

Best Value for Money,

More it is unnecessary for me to say except that they are on approval, of course, and that all imitated competition is a farce and completely defied.

Now note a few prices:—

PLAIN-HEADED NORWICH COCKS.
Clear yellow, 7/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- upwards.
Clear Buff, 6/-, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- upwards.
Ticked or Variegated, 5/6, 6/-, 6/6, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- upwards.

PLAIN-HEADED NORWICH HENS.
Clear Yellow, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-.
Clear Buff, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-.
Evenly Marked, 3/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-.
Ticked or Variegated, 2/9, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-.

MATCHED PAIRS FOR BREEDING CRESTS, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- up.

Reliable Bargains for the Experienced and Amateur.

My special matched pairs of prize-bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-; Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, and 30/-; Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-; Lancashires, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-; Cinnamons, 8/6, 9/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; Lizards, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; Border Fancies, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6.

To Beginners:

If you cannot afford a big price send for a pair of my correctly matched Norwich at 8/6 or 9/6; and now note this.—In most cases where you send for pairs at this price, you are sent two huffs, often both marked birds—this is where you do not get what is required—well, I send you one marked, and one clear; one buff, and the other yellow. Travelling cage 3d. extra. Then for 3/6 I will send you a double breeding cage, fitted with everything complete for an immediate start. Total for birds and cage 12/3 for 8/6 birds, or 13/3 for 9/6 birds. But I would strongly recommend you to have my Cage No. 100; it has sand drawers, and is fitted with sanitary furniture throughout, and the price is only 5/-.

Songsters.

Thousands now on hand, specially selected, not haphazard birds, quality sent to each, according to price sent, and in all cases the best I can do, and what I cannot do in this line, no other man (or fictitious trader) can in the world. Norwich, Yorkshires, Mules (Goldfinch, Linnet, or Siskin). Note prices: 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-.

Feeding Hens.

3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; the latter suitable for all large varieties. Beware of hens offered as feeders that are only erect small Belgians, or Germans; they are too small for feeding anything but the smallest varieties.

York-shires

THE VALUE OF ALL VALUES,

Including Greens, Cinnamons, Clears, Ticks, marked and variegated.

See for yourself if wanting this variety; it is the only absolute proof.

Now note some prices:—Cocks, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-. Pairs matched for breeding, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- upwards. Travelling cages in all cases 3d. extra.

For all others see detailed FREE ILLUSTRATED LIST.

SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Annual meeting held at "Feathers," Westminster, on April 28th, about 40 members being present, the Presidcnt (Mr. R. L. Crisp) being in the chair. After the adoption of the balance-sheet, which showed a slight decrease on last year's balance, the Chairman presented the club's trophies, spccials, etc., complimenting each winner on his success. Messrs. J. W. Ramsden and F. Easterling presented to the respective winners the prizes which they had so generously given for competition, and were very heartily thanked for their liberality and for their attendance. The Secretary, in giving a rcview of the past season, said he thought the club could claim to have had a very successful year. The entries in the champion section were 1,151, but the patronage was extended from six to ten shows, owing to the cup competition. The nnmber of entries in cup competition were 747, while the number in trophy competitions was 584. Entries in novice section toalled 516, against 480 last year. He was sorry to say the amount received for subscriptions was £1 less than last year. The amount received for the special prize fund was also less, but this must be considered satisfactory owing to the appeal for donations to the fund for the challenge cup. The election of officcrs resulted as foliows: President, Mr. R. L. Crisp (48); Vice-Presidents, Messrs. J. Robson (45), W. J. Elsmore (37), J. W. Ramsden (35), F. Easterling (35); Committee (London): Messrs. J. Tyson (33), C. W. Mabey (30), H. Peverall (27), H. Tringham (26), G. H. Couzens (20), G. J. Warley (20); (Provincial): A. E. Pattrick (32), H. Knight (30), H. Smith (21), Capt. Fellows (21), F. J. Gibbs (17), H. E. Parrott (13); Auditors, Messrs. Males and Tringham; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. R. L. Crisp (42); Hon. Scc., J. W. Rennie, The Junction, Andover, Hants (50). The following motions on the agenda were carried: (3) "That provincial members may vote by proxy on any matter on the agenda"; (4) "After 'alterations' in Rule 19, add additions"; (5) "Should any member at any time find it neccssary to reside outside the club's radius, he may retain his membership"; (6) "That £3 3s. be given in specials to shows in the West of England and South Wales" (for conditions, see handbook); (7) "That a printed list of shows, etc., be sent to each member, so that he may gum them to his handbook"; (9) "Any member not resigning his membership prior to the first club show of the season, will be held responsible for the current year's subscription"; (12) "That a judge shall only adjudicate at one show in each competition, viz., cup, trophy, and novice, as far as practicable; also, that no member who has not paid his subscription shall have any points counted to him, and also, if he omits to put S.Y.C.C. to his entries." A very hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Wynn (the Scrutineer), Mr. Males (Auditor), and the President, ended the meeting.—J. W. RENNIE, Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held 1st May at headquarters. The arrangements for the first feather show to he held on June 5th, at the Three Legs Hetel, Lowerhead, were gone into, and the election of a new secretary in place of Mr. Tose, who has resigned, as reported at eur last meeting. As it was the unanimous wish of the members present that I should take the positien, I have done so, and in future all communicatiens for the society shenld he addrcssed to me at 22, St. Ann's Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds.—J. CHAMBERS, Hon Secretary.

SLIGO C.B.S.

Annual general meeting (adjourned from April 21st) was held on April 28th, in the Gillooley Memorial Hall, Sligo. The fellowing were elected offiee-bearers for 1909:—President, Alderman O'Donnell; hon. sec., C. J. Mulligan, Ballydeogan, Sligo; hon. treasurer and show manager, E. J. Tighe; committee, Messrs. Polleck, Shannon, Verdon, Osborne, Keating, Devins, M. J. Mulligan, Reilly, Richardson, and Finan. The balance-sheet for 1908, showing a profit of 9s. 9d. on the working of 1908 show, was adepted. The date of show for 1909 was fixed for December 15th and 16th, and Mr. H. Norman was appointed judge. The debit balance against seciety from 1907 show was considered, and the members present all promised subscriptiens towards same. An order was made that the shew should be advertised in CAGE BIRDS' fixed dates column.—CHAS. J. MULLIGAN, Hon. Sec.

Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*A Nest in a Topper.

During the holidays a bird has built a nest and laid several eggs in a boy's "topper," left behind in one of the roome at Eton. It is one of the most pathetic instances of trustfulness on record, and we hope the appeal to the boy's spirit of true sportsmanship will not be thrown away.—Taken from "Evening News," and sent by J. Magnus (age 12), 101, High-street, Marylebone, W.

A Good Songster.

My uncle brought home a nest of young Thrushes, which I helped to rear. We sold them all but one, and this proved a very fine songster. When the bird was strong enougs we used to hang him out early in the morning in the garden. He became such a fine songster that passers-by would stand and listen to him, amazed at his beautiful, clear notes. He was never tired of singing. He began to sing as soon as daybreak appeared. People often wanted to buy him, but he was such a favourite that we could not think of parting with him.—Sent by Alice Waite (age 10), 8, Honeywall, Stoke-on-Trent.

*The Biter Bitten.

A shepherd one day saw an Eagle perched on the bank of a stream. It seemed to be watching its prey. All at once it darted down and seized a large salmon. Being about equally matched, a sharp struggle of course ensued. The eagle, which could not extract its talons, was repeatedly drawn under the water by its adversary. In a short time both were exhausted, and the shepherd was able to secure both. Taken from a school book; sent by W. H. Wilson (age 12), 227, Edward Street, Nuneaton, Warwicks.

Singing Contests.

SHEFFIELD.

Result of the usual weekly Linnet singing contest held at Newmarket Hotel, Sheaf Street, May 2nd, was as follows:—1, Palfreyman, 84 secs.; 2, Darky, 61 secs.; 3, Bisby and Fenn, tied, and sang off: Result, Bisby 65 sees., Fenn 36 secs. Thirty birds sang. Owing to the number of birds entered, we sang one minute each way.—H. FENN, Sec.

In reply to Linnet Fancier, of Leigh, Lancs.: I will arrange a contest, if he will write to me, my address being—40, Park Hill Lane, Park, Sheffield.—H. Fenn.

LEEDS.

The week-end Linnet contest for quality singing was held at the Plasterers' Arms, Skinner Lane, Saturday, and an excellent entry of good birds and fanciers turned up at this new house, and after the match two or three of the members were like their birds, in a singing mood, in which Messrs. Howard, Longly, and Crane joined. The landlord, A. Kendall, gave three good prizes. Result: 1st, Lorriman; 2nd, Solly; 3rd, Madden. Judges, Messrs. Crane, Clarke, Towers. Also grand contest on Sunday, May 2nd, at the above house. Result: 1st and 2nd, Solly and Lorriman; 3rd, Johuson and Farrer.—T. CRANE.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon-street, May 1st, when 28 birds sang. Judges, Messrs. Summers and Naylor. 1 and 2, Crowther; 3, Lister. Also May 2nd, when some very good singing was heard, and 30 birds sang. Judges, Messrs. Melia and Cooper. 1, Stead; 2 and 4, Crowther; 3, Wigfield.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

Usual weekly contest for quality singing, held May 2nd, at Skinner's Arms, Buslingthorpe Lane, when 13 birds sang. 1, Hutchinson; 2, Turner; 3, Fenwick. Judges, Messrs. Naylor and Symons.—WALTER NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

YORK.

Usual weekly Linnet singing contest held at Crown Inn, North-st., on May 1st, when upwards of 20 birds competed, and some very good singing was heard. Result: 1, Palmer; 2, Lee; 3, Oxberry; 4, Bean. Judge, Mr. Perry; timekecper, Mr. Cooper.—J. W. SMITH, Hon. Sec.

DURHAM.

Singing contest, held at Halfway House, Witton. Fifty-four birds faced the judge, Mr. G. Reid (Brandon). The singing was good. 1, 3, Adams; 2, Foster. Timekeeper, Mr. J. Stout; book-keeper, Mr. T. Needam.—M. HUDDLESTON.

ERITH (KENT).

Linnet match held at the Royal Alfred Bird Club, Erith, on May 3rd, for ten minutes' singing; 24 birds competed. 1, Beacham, 4 score 12; 2, Roper, 3 score 7; 3, Ellis, 3 score 5; 4, Beacham, 3 score 5. Timekeeper, Mr. J. Baker.—J. BAKER.

HULL.

The Hull L.F.A. held usual week-end contest at headquarters, North Bridge Hotel. All the members turned up; 26 birds were entered for the six prizes given by the club. Mr. F. Allen (the Human Linnet) officiated as timekeeper and judge, everybody being highly satisfied. 1st, Dearlove; 2nd, Allen; 3rd, Broadbent; 4th, Scarfe; 5th, Skirrow; 6th, Davinson. The first three birds ran a great race; not much divided them for premier honour.—E. MOORE, Hon. Sec.

WIGAN.

Open Linnet match for time singing held at the Millstene Hotel on May 1st, when 30 birds from Leigh, Warrington, Lowton, and Wigan were entered. There was some very good singing. Prizewinners:—1st, Mather, 103; 2nd, Jones, 96; 3rd, Lowton, 89; 4th, Statham, 82; 5th, Mather, 81. Timekeepers, Messrs. Jump, Parker, and Ellinson. Remember match for T. Jump, which takes place May 15th, when seme good prizes will be given for time and quality. So roll up and give him a good 'un.—A. PARKER, Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Sixteen birds entered the ring at Mr. Robert Cottam's house, The Royal Oak Inn, Furthergate, on Saturday last, when we were again favoured with some excellent singing. I would remind CAGE BIRDS' readers and other clubs, that we are keenly on the look-out for challenges in Lark singing. There were five prizes awarded to the following competitors, and their respective times and order run as follows: 1st, S. Harrlsen (Burnley), who sang the full 10 mins.; 2nd, J. Halliday (Burnley), 9 mins. 57 sees.; 3rd, J. Hunt, 8 mins. 36 secs.; 4th and 5th, N. Jackson (Burnley), whose respective times were 7 mins. 52 secs. and 7 mins. 34 secs. Our brother members from Burnley are in very great form, giving the Blackbnrn contingent no chance whatever, and I say they deserve it richly for their performances.—R. AIREY, Sec.

We had this week-end, May 1st, at the Old Red Lion, Snigbrook, a contest for members only, when 24 birds were entered to contest for seven prizes, namely, copper kettles. On the whole, we had some very good singing considering the state of the weather. Results: 1st, W. H. Topping; 2nd, R. Fender; 3rd, W. H. Topping; 4th, J. Dobson; 5th, G. Rostron; 6th, R. Hayhurst; 7th, J. Harrison. Referee, J. Dobson. Judges, G. James, E. Chistopherson. Timekeeper, J. Williams.—G. ROSTRON, T. SLATER.

OUR FRONTISPIECE.

Mr. A. E. Lazarus, of Soho, London, W., whose noted Crested birds are depicted on the front page this week, has supplied us with the following notes respecting same:—The Crested hen is of my own breeding, from a grizzled, double-crested cock, and a green Crest-bred hen, the latter being also bred from double-crested parents. One remarkable feature of the mother bird is that for the last three years she has produced nothing but hens, my unbeaten champion being one, and four others equally as good, being still in the breeding room; indeed, she has been quite a fortune to me. During the last season alone my unbeaten hen won firstly at Cambridge (when she was not quite ready, being still in the moult), getting fourth and special. Next she won at Cheltenham, taking second and special, Mr. Heath judging. Next at Nottingham, where she won first, and was greatly admired, the judge being Mr. Greeves. She next won first at Bristol, and at Swindon, the next show, she obtained first and special. From there she went to the Horticultural Hall, again taking first, and at the City and Suburban Show she won, under Mr. Payne, first and seven specials, one being for the best bird in the show, another, 10s. 6d. for the best bird bred by a member. The specials also included a cup given for best hen bred by a member, and a diploma for best bird in the Champion classes. The Palace Show she visited next, obtaining first and two specials, and she is now doing very well in the breeding room. The Green Crest-bred cock has only been shown at the Horticultural Hall, where he took first. He is not of my own breeding, but comes direct from Fakenham. Both birds are now paired up, and are doing very well indeed. I have been a breeder for only seven years, the last year being the first in which I showed in the open classes. I am very proud of my champion hen, from whom I bred at least seven birds last year. Two of these were sold to different parties in Aberdeen at a big figure, and the others are still in my possession. I sold quite £35 worth of the same strain last year through my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS.—A. E. LAZARUS.

Twitterings.

The Pendlebury, Swinton, and Dis. C. and B.B.S., have decided to hold a First Feather Show on Saturday, July 3rd, writes Mr. Alex. Donnelly, the secretary.

Kindly noto that I have been appointed to the position of hon. secretary to the Leeds C.B.S., writes Mr. J. Chambers, 22, St. Ann's Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds.

Kindly note my change of address, writes Mr. C. J. Andrews, from Woodland Street to 47, Eleanor Road, Dalston, London, N.

We are affiliated to the C.B.U. for our annual show on November 25th, writes Mr. A. W. Ludlow, Hon. Sec. of the Stamford and District F.A.

"Constant Reader" writes: Can anyone tell me the name and address of a firm which supplies moss mats to put in the bottom of show cages?

We have decided to engage Mr. A. Bentley as the cage-bird judge at the show to be held on November 6th, writes Mr. J. E. Byrne, hon. secretary of the Cleator Moor F. and C.B.S.

Ramsden's Pure Peppers are of wonderful colour and absolute purity. Sold free from any admixture. The best and most economical colour food on the market is Ramsden's.—(Advt.)

The judges elected for our show on November 18th, writes Mr. W. H. Lewes, hon. secretary of the Morriston and Dis. C.B.S., are Messrs. H. Norman (London), and W. Mundell (Bradford).

In my report of our committee meeting, writes Mr. W. H. Uzzell, hon. secretary of the Midland Counties Y.C.C., I omitted to mention a donation of 10s. promised by Mr. J. L. Beck (Handsworth), towards trophy fund.

I am doing very well with my Canaries, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall (Newcastle-on-Tyne). I have over thirty young from two days to a fortnight old. All my hens are feeding well, and I have only had three unfertile eggs.

I would take it as a favour if you would intimate to fanciers and others through Cage Birds, that I have resigned from the secretaryship of the Maryhill and District Ornithological Club.—Cliff Bell (Maryhill).

Kindly allow me to thank all who sent replies to my advertiscment in Cage Birds of April 24th, as they were too numerous for me to be able to answer all personally; they were 45 in number.—W. Cawthorne (Ferry Bridge, Yorks).

Your readers will be pleased to hear that Mr. Alex. M. Gardiner has been elected a member of our school board, writes Mr. Andrew Anderson, jun. (Newtongrange). There were twelve candidates for the seven seats, and Mr. Gardner came out fifth. He was also the youngest candidate.

Through the kindness of Mr. T. Speedie we are having a ramble over the estate at Neither, Liberton, on May 8, and invite all interested in wild-bird life to attend; ladies welcomed. Meet at Neither, Liberton, car terminus at 3 p.m., trusting to see a large turn-out.—W. Holton, secretary, Edinburgh N.C. and M.B.S.

The rule-book and programme for 1909 of the Dulwich O.S. have been issued. The latter includes a country ramble on May 16th, several shows, lectures, and demonstrations, and an annual outing on September 5th. Fanciers wishing to join the society should communicate with the hon. secretary, Mr. S. J. Kent, 156, Underhill Road, East Dulwich, S.E.

Mr. O. Mitchell, hon. secretary and treasurer, Open Norwich Plainhead Club, writes: In reply to numerous inquiries there is no "radius" for the above club, and fanciers in any part of the United Kingdom are eligible for membership. The secretary will be pleased to communicate with any fanciers who intend joining the club and forward all particulars respecting same.

We have made arrangements with two well-known gentlemen to judge at our open show in the county rooms, late free library, on December 4th and 6th, writes Mr. J. A. Tyler, secretary of the Leicester C.B.S. We think we can congratulate ourselves in getting Messrs. J. H. Roe and J. F. Dewar to officiate. We are holding our annual Nest Feather Show on July 3rd.

The balance-sheet (for 1908) of the Cinnamon Canary Club reflects much credit upon the hon. secretary, Mr. R. J. Pretty, and the other officials. The balance brought into the year's accounts from 1907 was £10 14s. 5d., but £3 8s. 6d. of this had to be deducted in respect of specials for that year; and when it is also pointed out that £7 9s. 6d. has been paid out in specials for 1908, the balance in hand of £2 9s. 3d. will be considered highly satisfactory.

We have got our judges appointed for our annual show on October 9th, and the following gentlemen will place the cards on that date, writes Mr. Robt. Whitton, secretary, Broughty Ferry C.B.S. For Scotch Fancies, Messrs. C. Berwick (St. Andrews), and W. Hailstones (Edinburgh), for Crests and Norwich, Mr. D. Buchan (Falkirk); for Border Fancies, Mr. Joe Stevenson (Kirriemuir); for British and foreign bird section, Mr. A. W. Watson (Leith).

Mr. Tom Oliver has been engaged to judge at the First Feather Show, to be held on June 12th, writes Mr. Wm. Cottingham, the secretary of the Hyson Green (Nottingham) C.B.S.

Mr. Geo. Gardner has been added to our list of judges for the Dulwich O.S. Annual Show, October 11th to 13th, write Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers. The First Feather Show will be held July 1st, judge, Mr. Robson.

Through being ill now for some considerable time, I am compelled to leave the Fancy, which I am very sorry to do, writes Mr. G. W. Saunders (Sutton, Surrey). When I am able to get about again, I have been ordered to rest as much as possible. Having been a lover of birds all my life, and of the Norwich Plainhead and Cinnamon for some years, it will mean something to me to part with my birds; but I hope at some future time to be able to take up my hobby again.

At our last meeting, writes Mr. J. Thomas, hon. secretary of the Millom and Dis. C.B.A., it was decided to throw the membership open, so that all intending members should write to me at 83, Lonsdale Road, Millom, Cumberland, at once, in order that they may be proposed at our next meeting. The annual subscription is 2s. 6d.

Our big show will be held on October 13th, in the Corn Exchange, writes Mr. W. A. Broadley, hon. secretary of the Alnwick and Dis. C.B.S. The judges are Messrs. J. Maddison (Newcastle), for British birds, and T. Dixon (Bedlington), for Canaries.

The South Manchester C.B.S. have fixed the following dates for their First Feather Shows, writes Mr. Jno. C. Spilsbury, the secretary: Saturday, June 26th, and Saturday, July 31st. Judges for Canary section, Mr. George (Manchester), and for British bird section, Mr. Fryer (Manchester).

Mr. A. Wellings (Prescot), writes Mr. R. H. Davies, hon. secretary of the Leigh and Dis. C.B.S., will judge at our Nest Feather Show, to be held on July 17th and 18th. We are having a Nest Feather Members' Table Show on May 26th, when Mr. J. Marsh (Leigh), will judge.

The Ferryhill and Dis. C.B.S. have fixed the date of the second Annual Open Show for Saturday, December 4th. Mr. J. Stringer (Pelton Fell), has been engaged to judge the Canary section, and Mr. J. Maddison (Newcastle), the British and foreign bird sections.—R. Binks, hon. secretary.

Messrs. James Carter and Co., the renowned seedsmen, of 97, 237, and 238, High Holborn, London, are well-known for the excellent quality of the seeds they supply, and our readers have now a splendid opportunity of testing the various foods, as samples and prices may be had on application, as stated in Messrs. Carter's advertisement appearing in our Spring Number last week.

It is to be hoped, writes Mr. W. Reid, from Sunderland, that fanciers in other parts of the country are not experiencing the terrific weather we are getting in the North of England at the present time. It is simply awful! We had a heavy snowstorm here in Sunderland on the evening of April 30th, and a hard frost on the morning of May 1st. During the past few days the weather here has been colder than at any time during the recent winter, and that, in all truth, was severe enough. One hears many complaints as to young birds being dead in shell, and hens being found dead on the nest. Fanciers with warm rooms will appreciate the benefit of a little heat at the present time, especially in the early mornings when the cold is most severe, and the hens are coming off to feed.

Whose Ideas Were They ?

Mr. A. Mallett writes from West Ham expressing his pleasure with Mr. Cooper's request to alter committee to general meeting, provided he (Mr. Mallett) is permitted to sit.

Open Norwich Plainhead Club.

The committee of the above club invite applications from societies desirous of the club's patronage, for the coming season, and all applications with number of classes (not to be less than six), along with judges' names, etc., to be forwarded to the club's secretary not later than July 30th, 1909.—O. Mitchell, hon. secretary, 13, Lodge Terrace, Bowling, Bradford.

Thrushes Breed in a Carriage.

A friend of mine, writes Mr. Wm. Elliott (Bishop Auckland), has a portion of an old railway carriage standing in his garden; and a pair of Thrushes have built their nest on the rack for two successive years using the open window for means of ingress and egress. They do not seem at all alarmed when be goes in to get his gardening tools.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, LONDON, E.C.

I am trying the Linnet-Siskin, Greenfinch-Siskin, and Bramblefinch-Bullfinch crosses, and I hope to be successful, as the birds seem to be pairing splendidly. I always look forward to Friday each week, when I get your valuable paper, Cage Birns.—P. Jowett (Bradford).

Our 10th Annual Young Bird Show will be held on July 10th, in the assembly rooms, Old Boars Head, Middleton, writes Mr. J. Oldham, secretary of the Middleton O.S. Mr. William Hardy (Oldham), has been elected to judge.

I see in last week's "Twitterings" another vendor claiming that Messrs. Godley and Hodder's birds were fed solely on his feeds last season. Their orders to me last season were: Mr. Godley 56lbs. Royal Red, Mr. Hodder 45lbs. Royal Red. At last 1909 Crystal Palace Show, in the eight champion Norwich classes, the whole eight first prize winners were moulted on Royal Red. The eight exhibitors who won them all used about 50lbs. each Royal Red. Is there any more proof than this as to who claims the premier colour-feed? Mr. J. W. Rennie, big southern winner of 1st clear yellow, 1st yellow hens, Crystal Palace, writes: "May 3rd, 1909. All my winning Norwich were fed solely on your colour-feed, and I intend to use no other on them this year." Also supplied last season: Mr. E. Baker 200lbs. Royal Red, Sam Cook, Norwich Plainhead cup winner, 60lbs., Mr. Grey, Big N.N.P.C. silver bowl winner, 30lbs., Judge Vardy 212lbs., Mr. Midgley, winner two first open Norwich at last Palace, 20lbs., Mr. Dobinson, another first winner at last Palace, 20lbs., T. Irons 70lbs., W. Booth, birds hottest in England, 30lbs., A. Hirst 30lbs., J. Wilcock 70lbs., R. Halliday 20lbs., Cleminson and Taylor 100lbs., W. Morris 60lbs., W. Whetstone 30lbs., W. R. Miles 50lbs., J. Howard 200lbs., W. Spillman 20lbs., W. Collings 20lbs., Dr. Herd 20lbs., Tams and Sons 30lbs., W. Dormer 60lbs., G. Harland 30lbs., Mr. Hope 60lbs., J. C. Barnes 120lbs., Judge Battye 100lbs. I could fill this paper with successful exhibitors' names supplied by me last year, not with 1 or 2lbs., so as to be able to compete for specials. Anyone who saw any of above gentlemen's birds last season will admit they were the hottest out.—See advertisement columns for prices.—T. Sandiford. (Advt.)

We are very pleased to bear from Messrs. Fox Bros., 26, Ludgate Hill, London, E.C., that the sales of their Egg and Biscuit Food are increasing at a phenomenal rate, and that the number of testimonials being sent in to them each week form a highly gratifying and solid tribute to the merits of their composition. Messrs. Fox Bros. guarantee their Egg and Biscuit to contain no less than 50 per cent. of actual fresh eggs in a dried state, and the analysis is the same as in a raw egg with the exception of the moisture. They point out, further, and this is of exceptional importance, that the composition is perfectly soluble. The hen is thus assisted in feeding her young, and the chances of rearing all the young birds are materially increased. We advise all our readers to ask their corn merchants for this preparation, and in the event of any inability to obtain same, to immediately communicate with the firm, who will be pleased to supply them with a free sample and the name of the nearest agent. There is no doubt that this special food not only effects considerable economy in the egg bill, but is much more suitable, and involves less trouble to the bird breeder, especially to the working-man fancier, whose time is so limited. It has the great advantage of not turning sour in the cage.

Wake Up, Great Harwood.

A sleepy place apparently is the Lancashire town of Great Harwood. Mr. George Waddington, the Secretary of the local Cage Bird Society, writes: At our annual meeting held on January 11th, it was moved that we alter our show date, as we thought October 9th and 10th too early. Since then I have called meetings every fortnight in regard to fixing a date for the show, and cannot get sufficient members together to form a meeting. It was also proposed to have our annual First Feather Show in June, and I called a meeting together to select a judge for the same, and the turn-up was the Chairman and myself, as usual. At our last show we had a loss of about £5, and when I went for my books to the auditor, he had left a note with his wife saying he had severed his connection with the club. You see it is no pleasant thing to be a secretary of such a Society. I dare say some of the fanciers of the surrounding districts would like to know if the Society still exists, so I would like you to make a note in Twitterings and tell them that the Society has had one meeting since the New Year came in.

Breeding & Feeding for Colour.

By JOHN W. BANCROFT.

A lecture delivered before the Sale Open O.S., on March 15th.

In response to the kind invitation of your worthy Secretary to give you a lecture on the above subject, I have pleasure in complying with that request. At the same time I must confess to having grave misgivings in regard to my ability to give the subject the full justice it deserves. So much has been said of late on this subject, both in the way of lectures and papers, before different societies, which lectures and papers have afterwards been published in the Fancy Press, that I find it well nigh impossible to give you anything which may be really new or original. In the hope, however, of offering a little help and advice to the beginners or novices, who may be present, and at the risk of giving the older fanciers a few hints which may appear to them somewhat stale, I will do my best to make my paper as instructive and as interesting as possible, trusting to your generosity in overlooking any of the little failings it may contain.

Colour-feeding in the Old Days.

What a vast amount of meaning is there underlying the short sentence: "breeding for colour"! In the old days when colour-feeding was in its infancy, and known only to the few, little indeed was the regard paid to the subject of breeding for colour. Then fanciers relied on the pepper-feeding to give the birds the desired shade of colour. How very different is the procedure to-day. In this progressive age of keen competition, birds must of necessity be bred as well as fed for colour, otherwise the fancier will be compelled to take a back seat in the exhibition world (my remarks just now refer, of course, to those varieties in which colour plays a prominent part, such as the Yorkshire or the Norwich. With varieties such as the Belgian, Scotch Fancy, Crest, etc., colour comes only as a secondary consideration).

Making Use of Green Blood.

Now, in order to breed colour into one's stock, and to keep it up to the requisite standard of excellence, it will be found advisable to occasionally introduce green blood, or, as it is usually styled, "take a dip into the green." This may be accomplished in various ways; but it must not be done in any haphazard fashion, but thoughtfully and intelligently, with an object in view, and as a means to an end. We have heard a great deal of late amongst certain fanciers, regarding the need for the introduction of green blood. "Get plenty of green blood into your stock," they say, "or you will never make any headway on the show bench." With some of these people, there is a double meaning behind this advice. They want a market for surplus stock. They have an over-abundance of these green and heavily marked birds, and what better plan could they devise to dispose of this (in their case) almost useless surplus, at a remunerative figure, than to persuade the innocent novice that these are just the class of birds he requires? Green blood (of the right kind, mind you) I admit is the real fountain of colour. The rich bright yellow green is the one for the purpose; not the bronze green, which denotes the presence of Cinnamon blood.

When introducing green blood, care must be exercised, so as not to overdo it, else the tendency will be to produce scarcely anything but green and heavily marked birds, the better class birds, viz., Clears and Ticks, being at a premium.

Some Different Methods.

There are different ways of infusing green blood into a strain of birds. One might select for the purpose a self-yellow green cock, paired to a clear buff hen, when the clears and ticks amongst their progeny, especially the yellows, will usually come out teeming with colour. The clear and ticked yellow cocks from this pairing may again be mated to ticked hens, and their progeny again paired to clears; whilst the green and variegated brothers, to the clear and ticked cocks aforementioned, may also in their turn be paired to clear hens.

A plan more preferable, however, is to pair two heavily marked (yellow cock and buff hen) together, the green offspring from these being paired to clears. The young from this pairing break up more readily, thereby producing the lightly marked and clear birds far sooner than do those from the self-yellow green cock and clear buff hen. If a fancier commences with good, rich-coloured stock (clears and marks), he may pair them together—ticked cock and clear hen, or vice versa, for several generations, without the introduction of any fresh green blood being necessary; and even then it would only need to be, say, a hot-coloured heavily marked variegated yellow.

When a breeder is ambitious of having a good percentage of clear and ticked birds in his stock (and what breeder of Yorkshires and Norwich is there who is not?) only at such times as the birds show a tendency to lose depth of colour will it be found necessary to introduce the green or heavily marked birds. If it be desired to reduce markings, let the cocks be clears when pairing the birds up, as the male bird has more influence in throwing colour and markings than the female.

In purchasing the marked bird for the purpose of gaining colour, I should strongly advise the fancier to buy only colour-fed specimens. I allude to those varieties only which have to be colour-fed—the kind of bird that has become (to use a reporting phrase) "red hot." One cannot judge when viewing a natural coloured specimen as to whether that particular bird is possessed of the inherent properties to take the colour-feed in a satisfactory manner. I have seen birds of a fairly good colour, in natural feather, which, when colour-fed, wore utter failures, and this not because they had not partaken of the feed in sufficient quantity. Others again, have appeared in their unfed state very deficient and flat in colour, but when moulted and fed, have come out very rich and deep in colour. This is also very noticeable in young birds during their first or nest feather moult. And I strongly advise the breeder not to dispose of any youngsters until after their next feather moult. I have had buffs almost white in nest feather come out the hottest coloured birds in the room when moulted and colour-fed. Also very indifferent-looking yellows, which have passed muster and won in buff classes at nest feather shows, sometimes moult out regular stormers, so far as depth and richness of colour are concerned.

Richness and Depth of Colour.

Richness and depth of colour are supposed to go hand in hand with quality of feather; yet I have seen lots of birds possessed of magnificent quality of feather, which, after having gone through the moult on colour-feed, have scarcely shown any noticeable difference whatever. The feather which my experience teaches me takes the colour-feed best of all is what I call the harsh wiry kind—that which has a coarse, harsh look, and lacks the bloom, smoothness and polish usually associated with the rich-quality feathered bird. One can generally pick this harsh feathered bird out whilst in nest feather; it has a peculiar texture all its own, and hard to describe, being usually of a pale lemony tint. The kind of feather I always like to see, and welcome on youngsters, is the soft fluffy sort, almost like down; no matter how pale a youngster is with feather of this description, in nest feather either yellow or buff, it is almost certain to come out a stormer, both for quality and colour, when moulted and fed.

Cinnamon Blood as a Colour-producer.

Amongst the cage bird fanciers to-day are many strong advocates of the use of Cinnamon blood as a means of imparting colour and quality into their stock. With all due respect to these views, I must confess, from my own experience, and also that of many of my birdy acquaintances, to being at total variance with at least the view respecting colour. In using the green from cinnamon blood as a means of gaining colour, the breeder will, nine times out of every ten, discover this means to be an utter failure. This at any rate has been my experience. He will get marked birds in abundance, but will not go one step in advance as regards depth of natural colour. Lovely quality he may, and often does acquire, but this is about the limit.

I am quite aware that I am treading now on very debatable ground, and have no wish that you should infer that it is an impossibility to introduce colour by the use of the cinnamon bird. I have done it myself on different occasions; but at the same time I have considered that the colour has come by a fluke, and not really from the cinnamon itself, as it were, but by a kind of a throw-back from some Norwich ancestor, which had been grafted into the cinnamon at some time or the other.

Colour-feeding Explained.

Having now briefly explained the method of colour-breeding, I will pass on to the subject of feeding for colour, or, as it is usually termed, colour-feeding. Colour-feeding is a subject which has at different times been the cause of much wrangling, dissension, and unpleasantness amongst fanciers generally. One section which I am pleased to say is in the majority uphold the practice, looking upon it as harmless, innocent, interesting, and honest, whilst the opposite party (happily in the minority) fight against it most strongly, stigmatising it as cruel, harmful, fraudulent, and dishonest. I don't know whether I have any of the opposition party in this audience to-night, but if there do happen to be any present I sincerely hope they will not be offended at any of my remarks, and if I do appear at any time to "tread on their corns," they will bear with me to the end and let me down gently at the conclusion of my paper.

In the first place, "What is colour-feeding?" Colour-feeding is simply an agent used by fanciers to assist nature to bring out her glory to the fullest extent on the bird's plumage during the moulting period. In other words, it is the means of bringing to the surface beauties, which otherwise would lie hidden and dormant.

A CANADIAN FANCIER IN HIS BIRDROOM.

Our photograph depicts Mr. H. S. Tibbs, of Toronto, Ontario, and a corner of his birdroom. Mr. Tibbs is a very well-known Canadian fancier, having been secretary and treasurer of the Toronto Canary Society for nearly 7 years, while he is, too, business manager and editor of the Canary section of the "Canadian Fancier," a monthly magazine, and probably the only one on the American continent with such a section. Mr. Tibbs, we hear, was born at Cheltenham in 1854 and emigrated to Canada in 1876. His first essay in Canary breeding was made at Montreal in 1880, Yorkshires being the variety which gave him the "bird-fever." He has since had success with Norwich Plainheads, and taken up Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, and Lizards. During recent seasons Mr. Tibbs has been a confirmed "Rollerite," and has won the British Roller Club's medal and several cups and local medals, with birds of his own breeding, out of imported stock. He introduced singing contests into Canadian bird circles, and is now hopeful of forming a Canadian Roller Club.

Mr. Hodder's Account.

It is now many years since I commenced breeding Norwich Plainheads, and during those years it has been my close and constant study to know how to improve the bird, and make it as near the ideal as possible. Of course, I have had the usual ups and downs which are the lot of most breeders of live stock of whatever species, but with breeding Norwich Plainheads, as with everything else in this world, the only way to succeed is to persevere, and to constantly persevere, even as it may seem at times in the face of defeat. This has been my motto from the beginning with regard to Canary breeding.

How to Obtain Quality and Stamina.

I have lost some good birds in my time, and my calculations have more than once been upset, but my determination has been to spare no pains in remedying any losses, although sometimes it has meant a long journey to purchase the particular bird or birds I have wanted. I have proved that it is only by adding a good bird or two occasionally that the quality and stamina of my stud are maintained. I feel certain that where inbreeding is too closely followed, fanciers will lose both in size and stamina in their birds. There is a great deal in pairing the birds rightly.

It is no use buying birds haphazard, with nothing but surface to recommend them. I remember many years ago paying, on one particular occasion, quite a high price for a bird for the purpose of improving my stock. I was proud at the thought of getting Palace champions the following season from the pairing of this particular bird to one of my very best hens; but imagine my disappointment when the young were reared to find that they were nothing but weeds. Of course, no one was to blame, the bloods did not "hit" or "blend," as we call it; that was all. But there, I survived it, and lived to learn. And I am still learning—there is always something new to learn in bird breeding. If I were a beginner again—i.e., one without any knowledge whatever of Canary breeding—I would not be very keen about paying a high price for my birds, and getting the very best to start with, as is often desired. What is the use of a raw recruit in the Fancy speculating recklessly in expensive stock before he has gained, at least, some knowledge of the subject? Rather let a beginner pay a moderate price for his stock to commence with, and if he has had the luck to rear a few decent birds the first year, as no doubt he will, then let him seek the aid and advice of an experienced fancier friend in selecting the best for his next year's breeding. Afterwards, when he has gained some knowledge of how to manage his stock, he may speculate a little more freely on a more valuable bird or two, and so by degrees build up a strain of his own. I think this by far a much saner method than buying very costly birds to begin with, and if the first season turns out unsatisfactory, clear out all the stock and give up the fancy in disgust, with a heavy financial loss into the bargain.

Selecting Stock for Breeding Purposes.

In selecting stock for breeding purposes it is of vital importance that, above all things, type in the hen should be adhered to. I would not mind if the cock bird was a bit long or rough, if these defects were well remedied in the hen. I don't like very large hens; I have never found them so useful as their smaller sisters. I have bred with both large and small hens, and I have proved, on the whole, that the best results are obtained from small, typical, tight feathered hens. One of my best Buffs last year I bred from a small hen. I have 60 pairs of Norwich breeding this year in two bird-rooms, and, with very few exceptions, the hens are the small or medium-sized ones.

I prefer the cock to possess a large head and good colour, as I find that these qualities are more likely to perpetuate themselves in the progeny by the use of a cock of this kind. I think there should be very great attention paid to quality of feather—the fine, soft, silky texture of feather which all true lovers of a good Norwich Canary admire.

Colour should be bred for; I always use a green or marked bird or two, and a good number of ticked birds. This is the only way to keep colour in one's stock; of course, care has to be exercised in the use of green blood, or it may be overdone. It is an easy matter to get good results from colour feeding if the birds are bred in this way. I like to see the Buffs showing a nice meal on the surface of the feather, and also that glorious colour coming up from underneath, so to speak, as though it would burst through. To me, a bird of this kind is a splendid sight, and what a lovely creature is a first-class Yellow, glittering as it does like a ball of fire; it is truly a glorious sight to every true lover of a good Norwich Plainhead.

And is this stamp of bird bred to-day? Yes. I think the Norwich Plainhead of the present day is by far in advance of any of his ancestors. I was literally astounded at the commencement of last show season to see the wonderful strides some fanciers had made, especially with their Yellows. Really, in face of what I saw at some of the leading shows of the advance made especially in Yellows, I cannot agree with some recent writers who assert that the Norwich of to-day is a big, coarse, Crest-bred kind of bird. Of course, I say this without prejudice, as we are all entitled to our opinions; but this is my honest opinion in regard to the present-day winners. I admit there is room yet for improvement, and all breeders of the variety whom I have the pleasure of knowing, are fully alive to the fact, and have set themselves to the task of producing the ideal bird. That we may see the "Ideal" on the show bench at the end of 1909 is my sincerest desire.—J. Hodder.

Mr. McFarlane's Account.

The photograph shows a few of the cups which I have won at most of the leading shows, viz., Glasgow, Dundee, Perth, Brechin, Paisley, Kilmarnock, Hamilton, Thornton and Kelty. I have also scores on nearly all the cups that are now offered for competition throughout Scotland. Since going into the Fancy proper, some 16 years ago, I have won something over 2,000 prizes, besides over 50 gold and silver medals.

At a considerable expense I have built up a strain of Plainheads, as I think, second to none, and without exaggeration I can safely say that I have bred 95 per cent. of my own winners. My list of wins will testify as to the class of bird I keep, and I believe that my success on the show bench is due entirely to the bold, short, thick, Bullfinch-type of bird which I hold rigidly to. I cannot say that my 16 years' experience has altered my idea very much as to what a Norwich Plainhead ought to be, although when going the rounds of the shows I see all shapes and sizes of birds amongst the winners, due no doubt to the stamp of bird the judges have themselves unfortunately stocked. My opinion, in a natshell, is, that one cannot do better than adhere to the model of the Scottish Plainhead Club and combine with it, both quality and colour. I have put up 20 pairs of Plainheads, and several Muling pairs, and I hope with my usual luck to be able to stage a few winners during the forthcoming show season. I have some Plainheads which have never been defeated in open competition except by their own stable companions. My services are, I may say, greatly in demand for judging shows, but owing to my business arrangements I can enter into but few engagements.—Alexander McFarlane.

Mr. Eckersley's Account.

I think it is an excellent idea to devote the illustrated supplement of a Double Number solely to one variety of Canary. I send you the most recent counterfeit presentment I have of myself. On my lap is my pet monkey, "Ebenezer," who, at the close of his comparatively brief, but not uneventful, career, went "down to the vile dust from whence he sprung unwept, unhonoured, and unsung," because shortly before his exit, he killed my champion yellow "Eclipse." I am hoping this season to achieve a nearer approach to my ideal than I have yet done. My chief aim is to produce a bird of "brevity" and substance, with a contour composed of exquisite curves: and, like the youngster in the well-known advertisement, "I shall not be happy till I get it." In conclusion, allow me to say that I trust that when the next show season arrives, it will be found that Norwich breeders, generally, have made a distinct advance towards the perfection of type; for I think it will be conceded that, with lamentably few exceptions, the birds of to-day are seriously lacking in this absolutely essential property.—J. Andrew Eckersley.

Mr. C. E. Brown's Account.

I am pleased to say that I have been very successful with my first love—the Norwich Plainhead. I have had the misfortune to lose some good birds, having had a splendid Buff stolen, and five grand birds killed on the return journey from Plymouth Show. I also had about twenty birds killed by rats. My birds, by the way, are kept in disused cheese rooms, and I use no heat whatever. One room I use for breeding purposes, one for flight, and the other as a hospital; and if I get a bird a bit pinky, I immediately transfer it to this last-named room, the windows of which I keep open night and day. I may say that I very seldom lose a bird through death from natural causes.

But despite my misfortunes, I have been able to hold my own on the show bench, having won numerous awards, together with seven cups, about 30 medals, and many other special prizes. I have also won the Bristol Cage Bird Society's members' challenge cup two years in succession.

To my way of thinking, the Norwich Plainhead is not only the most beautiful of our Canary tribe, but the most prolific and easy to rear. Above all it commands a ready sale. Of course, I am speaking of saleable specimens. Go to any recognised show, and you will find the chubby ones monopolising the crowd, and quite right too. The bright, bold, chubby, sprightly, popular Plainhead deserves all the admiration it gets. But I am afraid we are getting a trifle mixed over the would-be present day type of bird to breed to, and I must say that some of the sketches depicted in our valuable Fancy paper, Cage Birds, are very misleading to the rising generation of fanciers (by the way, what wonderful strides Cage Birds has made, and what a great help to the young fancier it is; ah! to the old hands, too. And how grateful we should all be to the Editor for the splendid pennyworth he puts before us week after week. I trust he will long be spared to continue in this good work "of fostering friendship between fanciers").

To describe the Norwich Plainhead, which constitutes my ideal; I must say that I prefer a bird from 5¾ to 6 inches long, of good size, with a well-rounded head, and one that is free from browing, with short beak, good bold eye set well in the centre of head, well-filled in cheeks, short, thick neck, short body clean cut away behind, back broad and well filled in, bold deep chest well rounded, wings short and well braced, the tips to meet evenly at root of tail, tail short, well folded and erect and soft silky feather, bright, level and compact. I consider the principal point to pay attention to when breeding is the selection of the birds you have as near perfection as possible. For instance, I pair up my best yellow cock bird to my best buff hen, and vice-versa. Some fanciers would say, "Oh! Why do you pair two evenly-balanced birds together?" Simply because I believe in "like producing like." I detest big, browy stock birds, and think it a great mistake for fanciers to go out of their way to get these mongrels into their strain. If we wish to improve our cattle we should certainly not introduce a shorthorn bull into a Jersey herd: and why use foreign blood in our Norwich Plainheads, when there is no earthly need of it? By so doing we are not only losing type and quality, but we are sacrificing that lovely box-woodlike feather so seldom seen in the winning Norwich to-day. My opinion of the stamp of bird exhibited to-day is that not enough attention is paid to type and quality, and if more of our Norwich classes were allotted to specialist judges, instead of one judge taking two or three varieties, these narrow-sided, coarse-feathered birds would soon be a thing of the past.—C. E. Brown.

The Blackbird of Dorset.

In the county of Dorset the Blackbird is not among the birds protected by law. It appears that these melodious songsters are exceptionally plentiful and do considerable damage to the apple and pear crops. Among the other birds not protected are the Sparrow, Wood Pigeon, Rook, and Jackdaw. All these are generally able to look after themselves pretty well, and hardly need to be scheduled.

MY FAVOURITE BIRD: THE GOLDFINCH.

By W. PAGE.

The paper awarded First Prize in the City and Suburban A.C.B.'s last Essay Competition.

You may also make a mixture as follows for tit-bits—½lb. maw, ½ pint niger, 2ozs. thistle, and 1oz. of dandelion seeds, of which I give half a teaspoonful daily, except twice weekly, when I give a little egg-food and maw seed. I substitute ripe seedling heads of dandelion and thistle for the seed mixture as soon as they are procurable. I give a little green-food daily (wild, for preference), such as dandelion, shepherd's purse, groundsel, and chickweed. If the above cannot be obtained, then lettuce or cress may be given. I also give the birds the opportunity of bathing at liberty.

After this treatment all should be well, and the birds should not be long coming into condition. But should any of them be a little backward on this treatment, then I give a mealworm now and again which I find they too readily accept, and greatly enjoy, soon learning to take same from one's fingers.

So much has been said on breeding methods that I think I shall be safe in omitting it from this paper, as it is the same old ground over and over again that is discussed, so I will only say that one hears a great deal about good feeders, and a bird being safe with oggs, that all I can say now is, most fanciers who have a breeding Finch, generally find him another occupation, more profitable than feeding a hen 14 days and helping to rear the young. I know he can, even if he could be trusted to do so. Still, one would not on my advice take a Finch away from a Hybrid pair.

The Exhibiting of Goldfinches.

Now a word on exhibiting our Finches, as, of course, the above remarks on conditioning for breeding apply equally for conditioning for show purposes. But one must take care not to have birds too forward, or, shall I say, rank, as then no bird shows at his best. The most important thing is in regard to the bath, which should be always at a bird's service, no Finch being able to have too much water. Water is by far the greatest conditioner of all.

When our Finch has been got to his best and ready for show, "don't handicap him yourself." This remark may appear strange, but the fact remains that some exhibitors do handicap their birds greatly—especially at members' shows. As a general rule, they have a good bird and know it, as the phrase goes. And when a show comes along, they say, "Oh! yes, he's good enough to win there." Perhaps without doubt he is, but on walking round after the awards are allotted, they find him pegged back perhaps only one, perhaps out of the money altogether, and the leader, though far from being the best, has gained the honour. This is what causes the grumbling, especially if the said champion has a splendid record. But if you asked the judge, he would say, the other won on condition; and rightly so, too, as all bird keepers know the difficulty of keeping them and showing them "in the pink." The only remedy is to show them for all they are worth, which means, in London especially, that they must be washed and staged spotlessly, not overlooking the cage item. Then, if they are beaten, you have the greatest consolation possible, and that is that you know you showed him for all he was worth, and that he met better birds.

By staging your birds without the above named treatment you not only handicap the bird, but yourself, the judge and the visitors also. In conclusion, allow me to quote the old motto "What's worth doing at all, is worth doing well." So we must all try and make the best of what we have and that the best bird may win is my wish for all.

Suggestions for an Outdoor Aviary and Its Management.

By H. S. DAVIES.

Let me first of all impress upon the novice the necessity of starting on a reasonably small scale, so that he may gain a knowledge of the best methods of the keeping, etc., of our interesting birds. So we will start at the beginning, and that is the building of the shed—or, to be more grammatical in birdy matters, we will call it the aviary—which we intend to have to go on with our hobby.

A Suitable Size for an Aviary.

An aviary of the following dimensions will give one ample space to start with. Let it be 12ft. long, 8ft. wide, 10ft. high to top of roof, and 8ft. high to eaves. This will allow one plenty of room, and will give the birds sufficient space to live in happiness, besides providing just about enough for the novice to look after and keep in good order. The aviary should be built of well seasoned matched boards, and should bo lined inside with match boards, which need not bo quite so thick as the onos outside, and the space between the match boards should be filled up with sawdust or fine shavings; tho formor is preferred, as this will be a great help to keep thc heat of the aviary at a good, even temperature. If you don't mind a little moro expense, cover the outside with tarred felting, which is not at all dear; this will greatly help to keep out the cold in the winter. As we do not intend heating this aviary, we must make it as comfortable for the inmates as possible. Get it built about a foot from the ground, have the floor made of good thick flooring boards and always keep a nice layer of sawdust on the floor, as this helps to keep the room sweet and clean, besides making it much more cosy than if the floor were left bare.

An Aviary of Three Sections.

We will not stay longer on the matter of tho building, but will pass on to the birds that are going to make their new home in these quarters. I intend dividing the aviary into three sections, that, in my opinion, will fulfil the requirements of the novice in all branches, viz., firstly, Canaries; secondly, Britishers; and thirdly, Foreigners. Now as our aviary has been built, wo must keep within its limits as regards the number of birds, and we must not overstock, as that will not be pleasant for the birds, nor for their owner. We will therefore pick out six specimens for each section, which will be quite enough for the room at our disposal.

For the first section, that for Canaries, we will pick out three varieties, and have a pair of each. For the novice I believe the following will be the choicest for him:—No. 1 pair, Yorkshires (tho "Gentleman" of the Fancy); No. 2 pair, Lizards (the "Art" of the Fancy); and No. 3 pair, Rollers (tho "Musician" of the Fancy). These three pairs the most critical novice will find to be all he requires. Now for the cages; procure three double-breeding eages and one flight cage. Give the tbree eocks a double-breeder each, and put the hens in the flight; if you have a successful breeding season give the youngsters the use of tho flight, and should you have an extra good season, procure cages to give the young sufficient room to fly about in. A glance at CAGE BIRDS in sufficient time before the breeding season starts will provide plenty of sound practical advice by the leading writers as to the proper methods of breeding Canaries, and the Queries Columns of CAGE BIRDS are always open to one, which offer one a rare opportunity of gaining full knowledge. As to the prices of the birds for the No. 1 section, a look through the advertisement columns of "C.B." will provide you with an opportunity of purchasing plenty of birds at various prices to suit all pockets.

The Second Section Considered.

We will now pass on to the No. 2 section, that, viz., for Britishers, whero again we will divide our section into six species. These will include one each of the following species. The first will be tho Magpie, so well known to country lads. Magpies are rather shy, and do not therefore come very near to our towns, so that the only chance one has of seeing him, if not in his wild state, is at a cage-bird show, where he stands a good chance if shown in good condition.

Our second bird will be the Song Thrush, so well known to almost everybody. As a songster, he is as good as almost any of our resident birds. Our third bird will be the bold-looking Hawfinch. He also is a rather shy bird, but makes a very handsome cago pet, and should be included in the stock of any aviary. The fourth will be the popular Goldfinch, also well known, and for beauty, song, and gracefulness, far ahead of any of the British Hardbills. No. 5 will be the Nuthatch, a fairly plentiful species, but seldom kept as cage birds. He can be bought for a few shillings, and is not at all difficult to keep, as he is very hardy and requires nothing extra as regards food. He should most decidedly appear as one of the novice's Softbills, or, rather, Part-Softbills. For the last bird we will have the beautiful and graceful Grey Wagtail, which, in my opinion, is the most interesting resident Britisher we have.

Now for the cages in which to keep our birds. The Magpio will require a cage 4ft. 6ins. long, 2ft. 6ins. high, and 2ft. wide, with threo perches, two of them opposite the food and water utensils, and the other between the two, but about midway between the top and the bottom of the cage. For the Thrush, a cage 2ft. 6ins. long, 2ft. high, and 18ins. wide, is quitc large enough, with perches in the same position as advised for the "Mag." For the Hawfinch a stock cage 2ft. long, 18ins. high, and 12ins. wide is excellent, with two perches from back to front. For the Goldie one 18ins. long, 14ins. high, and 8ins. wide, is sufficient. The cage for our most interesting specimen, the Nuthatch, should be about 2ft. long, 2ft. high, and 1ft. wide, and should havo fastened to the roof, sides and back old bark from a rotten tree, or, better still, cork bark, which is much softer than the tree bark. You will then find that he will spend most of his time climbing up and down the bark, and will be quite an attraction in the bird-room. As for "Lady Wag," I should adviso giving a eage about 2ft. 6ins. long, 14ins. high, and 1ft. wide. Place therein about six perches made very fine of some kind of hard wood. It is better still to cover the perches with something soft, as the littlo feet of our birds are rather tender. Place the perches about two or three inches from the bottom of cage and about four or five inches between, so that tho Wagtail can hop and walk from one to the other just as she does on the stono in a brook or stream, where she is most likoly to bo seen in her native haunts.

I can assure my novice friends that the little outlay involved to provide good, suitable and roomy cages for his British birds will be greatly repaid in the pleasure he will receive by watching the movements of his pets.

The Feeding of British Birds.

We will now proceed to tho feeding of our collection of British birds. The following I find from oxperience aro the best foods. For the Magpie 6 parts game meal or ground dog biscuits, 1 part meat meal or crissel, 1 part ants' eggs, and 1 part dried flies—all mixed up together. Slightly damp the required amount every morning with water or grated carrot, or finely cut up lettuce, or any green leaves relished by birds. Give also a little cooked or fresh lean meat about two or three times a week; it will be greatly relished; and a raw hen's egg will be a nice tit-bit for "Mag."

For the Thrush a good staple food is as follows:—4 parts game meal, 1 part meat meal, 1 part ants' eggs, 1 part dried flies. Prepare this tho same as I have recommended for the Magpie, and give as many cockroaches, beetles, snails, and worms as you may think fit. Give these only just as a change and a tit-bit.

Food for the Hawfinch is as follows:—2 parts sunflower, 1 part hemp, 1 part Canary seed, and a little dari, buckwheat, and small oats, just as a change of diet. Give also berries, as privet, juniper, haw, etc., and a little green food when it comes in season, such as lettuce, dandelion, and so on.

For Master Goldie provide 1 part hemp, 1 part Canary, and 1 part teazle; also as a tit-bit a little thistle, dandelion, niger, and maw seeds; these are only as a pick-me-up, or as a change, and must be given sparingly. Give also, when he is in season, ripe seedling heads of tho thistles, dandelion, groundsel, etc., also nice leaves as watercress, lettuce, and leaves of dandelion.

For the Nuthatch give 2 parts broken biscuits ground up finely, 1 part ants' eggs, and 1 part dried flies; moisten as above mentioned. Give also a little hemp and Canary seeds daily, which will be greatly relished. Also give nuts, as "monkey" nuts, wallnuts, almonds, etc.; and he will greatly enjoy himself smashing them up. Give him also a few insects and mealworms daily.

For the Wagtail the following makes a good stock mixture:—1 part ground biscuits, 1 part ants' eggs, 1 part dried flies. Mix and prepare theso as daintily as possible. Also give any live insects you can pick up, also any smooth caterpillars you can lay your hands on. Give too, about a dozen mealworms daily, supply them from your hand, and she will become very affectionate in so doing. I should like to mention here that there are some honest food vendors who advertise regularly in "C.B.," who would supply you with food suitable for all the Softbills, and trial foods from two or three of the vendors would soon convince the novice that he can purchase insectivorous food in different grades suitable for the different species of British and foreign birds mentioned in this article.

How I Breed Greenfinch-Canary Mules in Cages.

By FRANK DODD.

In writing this paper, the first I have ever written, my object is (being only a novice) to speak from experience. I must confess that all I know has come direct through CAGE BIRDS. What a lot one can learn by following each week the lectures and the query columns of that journal! Don't miss one week, else you are apt to miss the very thing you want most, is my advice to all.

My First Success.

The Greenfinch Mule is one of my favourites. It is a handsome bird indeed when colour-fed; hardy withal, and gives very little trouble. A good specimen colour-fed will easily hold its own. The first one I ever bred turned out a good one. I hand-reared three summers ago a very nice cock Greenfinch. He became very steady, and in the following spring bred me some nice rich-coloured Mules. In one nest, in particular, he fertilised all the eggs, four in number. I was very encouraged after this.

Now, one may say, "But I cannot get birds to hand-rear." Very well, procure in the month of October a good large yellow Greenfinch, a stoutly-built bird, and one which shows rich yellow bars on the wings. Put him in an ordinary clean box cage, feed him on plenty of sunflower seeds, teazle, hemp, linseed, Canary (and a few oats are also enjoyed), not forgetting to supply all kinds of green food, such as chickweed, groundsel, etc., and a bath twice a week. Also see that he has gritty sand in the cage-bottom; clean this out, however, twice a week, as these birds, being very hearty, must be kept clean for health's sake. If you give your bird the above-named, you will soon find Master Greenie "at home." It is a great thing to get him steady. A mealworm, too, is often enjoyed. As time goes on and as the breeding season approaches, you will find that the cages must be seen to. Get the ordinary two-compartment breeding cage with a sliding partition; see that all is clean and that there are no cracks for red mite to crawl into.

When and How to Pair the Birds.

I may say here that is is not necessary to keep the hens with the Finches all through the winter. When March comes in, or at about the beginning or the end of April, select a large young, variegated Norwich hen, one that is nice and lively; this is the right mate for your Greenfinch. Put the hen in one side and the Finch in the other. You will soon see whether they take to one another. It is also advisable to run the Greenfinch with the Canary, say, twice a week for a short time; they will then get used to one another. Also place a little egg-food or green-stuff between the wires or on the bottom of the cage near the sliding partition. At the end of April pull out the partition and give them the sole possession of the cage. Place some building material between the wires, and hang a nest-pan in the centre of the cage.

A Critical and Anxious Period.

The birds will by this time be on friendly terms with each other and building their nest. Now is the time to be careful and watch your birds. Some Greenfinches have a nasty habit of pulling the nest to pieces as fast as the hen builds. This can be effectually stopped by running the Finch in with the Canary during the morning only of each day. Some Finches, on the other hand, are quite the reverse and make ideal husbands. When the Canary has laid, too, Master Greenie sometimes will soon throw the eggs out on to the cage floor. Here, again, one must be ready. Shut the Finch by himself for nearly all day. As soon as she starts to sit, separate him altogether, and if the hen is a good mother she will rear the young Mules by herself.

The Feeding and Treatment of Young.

Feed the Canary and the Young Mules on hard-boiled egg and bread crumbs, fresh daily. Also supply plenty of green food as named above, as young Mules are very hearty. It is advisable, too, to see that the hen has plenty to "go at." I remember the first young Mules I succeeded in getting hatched out. When I heard their chirps from the nest, I thought I had gained a rare prize.

But all the difficulties in connection with the hobby are not over when you have gone thus far. One may be curious and take the young Mules out of the nest to look at them. Here, again, I speak from experience. If you do this you will regret having done it, for I have found that when they have their feathers only just pricking through, you can't get them back into the nest again. They will be found to sit in the corner of the cage ready to pounce through any opening in the cage-front they can. Have patience, and leave them to the mother bird; you are certain to be rewarded.

When the young Mules are six weeks old, select the best specimens—good coloured birds—and feed them in the same way I have recommended you to feed the Greenie, not forgetting to supply plenty of baths. Colour-feed them and cage them off separately. You should then have a handsome Mule for all your trouble. The chief thing is to persevere, and to learn every little wrinkle you can; by following CAGE BIRDS you won't go far wrong.

FRESH-CAUGHT BIRDS AND THEIR TREATMENT.

My object in writing these few lines is to help young fanciers who want either to restock their rooms or aviaries, or who are only just beginning to go in for them. By selecting the birds now, you have, I consider, the best chance, not only of getting good birds, but of keeping them and getting them well on to seed. All wild birds which are caught do not live. Some of them die at once; others will live some days. But if you can get plenty of wild seeds and berries to assist them in taking the hard seeds, it would be all the better. Some seeds should also be soaked at first and given in separate vessels, others being given in the dry state. I am a great believer in crushing some seeds as well, particularly hemp, which should be given freely for a time, until the birds are well settled down. Too many birds should not be placed together, as some of them, not always the largest and strongest, prevent the others from getting the food. I always turn a steady old bird in with them for a few days if I have one by me, until they get used to the seeds and water, both of which must always be put inside the cage. It is very rarely a wild-caught bird is known to put its head through the seed or water hole. Some birds would rather die first than do this I always partly cover up the cage for a day or two, so that nothing can disturb them; they can then look around and find their seeds and water. When they can do that, I uncover them. By keeping them indoors, too, they become tamer much sooner than when hung out of doors, or too near a window, where they can hear their mates' calls as they pass overhead. This latter greatly upsets them, and causes them to beat themselves badly against the wires. It also unsettles them again for some time. Always make it a rule to select a good large bird and a young one, as they get used to the cage much quicker. The old birds always have better and brighter plumage than the young ones, and I have found out from experience that the older birds will generally live if wilder, and it is only a question of time to steady it. Those who go in for Goldfinches must exercise much caution with the young 'pates, or they will lose them. For these birds, give plenty of crushed hemp seed; they cannot well crush the hemp, and in consequence quickly die off. As the Grey-pates can be got cheap, it is as well to get about six at a time; you are then quite sure to get some of them to live if you will only feed them rightly. OBSERVER.

Migratory Birds and the Wind.

Before the Manchester Literary and Philosophical Society a paper was read by a member upon the migration of birds, in which the common opinions that birds fly of necessity against the wind, was strongly combated. No doubt in many cases during these long flights birds do breast the current, although their progress must be more laborious and certainly is slower, but it seems almost incredible that wild creatures should preferably choose the harder task. The lecturer on the occasion in question tried to prove that a cyclone with its centre off the south west of Ireland would be favourable for the birds of northern Europe travelling to warmer regions of Africa, and that they would take advantage of the winds to carry them over.

THE BREEDING OF THE BUDGERIGAR.

Everybody knows this bird so well, with his bright green plumage and black and yellow Zebra markings, that a full description is unnecessary. Budgerigars are about the hardiest and most easily kept of all the foreign birds, and at the same time just about the prettiest. My bird-room being small, I have to try and economize space. A very good flight and breeding cage is made for these birds by stretching half-inch wire netting from the bottom shelf on which you cages stand to within seven or eight inches of the floor. If required for breeding purposes, cokernut husks should be hung at each end of the cage, allowing two husks for each pair of birds. If the cage is all wire netting, hang a bit of old cloth at each end in front of the cokernuts, for I find the birds like to be quiet and undisturbed; or if preferred, when making the cage cover in the ends with wood, which answers the same purpose. When Budgerigars are in breeding condition the cere of the female is a darkish reddish brown colour, and that of the male bright blue. A day or two before the hen lays she is seen going in and out of the cokernut, which she has selected for her home, scraping it to make it soft, and removing any hard bits of fibre which happen to be inside. Then usually from two to six white egs are laid, but I have had as many as eight. Budgerigars only lay every alternate day, but despite this, I think it is much better not to remove the eggs, for I find even the youngest bird gets just as well fed as the others. I am certain that the secret of success is leaving them alone, for the year they first bred so well with me, I had just got a fresh pair of Scotch Fancy Canaries, and was very anxious that they should do well, so devoted all my attention to them, not caring much about the Budgerigars. One morning, however, to my great delight, I heard chirp-chirp coming from the inside of the husk, which told me that there were young birds there. Each pair rears on an average ten young in a season. I usually hang the husks up about the end of February or the beginning of March, and take them away about the end of September. If they are allowed to breed later, or are frightened or in a disturbed state, my experience is that they kill their young by pecking into their brains. When about two or three months old they can be sold from 4s. to 5s. a pair, and if kept till after their first moult, for more. Their seed diet consists of equal parts Canary and millet seed, with occasionally millet in the spray; and when they are not breeding half a handful of whole oats thrown on the tray of the cage is greatly enjoyed. The night before the young are due to hatch (which is the evening of the 16th day from the time the first egg was laid), give a little stale bread soaked in cold water and then squeezed as dry as possible. Continue this until they can crack seed. I have found that the bread does them no harm, and that they can have as much as they like, with, of course, seed always in their cage, too. Chickweed and freshly-gathered grasses with the seed ripe they are very fond of, but lettuce I have found does not agree with them, and they seldom care for any other green-food. Parents that are inclined to be bad feeders would, I should think, be greatly induced to feed by supplying plenty of chickweed. The young ones can be easily tamed if taken and trained when first they come out of the nest; but be careful to put them back again with their parents until they are able to do for themselves, and on no account disturb them before, or you will find it very disastrous.

FOX'S
"EGG & BISCUIT"
NOT A SUBSTITUTE.

Ask your Corn Merchant for it. Do not be put off with substitutes for Egg Food, which naturally show a larger margin of profit than the genuine article could do. We guarantee our "EGG & BISCUIT" to contain 50 % of actual fresh eggs in a dried state, and the analysis is the same as occurs in a raw egg with the exception of moisture. Furthermore, a point of vital importance, it is perfectly soluble, a quality which greatly assists the hen in feeding her young, thereby increasing the chances of rearing ALL your young birds. Our "EGG & BISCUIT" is of a very concentrated nature, and it is advisable to feed at full strength only until the birds are from 8 to 10 days old, after which a further 50 % of Biscuit can be added, thus making it cheaper than the home-made egg food, besides being more suitable and less trouble to prepare: neither will it turn sour in the cage.

I am always looking for your journal, CAGE BIRDS, on Friday morning, and I find great pleasure in reading it. One might say it is the pioneer of the Fancy in the modern sense. It is invaluable to the novice especially, keeping us all posted up in the doings of our brothers in the hobby, and containing many valuable tips from time to time for the most experienced. I wish CAGE BIRDS much success for the future, and trust it will continue to flourish.—EDWARD MILNE (Blairgowrie).

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

For Rules see last week's "Cage Birds."

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Grecns, Borders, Lizards. Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, he pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Hanging Fire.

Ruviquy.—The trouble is simply that they were not in breeding condition when you mated them, neither are they now. The matching has nothing whatever to do with it. Although it is quite possible to overfeed Canaries, I scarcely think this is the trouble with yours. The greatest desideratum now is patience to await the development of events, naturally. To hasten matters, feed on plain Canary as a staple, and give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with a few grains of inga and gold of pleasure seeds. Give a small teaspoonful of hemp every second day to each pair. Give a fairly liberal supply of dandelion and chickweed daily. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for two or three days, and, after that, twenty drops of port wine, and two each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day for a week.

A Mopy Norwich.

A.J.F.—Am afraid I must say I "ha ma' doots"; "pretty considerahle" ones, too, as the Yankees say, about the hardihood of the bird. The journey should not have upsct it at all. Had you said how you were feeding it, it would have helped me to suggest some remedy. Anyway, try the following treatment for a week or two, and if not hetter, write again. Keep it in a comfortahle and regular temperature, quite free from draughts or chills, and only give baths when the weather is quite fine and mild. Feed on plain Canary only as a staple, every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and a few grains of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it. Give a little dandelion or chickweed daily. In the drinking water give six drops each of dandelion juice and syrup of rhubarh every second day for a week, and on the alternate days four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. In the following week give two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel in the water every second day.

Misjudged.

A Beginner.—I feel quite convinced you made a slight error of judgment respecting the hen's condition when mated. She was evidently quite forward, hut not quite up to concert pitch, and it would have been best to delay the mating a few days longer. Then when you put them together you should not have given a nest bag right away, but deferred this item until it was required, which would have hecn shown hy the birds going frequently in and out of the hox with any unconsidered trific they could discover. Your hest plan now is to let matters take their course, and await events patiently; they will develop satisfactorily in the course of a week or two, I have no douht. Meantime, give a supply of dandelion and chickweed daily; a small teaspoonful of egg-food hetween the pair every second day, and in this mix a pinch of equal parts of inga and gold of pleasure seeds. Give also half a teaspoonful of hemp three times a week. Glad to hear the former advice was so successful.

Yorkshire Unwell.

Yorkshire Lad.—It is quite likely the hird caught a chill whilst heing kept alone in the show cage, and then running him with two hens is probably a hit too much for him this season. Allow him to run with the hen until mid-day each day, then separate him until hen has laid next morning, or till ahout hreakfast time hefore she hegins to lay. Whilst he is caged alone, give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple; three times a week give a few grains of hemp, and twice a week a small picce of hread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. Give no egg food except what he may pick up whilst running with the hen, hut give a rather liberal supply of green food daily; say, one fair-sized dandelion leaf and a spray of tender chickweed or groundsel. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, six of syrup of rhubarh, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence daily for three days. After this give six drops of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week, and on the alternate days two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel.

A Feather Eater.

S.S.—First of all, examine cage thoroughly to see if red mite attacks are the indirect cause of the irritation which makes him pluck out his feathers. If you should find any white powdery substance sticking about around any of the joints, you may take it as a certain indication that a colony of mites exists hard hy. In that case you must thoroughly eradicate the pest. Add a teaspoonful of quassia chips to a quart of water and allow it to stand in a cool place, and use this as long as it lasts for filling the hath each day. Feed as follows for a week or two: Staple diet, plain Canary; separately, half a teaspoonful of summer rape three times a week, and twice a week a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake in which mix as much as will cover a three-penny-piece of a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur and one part chlorate of potash. Stop giving sugar, but a mealworm a day would he beneficial; and give a little groundsel or crisp lettuce daily. If this has not quite succeeded in attaining the desired object in, say, a week, continue the same treatment, and add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and six drops of lemon juice to its water every second day for a week.

Erratic Laying.

J. Stephens.—Your feeding is decidedly faulty, and is doubtless largely the cause of the erratic behaviour of the hen. If she has not yet laid anything like a clutch, and commenced to sit, separate her and feed as follows for a fortnight. Staple two parts Canary to one part rape, mixed. Give separately half a teaspoonful of hemp twice a week, and every second day a half teaspoonful of egg-food, or crushed sponge cake—the latter for preference—with a pinch of equal parts of Inga and gold of pleasure mixed in it. Give a fairly liberal supply of chickweed or groundsel each day, hut no dandelion. In the drinking water for the first week give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and six drops of dandelion juice every second day, and in the second week twenty drops of chemical food daily. After this treatment you may mate her again as soon as she is ready, and continue the above method of feeding when you should find the results better.

Two Crest Hens.

T. Saxon.—Both birds seem to require a little patience. They will douhtless come into condition when the weather gets quite settled, and quite time enough to have one, if not two, nests each. Therefore, I should consider the office of executioner rather premature if, as you say, the hirds are good. I presume you have trimmed the crests at the sides; if not, do so at once. No. 1. Give six drops each of dandelion juice and syrup of buckthorn in the water for three or four days. After that dissolve a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine in two tablespoonfuls of port wine, and give twenty drops of this in the water daily for a week or so. Also add four drops of chemical food to the egg-food, and give a liberal supply of dandelion. No. 2 bird requires only patience. It will help to hring matters to a climax if you give a little rape daily, add a pinch of inga and gold of pleasure to her egg-food each time, and give a little dandelion daily. Give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for two days as a heginning.

A Vague Question.

Perplexed.—Your query does not make it clear whether you have the hirds properly mated in true pairs, or simply two hirds in each cage; nor whether you had supplied proper material and receptacles for nesting. If they are not mated up in true pairs you should do this at once; of course, allow the cocks to hang heside their respective mates for a day or two to become acquainted hefore finally putting them together. At the same time hang in each cage a piece of cuttlefish, and a nest box or pan, and, a few days later, if yon see the birds going in and out of the nest pan supply them with a hag of nesting material. Leave the rest of the husiness to the birds themselves, and interfere with their arrangements as little as possible. The eggs that were laid hefore you wrote will be quite useless now. It is quite possihle for a hen to lay two eggs or even a full clutch consecutively without having access to a male hird, hut, of course, such eggs are of no use at all.

Won't Stand Up.

F.U.—You do not say what condition of hody the bird is in, and, assuming that the inability, or refusal (whichever it may be) to stand up on its legs is not due to the faulty habit of crouching, I expect it is in an overfat condition. Try what the following exposition of "simple life" will do for it, and if it is not hetter in, say, a fortnight, write again, and say what condition the hird is in. As a staple give plain Canary only, with half a teaspoonful of summer rape twice a week, and a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with two drops each of chemical food and cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it three times a week. Give a liberal supply of green food daily. In the drinking water give every second day for a week as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and on the alternate days twenty drops of chemical food. During the second week continue the chemical food every second day, and on the alternate days give two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

An Obstinate Cold.

R.K.M.—As the remedies you have already tried are good ones, I am inclined to suspect that you have rather failed in the first essential towards a cure of any ill; that is, in effectually removing the cause or causes and taking steps to see that there is no repetition of it, or them. Do this now, hy seeing that the hird is kept quite free from any dranght or chill, and do not allow it to saturate its plumage hy hathing until hetter. Give a bath only on nice mild days, and only leave it on the cage for ten or fifteen minutes. Also keep it where there are no violent fluctuations of temperature, hut where the temperature is an even and fairly comfortable one. Then feed it as frequently advised in this column. Give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops each of sherry and cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day for a fortnight, and in the drinking water twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a fortnight, or until symptoms are quite removed.

Brevities.

Not Laying (Novice).—If the hens have not yet laid, separate them for a fortnight and feed and treat same as advised to "J. Stephens," except that you should also add two drops of cod liver oil emulsion to the soft food each time. When you mate them up again, give the same general diet as previously advised, hut discontinue the soft and other extras when the hens commence to sit.

Swelling on Breast (R.C.M.).—It would be a help in forming an opinion had you described the appearance of the swelling, and said whether it was hard or soft, and also stated its position more exactly. I am inclined to think it is simply an accumulation of fat, due to overfeeding. Limit its diet to plain Canary only as a staple, with half a teaspoonful of summer rape three times a week, and a liberal supply of green food—chickweed, groundsel, and lettuce—daily. Allow plenty of space for vigorous exercise, and keep cage strewn with gritty sand. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts every second day for a week as will cover a sixpence. Shall he glad to hear result in a fortnight.

Gone in Soft Moult (J. L., Leeds).—Put hird on a diet of plain Canary only as a staple; every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days the same quantity of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver emulsion and four of chemical food mixed in it. Three times a week give a few grains of hemp. Give a little green food daily. Dissolve a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine in two tablespoonfuls of port wine, and give twenty drops of this in the water daily for a week, and every second day after until the moulting is quite stopped.

After Clear Eggs (Andrew).—No, it is not necessary to separate the hirds after the hen has sat out her full time on a nest of clear eggs. You should take away the nest, and nest pan, for a few days until the broodiness has passed off the hen. Then begin to feed the pair again in the usual way, and when you see she is coming forward again, return the nest pan, and give nesting material the same as you would do for a first hrood; that is, when you see the hirds are anxious to start building.

Not Breeding (F. Smith).—You do not say whether the hen appears healthy or otherwise. I am assuming the former to be the case; if this is not correct, write again, and say in what way she appears unhealthy. Feed on a staple of two parts Canary to one summer rape mixed. Three times a week give a few grains of hemp, and every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with a pinch of a mixture of equal parts inga and gold of pleasure mixed with it. Give a liberal supply of chickweed and dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week. A mealworm each day, if available, would also help to hring her forward.

Asthma and Eggs (W. Cotley).—(1) The cock has probably caught a slight cold. If the wheezy symptoms have not already passed off, adopt the usual precautions to avoid a repetition of any chill, and give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of cucalyptus oil, well shaken together, in the water for a few days. (2) The chances of the clutch of eggs which was completed on April 17th, and is not placed under a hen yet, heing hatched out are, I fear, very small, indeed. If the experiment succeeds, I should he glad to hear result.

A Trio (P.M.M.).—(1) The swelling was simply the crops well-filled with egg-food, which show plainly through the skin on the side of the neck like yellowish matter. The fact that your young hirds had them so persistently until fledged is the sole reason of their thriving well, and showed they were being well fed hy their parents. Naturally, you do not want to prevent this this season. (2) The flanged open rings made of aluminium advertised in our columns are best for marking purposes. (3) The only advantage freshly-ground pyrethrum powder has over the one you name is that it is cheaper. Both are practically the same, I believe. Any good chemist could supply pyrethrum.

Preparing for Hatching (B.G.).—If you wished to remove the cock and leave the hen to hatch and rear the hrood hy herself, you ought to have taken him away as soon as the hen had quite settled down to the task of sitting. You may, of course, remove him now, hut you must watch the hen for a few hours afterwards to see whether she leaves the nest and does not return. If she does, you must at once return the cock. The hen probably "sweated" the last chick. When the next brood is hatched, begin to give a little green food on the third day, and if she seems careless about feeding give her a bath with a small teaspoonful of common salt dissolved in the water. If you look up the last two or three issues you will find several replies containing fully-detailed instructions for feeding after young are hatched.

Rearing Young in Aviary (H. Morley).—You omit the most important point of all in such a case, which is to say whether the hirds are allowed to fly loose in the aviary, or kept in cages. If flying loose, and they are strong and vigorous, as well as being young, I think one cause of your losing the hirds at fourteen days old is that you have not a sufficient number of hens in the aviary, and, in consequence, the cocks are too amorous and are driving the hens to begin making arrangements for another brood hefore the young are out of the nest. Either remove two of the cocks, or add another five or six hens, and I fancy you will succeed better. See there are plenty of nesting places. Give egg-food three times a day instead of four, and green food three times daily instead of twice. In such a place as yours you might supply Canary, rape, and hemp, in unlimited quantities, hut give it in separate vessels for the sake of economy.

Puffed Out Border (H.H.L.).—In addition to the staple of plain Canary give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days the same quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and a few grains of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it. Give a few grains of hemp three times a week, and a little dandelion and chickweed daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhuharh and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for two days, and after that two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel in the water every second day for a week.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A Trio.

B.L.R.—1. I really do not know how mealworms are "bred for a profit." It would he necessary to have very warm quarters at one's command—such as a hakehouse, or a mill. 2. I gave a long answer dealing with the management of the Bullfinch about a fortnight ago. The stock seed mixture should he: Canary and teazle three parts each, sunflower, charlock, and summer rape one part each, linseed a half part. A little maw and hemp can he given occasionally; or a feed of a good maker's packet Finch mixture. Wild seeds are also appreciated; likewise a little ripe fruit daily, black and privet berries in season, seeding chickweed, dandelion, shepherd's-purse, groundsel, thistles, etc. 3. A good and cheap way to feed Thrushes is to soak crushed dog biscuit (or dog meal, such as "Melox") in hot water, and then reduce it to a crumbly consistency hy the addition of a good brand of packet Thrush food.

Pulls Out the Nest.

Old Salt.—It is quite possihle to take away the male hird after the first egg has been laid and yet have the whole clutch (four or five or six eggs, as the case may he) fertile. But I do not consider it advisable. I generally keep the Finch away after the third egg has been laid—from the night, in fact, in which I set the hen. It does not matter about the Siskin pulling the nest out so long as you leave no good eggs in it, and especially if you use a lined nest pan. When the Siskin (or a Goldfinch, or any other Finch, for that matter) is removed at night, it is only necessary to roughly put the nest into shape with one's hands. The hen will lay in it alright, and, of course, the egg is removed and a pot one substituted hefore the Finch is returned in the morning. On the evening of the third day the nest can be put together very nicely by the aid of a hot hard-boiled egg, pressing the material into place with the latter. Then put in the three good eggs (or, rather, the eggs one hopes will he good), and leave the hen to incubate them and rear the young. The nest lining prevents any injury coming to either of the three eggs laid before the hen is set. I have sometimes had hen Canaries which would not build a nest, and many which have built shocking had ones. I fix them all up with nests either of my own making entirely, or to which I put the "finishing touches." They take to them alright; a really broody hen will sit on anything short of a piece of ice.

A Muling Couple.

A Beginner.—There is nothing in your letter which leads me to think it useless for you to continue with the couple. You have not given them a fair chance. Some of my own muling couples have not heen paired up more than 10 or 12 days, yet here you are, at this early period of the season, apparently despairing of doing any good. You must not forget that the average cock British Finch is not ready to breed at the same early date as the average cock Canary. Your method of managing the couple is not good, either. They should have dandelion every day, and not merely the leaves, hut flowers and seeding heads as well. A little chickweed should also be supplied, and the egg-hread should he given daily (one teaspoonful) with a little maw seed sprinkled over it. Then the couple should have a small portion of summer rape and teazle in the stock seed mixture, and he given a teaspoonful of hemp seed every evening. This would soon bring them into forward condition. The cocoanut husk is not suitable—in fact, is no good. Try one of the nest pans (either wood or earthenware) usually adopted. I think you certainly ought to study a hook like "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and follow the tips it gives.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Another Muling Couple.

A New Beginner.—You appear to he in the same street as "A Beginner," who also writes me this week, and much in the answer given him you can apply to your own case. The study of a book dealing with the elementary details of breeding would help you, too. It is no use "giving a few dandelion leaves sometimes"; a good supply of both leaves and heads must he given every day, and the egg-food daily also. I don't quite understand what you mean hy "yolk of egg chopped." It is minced egg mixed with crushed hiscuit that the hirds need—a good teaspoonful daily. They should also have a heaping teaspoonful of hemp and niger seeds (mixed in equal parts) every evening (give the egg-food in the morning). Have you missed reading the articles on hreeding Canaries and on Mule hreeding which have heen appearing in our columns this spring? They would have put you on the right track. You should also get and read CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL. Any little point you may then be doubtful about, I shall be pleased to advise upon. By the way, it is quite unnecessary to take away the seed when giving the egg-food. What caused you to think the contrary? The average hen Canaries eat egg-food greedily; they don't, hy any means, neglect it for seed. All Goldics intended for breeding should have niger and hemp freely when the season comes round.

A Cornish Chough.

Cornishman.—The chief points of a good exhibition Cornish Chough are size—a hig, well-huilt, good-skulled hird heing essential—and colour. The hody colour should he a deep shining metallic black, or a distinct bluish cast, the legs and hill a solid, rich red, approaching crimson. Sometimes the legs and bill are a pale salmon colour, and patchy, at that, while the plumage is a dull, sooty hlack. The hen is a smaller, "meaner" looking bird than the cock, with a smaller head and bill, and is duller in colour. A cage is not really suitable for regular use, a medium-sized outdoor aviary heing the ideal place, one with a stone trough, or suitable galvanised bath in it, to hold a decent supply of water. If you use a cage, it will have to he extremely large to permit the bird keeping in "show form." A rockery in the aviary would be very suitable; all perches should he very stout ones. If your bird has not been got used to artificial food, you will need to give it plenty of flesh food, hoth raw and cooked, which can be cut up and rubbed into crushed dog hiscuit made moist with hot water. Any of the hiscuit meals prepared for dogs (such as "Melox") will do for the latter purpose. You will find almost any live foods accepted with thanks—cockroaches ("hlackbeetles"), gentles, garden worms, mealworms (by the hundred). The only Chough I have ever had was very fond of "messes" from the table—a mixture of potatoes, greens, meat, and gravy.

Brevities.

Breeding Mealworms (F. Smith).—A few weeks ago an article appeared in CAGE BIRDS, written hy Mr. C. Houlton (it was on the keeping of British Birds), which gave the details of mealworm hreeding at greater length than I can in these query columns. Could you not refer to this? It would pay you to send for the issue containing it.

Bullfinch Ailing (J.E.H.).—Am afraid you fed the hen Bullie too well. Hemp, sunflower and linseed ad libitum, make up a diet on which a hen Bullfinch can quickly become unhealthily fat. A very small quantity of linseed is ample, and hemp should not be given in the stock mixture, especially when sunflower is heing supplied. What your bird wants is a change of diet (plenty of green food— hawthorn buds, dandelion heads, shepherd's purse and chickweed), with a dose or two of saline medicine, say a small teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Give two or three doses; but on alternate days only.

Linnet-Chaffinch Hybrid (A Trio).—If you could get a cock Linnet-Chaffinch Hybrid it would be of very considerable value; have never heard of one being hred. A cage one foot by six inches is certainly not large enough to mate up in. Why, that is only show-cage size. Put them together in the cage you intend using for breeding. A "hybrid" indicates any bird which is the result of the mating of two different species. "Mule" is only a fancier's word, and is not a correct one. Still, it is very convenient, for Mule is generally used when a cross has Canary blood in it, and Hybrid when the cross has not the Canary as one of the parents.

Wasting the Niger Seed (A Beginner)—Tbe solution is very simple. Don't put the niger seed in the stock mixture. Give a little now and again in a "side-pan," or in a separate dish. You should use the "wild-seed" mixture I advocate (containing uiger); this would give to tbe bird all of this particular seed that is necessary. Niger (or inga) is good in unlimited quautity for fresh-caught Finches, but not necessary (except as a "tit-bit") for birds tbat are "well on seed," as the dealers say.

A Savage Cock Bullfinch (Novice, Cheshire).—Your experience illustrates the truth of what I am continually saying, i.c., tbat no dependence can be placed during the breeding season on the behaviour of individual birds in a mixed collection. Some of my own birds, which bebaved like lambs during the autumn and winter, have become like blood-thirsty tigers now tbe summer-like weather is witb us. You will have to remove the cock Bullfinch; you could, bowever, try tbe effect of providing him with a mate of his own species. The broken leg was evidently not set in the correct position, and you cannot now alter it. Tbe bandage should be left on about 14 days.

Redpoll-Canary Mules (Young Amateur).—1, These Mules are of no particular value; they are not showy enougb for the average person. Exbibition specimens (either dark or light) are, of course, exceptions to this rule. 2, The cock Redpoll, during the breeding season (in a wild state), bas a red breast; the hen bas not. 3, Yes; the crown of the bead often comes a yellow, or golden colour in captivity; tbe breast, too, in some examples.

Young Skylarks (Young Reader).—Broadly speaking, Skylarks breed from tbe middle of April until towards the end of July. I tbink the present, however, is a very late season with all birds. I have been out in tbe country this week, and certainly find it so. About the tenth to twelfth day is the time to take nesting Larks; wben beginning to be nicely feathered. I don't believe in taking them at a very early age; I would sooner leave a day or two longer and chance baving to "cram" them at first. They soon learn to run to the "stick" to be fed. You want to arrange a nice grass run for them to be on when they commence to get about; and they soon do this. Feed as recommended "Beginner" and "Constant Reader" last week. For Magpies, see another reply this week.

Hand-feeding Magpies (X.Y.Z.).—Yes; the times and method of feeding are the same as recommendcd last week. Young Magpies are easily band-reared. But they want good food or are very apt to contract the "cramp" and die. Soaked bread, potato, crusbed hemp, and the like are worse than useless things. A food such as crushed dog biscuit, or Spratt's chicken meal (without grit) or dog meal, or "Melox," made into a paste with hot water answers admirably, especially if a minced, hard-boiled egg be added. Give a little scraped raw meat now and again (beef or mnttou), a few mealworms which have had their heads pinched, and some small garden worms (cut up). A drink of water occasionally, luke-warm.

Mealworm Breeding (Mealworms).—Note the reply given another correspondent this week.

Wing Butts Bare (W.H.C.).—It is skin irritation, I should think, seeing that you are certain the bird is free from red mite. According to your letter, you are giving him no green food at all. This he certainly ought to have; likewise a little ripe fruit now and again. You must anoint the bare places once or twice daily with a touch of sulphur ointment, which will, at any ratc, stop the trouble spreading. But are you quite sure there are no red mite?

Two Matters (Hardbill).—1. The only cure lies in finding the bird some other occupation, when he may forget all about tbe pleasant diversion of chewing his wing-flights. Put him into an aviary for a spell, if possible. Many Goldies like a "soft" perch which they can wbittle away; numbers of my own Finches enjoy this. Soaking tbe wing ends in neat quassia solution will sometimes act as a deterrent. 2. Where there are two classes: (1) A.O.V. Finch, (2) A.O.V. British bird; the Linnet must certainly be entered in the former, as it is a true Finch.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

Not Producing Plumage.

Amaz.—I am glad to get so good a report. The bird is evidently steadily improving. Continue tbe treatment already advised till the bird is in full feather again. Of course, so long as the bowels move freely, Dinneford's will not be actually required, but so long as tbe voidings are not watery, one dose weekly will be beneficial, considering tbe past history of the case. The Cbemical Food should be continued till the plumage is complete, and tben the drugs gradually dropped off. Spraying every other day, or twice a week, under the conditions prescribed in my previous reply, will be very beneficial during the summer, at any rate. Adhere strictly to the dict already arranged, and do not give any slops or messes.

What Birds, etc.

W. H. G.—If your birds are really blue-tail Lorics, they must have milk sop, ripe fruit, and a little Canary and millet to take if they wish, also greenfood and a piece of plain biscuit. Wbile I do not know under the name you quote, I strongly suspect them to be King Parrakeets; if so, the milk-sop would be harmful and the following diet would answer both for the Rosellas aod King Parrakeet. A seed mixture of Canary, millet, oats, wheat, hemp, and sunflower seeds, only half portion of the two latter seeds, equal parts of each of the otbers; well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, greenfood, and a few nuts occasionally; cuttlefish, grit, and water for drinking and bathing must be regularly supplied. If you will send me a description of the Lories, I will name them for you and confirm treatment.

Grey Parrot with Growth.

G. Daniels.—I do not think this can be a festering abscess; of course, if it is, when ripe it will have to be lanced, and the contents removed by gentle pressure. However, from your description, I have very little doubt but that it is a hard flesh growth, and I should (use a camel-hair brush) just lightly toucb the underside of it with tincture of iodine. At the same time you must only use a very little at a time; it is so near a very tender part, and you must be very careful that none of the tincture enters its eye. Keep the bird's bowels freely moving with occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful to the ounce of water), but the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery. To assist it during this period when not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. If the growth does not yield to the tincture of iodine, the only thing to do is to let a vet. see it; very probably the cutting of it out would be a very simple matter.

A Sick Tanager.

E. D. P.—Continue to make use of the boney and borax; put a little on its tongue twice daily. In addition to its ordinary diet, supply milk sop that bas been made by boiling up together, crumbled biscuit, sugar and milk, so that the resulting sop is sweet and sloppy. Also supply a little beef tea as the bird is getting weak. Tbe mouth should be wiped out, at least twice daily, with the boney and horax (using a small camel hair brush for the purpose, which should be well cleansed and a fresh portion of the mixture used for each occasion), and continue to do this till the mouth is quite clean. The beef tea could be given from a quill, if it will not take it in tbe ordinary way, and the same as to the milk sop. I still think the bird will recover if you can only keep its strength up. With a weak bird a few drops of tepid brandy and water (weak), will often prevent a collapse, but you can do nothing more than as indicated above, and it certainly will be very disappointing if you do not succeed.

"Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free, a mine of information of use and interest.

Grey Parrot Unwell.

A. C.—I have known many such cases materially assisted by having a stitch or two put in. Apart from seeing a vet., you can do but little more than you are doing; you might try a bandage, but the vent must not be covered, and observation must be kept that the bird does not displace the bandage. Diet as follows: Seed mixture, canary seed and oats 2 parts each, and 1 part each of bemp, wheat, darl, and sunflower sceds; well mix and keep a supply continually in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, and a piece of clean fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, and a piece of clean cuttlefish continually hanging in the cage; grit aod water for drinking and bathing must also be regularly supplied. Do not on any account give tea, coffee, or milk sops, or any kind of animal food. Every other day well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food.

Rock Pebbler Parrakeet.

D. K. (1) They will do quite well on the diet you snpply to the Rosellas, Cockatiels, etc., which, I take it, consists of seed mixture, ripe fruit, greenfood, and a few pieces of plain biscuit, can be given occasionally. Seed mixture: Canary, oats, wheat, paddy rice, hemp and sunflower, the two latter in only half portions to the preceding items. Supply mixed. (2) They will winter out of doors when once acclimatised, but as they are only just coming to hand, it will be best to see that they are shut up at nights till the weather is a little more settled. (3) I have not kept this species in the aviary, but so far as records go, they will do quite well in your aviary, and agree with its present inmates. Of course they will need a little observation at first, as new birds are apt to get bullied at first, when put into an aviary already occupied by several species; a little care in this direction often prevents a tragedy. (4) Give them a log. I presume you are fully aware of the need in a mixed aviary of having at least double the number of nesting receptacles that you have pairs of birds. They have already bred on two occasions, and if your birds are fully adult, and in good condition, they will probably nest this season; they certainly should do so next. (5) You will find this species (it is uncommon), much less boisterous than Rosellas, etc., when breeding; the young mature slowly, and if reared late in the season, care should be taken to see that they spend their nights under cover, and it will be well to take the same precautions during cold wet days; once they are able to cater for themselves, and able to fly, they will only need the ordinary care given to adult birds. You are to be congratulated on the possession of a pair of beautiful and very uncommon birds, and I wish you every success in breeding them.

Brevity.

Amazon Parrot Rough in Feather (T. T.).—As I read your query, apart from the roughness of plumage, and not moulting well, the bird otherwise appears fit. Please repeat your query with full details as to how you have been dieting and treating the bird since it has been in your possession. I shall then be in a position to help you.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (W. Rand).—Liver disease of considerable standing, feverishness involving the lungs and ending with apoplexy. It is an infectious condition.

Brown Foreign Finch (F. Payne).—Inflammation of liver and apoplexy. In all probability it is infectious, so any remaining healthy-looking birds should be isolated.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Compelling Advertisers to Accept Deposit System (James Miller).—The suggestion you make we fear is impracticable, and would tend to seriously damage trade. We believe in the deposit system quite as much as you do, but we could not contemplate making such a drastic regulation as you propose. Thanks all the same for your friendly interest.

Illustrated Idea (W. E. Williams).—Thanks for your good wishes. We will look up the idea you speak of and see if it can be utilised in our columns.

Cutting (Geo. Carrick).—Accept our thanks for sending us this, which we have bad pleasure in using.

Birds of New Zealand (W. T. Scott).—We are obliged to you for your offer, and should be pleased to publish the letter you suggest.

Aviary Fountain (J. B. Williams).—No doubt the letter published on this subject in last week's issue has given you the information you desire.

Border Fancy Chart (T. Smith).—Yes, we can supply you with a chart such as you mention. The price is 3d., post free.

Illustrated Ideas (J.A.).—1. The rough sketches submitted by the senders of illustrated ideas are redrawn (generally) by our artist. Lack of ability to draw need stop no one from sending along their notions, so long as they supply a rough sketch. 2. We have had this idea under consideration, and may give it effect before long.

DARVEL O.S.

General meeting, held April 17th. Tbe Secretary reported on an interview he had witb the Secretary of the old society re pens, etc., and after consideration, it was decided to take no further action regarding these. Agreed to try and arrange three members' shows in August, September, and October. It was also agreed to hold our next general meeting early in May, when we will consider appointment of judges, and arrange classes for schedule of open show on November 6th. After the husiness, Mr. G. Alston read a paper on "Mule and Hybrid Breeding," which was found to be both interesting and instructive, especially to the younger members in the Fancy. On the motion of the president, Mr. Alston, was accorded a bearty vote of thanks.—J. ROBERTSON, Junr., Sec.

CINNAMON CANARY CLUB.

The election of officers for the year 1909 is as follows:—President, Mr. W. A. Bladon, 20 votes; Vice-President, Mr. J. Wones, 15 votes; Committee, Messrs. E. Godley (19), W. Dormer (18), O. Handt (14), A. Bentley (13), W. Millburn (12), C. Quinton (11), H. Riding (10), J. H. Roe (8); Auditors, Messrs. J. Dobson and T. Heath, 20 votes each; judges, Messrs. J. Robson (19), J. H. Roe (19), H. Battye (15), E. Godley (15), T. Heath (15), J. H. Payne (11); Hon. Secretary, Mr. R. J. Pretty, 24 votes (3 not voted). For renewal of affiliation to Cage Bird Union, 11 votes; against same, 13 votes—3 not voted; 41 voting papers were issued, and 27 returned. Signed: H. J. Pearce, L.P.O.S., W. Yates, C.C.C., Scrutineers.—R. J. PRETTY, Hon. Sec.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Committee meeting, held April 27th, at Swan and Peacock, Wolverhampton, the president, Mr. Max Jacquemin, in tbe chair. Others present were:—Messrs. S. Alliston, Smith, A. Harper, W. Bird, W. Holland, A. Crouch, Harrison, W. Cadman, and J. H. Willows, Hon. Sec. Rules were drawn up to be placed before the next monthly meeting of members, for their sanction. It was also decided to fix date of open show, and to appoint judge at that meeting, which will be held at headquarters, Swan and Peacock, Wolverhampton, May 27th, at 8 p.m. It is hoped all members and those intending to join will make an effort to attend. Our membership already is close upon 40, which we consider a most satisfactory start.—J. H. WILLOWS, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting, held at headquarters, tbe "Feathers" Hotel, Gt. Chapel Street, Westminster, April 29th. Present: Messrs. Robson (chairman), Maxwell, Cooper, Dewhurst, Dobson, Crabb, Newley, and Carr. A letter was read from Mr. S. W. Birchley, and it was proposed by Mr. Dewburst, and seconded by Mr. Dobson, "that the committee cannot accept Mr. Birchley's resignation, or move in the matter, according to the decision arrived at the special meeting, viz., until the expiration of four months." Respecting Mr. Birchley's lecture, it was decided that the matter be settled at a later date. Proposed by Mr. Maxwell, and seconded by Mr. Crabb, that the secretaries write and thank P. Nicholls, Esq., for his kind favour. Proposed by Mr. Dewhurst, seconded by Mr. Cooper, that Messrs. Lott and Francis' accounts be paid. A letter was read from the Toronto C.B.S., respecting the exchange of medals. It was proposed by Mr. Dewhurst, and seconded by Mr. Dobson, that the matter stand over until next meeting. Proposed by Mr. Cooper, seconded by Mr. Maxwell, that the club go to Claygate on Jnne 5tb, for its annual outing. The morning party will go by the ten o'clock train from Waterloo to Surbiton. The afternoon party, who go by the 1.37 train from Waterloo to Claygate, will meet the other party at the "Griffon" Hotel. A hearty invitation is extended to all fanciers and friends. We shall be glad to receive a post-card by or before May 31st, from all who intend going, at 2, Broad Street Station; and fanciers should state which train they are going by, so that arrangements can be made for refreshments. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.—PLUMBRIDGE AND CARR, Secs.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting of committee was held at the Market Tavern, Bradford, on April 24th, Mr. F. Hammond occupying the chair. Business transacted:—Minutes of previous meeting passed as read; decided that the two members who tied for place on committee be both elected, viz., Mr. F. Coventry (Preston) and Mr. A. Spencer (Doncaster); election of vice-presidents, same as last year. New members accepted: Mr. Moss, Birkley, near Huddersfield; Mr. S. Marlor, Denton, near Manchester; Mr. A. Humphries, York; Mr. E. W. Johnson, Wibsey, near Bradford; Mrs. Steele, Halifax. Accounts re ballot papers passed as satisfactory. Vote of sympathy passed to Mr W. Sherrington, Preston, in his loss of birds through accident, and that a free membership of the O.N.P.C. for the ensuing year, be accorded to him. Patronage of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club be allotted to ten shows, season 1909-10. That secretary be instructed to invite applications from societies desirous of the club's patronage, the same to be returned before the last Saturday in July, 1909. Decided that five prizes he again given in each section (champion and novice) for competition amongst the members of the O.N.P.C., the value, etc., of same to be decided at the next meeting, which will be held on Saturday, July 31st, 1909. Vote of thanks to Mr. J. W. Ramsden for special kindly promised, which was unanimously accepted; also Mr. Carl's offer of CAGE BIRD prizes be accepted with thanks; also vote of thanks to Messrs. Marlor Bros. for promise of silver medal for competition in novice section. Re Newcastle Show money specials of the O.N.P.C., decided to pay out of above as follows: 3s. for most points gained by members with 4th prize birds, and 2s. for most points gained by members with vhc birds. The following gentlemen kindly promised to give specials as below:—Messrs. Haigh and Son, 10s. 6d.; Mr. F. Hammond, 10s. 6d.; Mr. J. Mottram, 5s.; Mr. O. Mitchell, pair of oil paintings value £1 10s. All members' subscriptions are now due.—O. MITCHELL, Hon. Sec.

BLAYDON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At the monthly meeting there was a large turnout of members, who considered the schedule for next annual show. Mr. J. Davison then gave a very interesting address on the Yorkshire Canary. We got three new members on this occasion.—G. HAYVER, Sec.

Suits Write for our New Patterns of Materials. Grand Value 35/-, 42/-, and 45/- Delivered for deposit from 4/- and easy monthly subscriptions. Everything you want for self or household on Easy Terms. You can rely upon us for square dealing. J. G. GRAVES, LIMITED, SHEFFIELD.

YORKS. UNION OF C.B.S.

The first meeting of the new council was held at the Market Tavern, Godwin-street, on May 1st, Mr. R. Halliday (president) occupying the chair. There was a capital attendance of delegates, nearly every society being represented. Hoyland and District O.S. made application for membership to the Union, and they were accepted unanimously. This now makes the number of societies affiliated to the Union into 28. The annual subscription for each member returned to the Union was fixed at 8d., this being considered sufficient to meet all the necessary dues and demands of expense attached to the Union. The delegates present elected the following gentlemen as a sub-committee, to transact business requiring urgent attention:—Messrs. Hammond, Clark, Shackleton, Johnsen, T. Ogden, R. Sutcliffe, and R. Drake. The number of gold medals for the novice members of the Union to compete for at the Union shows held during 1909-10 was fixed at sixteen, same as the previous year, twelve for the Yorkshire classes, and four for Norwich classes. The application of the Great Horton O.S. to hold a first feather show on the third Saturday in June was granted. This led to some discussion, as the rule of the Union states that the first F.F. show is to be held on the first Saturday in June; but seeing that Great Horton was the only application sent in, it was eventually decided to let them have the date they had selected. The new rule—That all exhibitors must provide their own water-tins, a uniform pattern to be adopted by the Union—necessitated the Council selecting one out of a few sample tins that were submitted to the meeting, and the one selected was that made by Mr. Job Hargreaves, of Eccleshill, who will supply them to members of the Union at the rate of 1d. each, postage extra; thus both the uniform perches and water-tins will be obtainable from the same maker. It would save expense to the individual members if they would purchase through the secretary of the society to which they belong, thus saving extra postage to a large extent. It was decided to apply for sealed tenders for the printing of the Union handbook, these to be brought to the next meeting of the Council and selected from. It was also passed to print the balance-sheet in the Year Book, so that all members of the Union could see for themselves how the moneys of the Union were expended. A suggestion was brought forward by the Bingley delegates to see if the Council would pass a resolution allowing exhibitors to take their birds away from an open show at six o'clock in order to be in time to stage their birds at a members' show, which now have to be held at eight o'clock. It was decided to instruct the Union secretary to write to the secretaries of each society asking them to make this allowance.—H. HILL, Sec.

STOCKPORT B.F.A.

Usual meeting held on April 27th, at headquarters. Mr. J. Garner presided, and a good number of members were present. The alterations to rules were submitted and approved, and the secretary was instructed to get new copies of same. The members will receive new rules in the course of a few days. Our genial president, Mr. J. E. Davies, announced that he had bought three specials—one for champion, one for amateur, and one for British birds—which he is giving to be competed for at the first feather show. I can assure members these specials are well worth winning; so hurry up with your subs., as this is the last appeal for same.—W. STAFFORD, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting May 1st, Fawcett-street Cafe. Mr. W. F. Swan presided over a good attendance. The secretary reported that he had made application for the patronage of the leading specialist clubs, and placed several replies before the members. A long discussion ensued as to the advisability of again giving seven classes for Borders in view of the poor support these classes received at our last open show. It was, however, ultimately decided that we again give seven classes for Borders providing we obtain the patronage of the Border Fancy Specialist Clubs. This was the whole of the business, and the rest of the evening was given to discussion on various subjects. We again extend a hearty welcome to all fanciers to join us.—W. REID, Hon. Sec.

NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

At our meeting held April 27th, Mr. Beswick (Stockport) gave a lecture on Mules before a large number of members. He explained his method of feeding and selection of Finches, Linnets, etc., in a very clear manner; also the kind of hens he thought best suited for Muling purposes. Afterwards, a discussion took place, in which Messrs. Odell, Aspinall, Slater, Balshaw, Eyres, Norris, and others took part. Mr. Aspinall proposed, Mr. Norris seconded, that the best thanks be given to Mr. Beswick for his able lecture. Mr. Beswick, responding, said that if any of his hearers had learned anything, he had been well repaid.—JOHN DAVEY, Hon. Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Adjourned general meeting held April 22nd, Mr. Hales in the chair. After the usual business, the notices of motion were considered. No. 1, carried: That anyone wishing to show at nest feather show must be made a member not later than the June meeting. No. 2, lost: The members won't have partners unless their points are divided. No. 3, lost: The members were afraid classes would not be put on for the other varieties if four classes for Borders were insisted on. No. 4, withdrawn: It was decided to leave the voting paper free, so that any vital question could be put before the whole of the members. No. 5, lost: Decided to leave drinkers as at present. No. 6, carried: This will leave room for good lectures, etc. No. 7, withdrawn: Decided that present classes stand. No. 8, carried, but not to be retrospective; the medals to be the usual gold medals, club design. No. 9, lost: The members didn't think it necessary. As there had been several disputes about the wording of motions, it was decided that in future all notices of motion be given in in writing.—S. HADWIN, Sec.

HALIFAX O.S.

On May 1st, before members and friends, Mr. H. W. Walsh (Halifax) lectured on "The Breeding and Management of Canaries." The large attendance must have been very gratifying to the lecturer, who handled his subject in a masterly manner, occupying an hour and a quarter. He gave his practical experiences as to the most suitable rooms, breeding, stock and flight cages, and the general management of Canaries throughout the breeding season. The lecture was very interesting and instructive, and the members are very much indebted to Mr. Walsh for his kindness in giving such useful information. One unfortunate feature was that the lecture did not commence until 9 p.m., owing to Mr. Walsh being engaged at the Yorkshire Union meeting at Bradford, which left us very little time for discussion. However, a very enjoyable evening was spent. H. WHITTAKER, Assistant Sec.

Correspondence.

What is a Clear?

Sir,—In answer to the letter of "Novice" in your issue of April 17th, I am sure he will excuse my leaving Mr. R. J. Mackley with his vast knowledge and experience as a judge and exhibitor to answer his two questions. Perhaps he may be more fortunate than I in making an impression, as an answer from me might be regarded as misleading; therefore, I decline to answer them, trusting that in the future "Novics" will not be ashamed or afraid to append his name to his letters. In answer to "A Lancashire Lad," in the first place I had no inclination to get on the backs of the members of the N.P.C. in my difference of opinion, and I hope he has no inclination to get on my back; if he has, he must take off his "clogs" first. With your permission I will try and correct his errors. Clear Norwich is not a trade mark or a patent of the City of Norwich, but a trade mark of all exhibitions of Canaries throughout the United Kingdom, and has been for years. Long may it continue to be so uninterrupted. I distinctly stated in my previous letter that ticked birds have been winning amongst the "clears" at shows during the season. If the judge handled the winners, it would stop that abuse; yet, on the face of this, "A Lancashire Lad" says "he and the majority of fanciers are of opinion it is not an abuse," and asks: "What is the use of a small clique trying to rush the majority?" I belong to no clique. In the meantime he may pick up a little common-sense on the road. For the present he has my sympathy, for where ignorance is blessed it is folly to be wise. It is a question whether the majority of fanciers are in favour of the ridiculous amalgamation of the "Ticks with the Clears." What confusion it will make in the notes of the reporting judge or critic? Ticked birds will be reported as Clears, and vice-versa, and exhibitors will rush into print to correct the errors. The reason I put the question: "Where is the Fancy going?" was because I thought they were going to the "dogs," but "A Lancashire Lad's" answer is: "Along the high-road of common-sense to the goal of perfection." What a pity he did not find this road out years ago! He must be slow. However, he must be careful or he may lose himself. And what a pleasure it will be when he arrives at his destination, if only to rest his uneasy feet! And the goal of perfection, which he is fast approaching, if I may be so rude as to predict, will be the "Canary Jumble," viz., "Any Variety Norwich," which will give all the birds in the breeding rooms a chance; with thanks to "Novice," "Lancashire Lad," "W. Reid," and "N.P.C." for their brilliant and modern ideas of improved classification. Yes, "Lad," I still contend that "Clear classes" should be strictly kept intact and free from invasion, and I don't require a crowd to back me up in that contention. Also, the opinion does not emanate from my Norwich or Norfolk friends, but from your humble servant; therefore, "Lad," banish that delusion at once. I freely admit there are men quite as expert as myself, aye, more so; "A Lancashire Lad" is one of them. But whether he is more of an expert than my Norwich friends, I question. I say he would be like the man that fell out of the balloon—"he would not be in it, poor fellow, worst luck!" He well knows our present-day judges are composed of men who are both exhibitors and dealers, well versed in buying and selling, and in the methods of preparing birds for exhibition, and who also hold a life experience in the Fancy; and yet "A Lancashire Lad" says these men are awkward and incapable, however clever they may be in taking a bird out of a present-day show cage without injuring its plumage and spoiling its future career. It clearly shows that he has no confidence in them at all, only as lookers-on; but you musn't touch; keep your hands off. I say it is a slur on their profession. I can assure him "Norfolk Dumplings" are very wholesome, especially with "Green Bacon," when once he gets used to them. "A Lancashire Lad" also states: "What odds about what one or two Norwich men say?" Of course in Norwich our ignorance of the Fancy is so great (compared with the intelligence of "A Lancashire Lad") that perhaps we ought not to be allowed to have a voice in the matter at all; if we do, we are enjoying a unique privilege. In conclusion, I sincerely trust "A Lancashire Lad" will in the future have the courage of his convictions, and not be ashamed or afraid to disclose his identity.

Sir,—Like Mr. W. Reid, I had no intention of writing further upon the above subject, but on reading his most interesting and courteous letter in your last issue, I find to my amazement that, amongst other things, he credits me with stating that the bye-law (passed by the Norwich Plainhead Club) was simply playing into the hands of the fraudulent exhibitor. Now, if he will kindly refer to my previous letter in your issue of April 17th, he will see I never made the assertion he credits me with. What I did state was this: writing on handling, I said that "it is necessary to handle some winning exhibits, or otherwise you are playing into the hands of the fraudulent exhibitor," viz., the painter, trimmer, etc. The winners I allude to are those in the "Evenly Marked" and "Clear Classes" of Norwich. Also I might further add that it is impossible to fairly judge those two classes without handling the birds; otherwise the judge is liable to award prizes to "variegated" and "ticked" birds respectively, which has been the case at shows in the past, when by right these birds should be ticketed "Wrong Class." So you see there is a necessity for handling.

J. W. Kingsmill.

Sir,—I notice in your issue of May 1st a long letter upon the above subject by Mr. Reid. Mr. Reid says: "When I" (meaning himself) "placed the proposition before the Sunderland C.B.A., to the effect that a bird showing no dark feathers whilst standing on the perch should be eligible to compete in Clear classes. . . ." And yet all Mr. R. seems to dwell upon is thigh-ticked birds, as he says: is it not much better to allow these thigh-ticked birds to compete with clear birds, and thus preclude the possibility of anyone's being tempted to remove the dark feathers? Now, Sir, as I have said before, there are very few thigh-ticked birds, even if there are only a few dark feathers, bnt can be detected by the close scrutiny of a judge without the handling of the birds; therefore, I say, to allow these birds to compete with clears is playing into the hands of those who haven't the pluck to try and breed a good clear, but who would rather make one as Mr. Reid says. Knowing that the judge would not be permitted to handle them, these people can go plucking to their hearts' content, without fear of disqualification. I have always understood that it is the scarcity of anything that increases its value, but if all birds with dark underflue are to be called clears, there will be no more scarcity, and down will come the price of the clear birds which fanciers have tried so hard to obtain; and to those who cannot see it so, or rather who will not see it so, I say, the time will come when they must see it.

A. Woollard.

Sir,—Just for "Lancashire Lad's" information, I may say that Mr. Kingsmill is not the mouthpiece of all the Plainhead fanciers in Norwich, but is voicing his own opinion. I myself belong to several clubs in Norwich whose membership altogether is considerably over three hundred strong; and we have had several shows where the ticked or dark underflue birds have been shown with the Clears. "Lancashire Lad" will see by this that Norwich City takes as much interest in this question as their fellow breeders in other parts of the country. The Fancy in Norwich never has dictated as suggested what should be shown in the classes, but form their schedules, as the majority of the members of the different clubs vote I rather question if "Lancashire Lad" or any one else can produce any correspondence in which the fanciers of Norwich City have tried to influence any society as in their classification. All societies have a perfect right to run what classes they think fit for Clears, clean, ticked, or dark under-flue, not to disqualify if they choose. From an exhibitor's point of view, it is immaterial whether the dark under-flue birds are shown with the Clears or in the variegated class. I should enter my birds according to the classification of the show at which I was going to show. In conclusion, I think that after all the correspondence on this subject that passed through your most valuable paper last year, it might safely be left in the hands of the societies to use their own judgment in the matter of the wording of their schedules.

A Nightingale Problem.

Sir,—Can any reader inform me the best means of rearing young Nightingales hatched from eggs under a Canary? I hope some readers can enlighten me upon this matter. I am a regular subscriber to this valuable paper, Cage Birds, from which I have gained a good deal of useful information.

J. Nightingale.

Hand-rearing the Lapwing.

Sir,—Would you or any reader kindly tell me when is the best time to take young Lapwings from the nest, and what is the best mixture on which to feed them?

"Peewit."

ASTONISHING GROWTH OF THE FANCY.

Four New Cage Bird Societies Proposed this Week.

Southall and District.

Sir,—At a meeting held April 28, it was decided that a society should be formed, and to further the interests of same a general meeting will be held on Monday next, May 10th, at St. John's Schools, Southall, at 8 p.m., when it is proposed to elect officers and committee, and frame rules, etc. Will all fanciers in the district please make every effort to be present, as we need all the help possible? I am sure, judging by the letters received, that our efforts will be crowned with success. I shall be pleased to receive the name and address of any fancier interested who has not already communicated with us.

Thos. E. Jeffrey.
10, Western Road, Southall.

Mansfield and District.

Sir,—It is with much pleasnre I write and ask you to annouuce that I am trying to start a Cage-Bird Society at the Charter Arms, Mansfield. We have not the advantage of possessing a society in Mansfield, as the one held at the Victoria Hotel is now broken up; and I think it is my duty as a fancier to call othor fanciers together, and not let a place like Mansfield be without a club. I have taken the thing in hand, and hope to have a good society if it is in my power to form one. I believe that in Mansfield and district the fanciers could hold their own against any others, if they would rally round and work hand in hand with one another. I hope fanciers of the old club will join, and not let the Fancy sleep. Also I should like new members to send in their names, so that I can call a meeting and get the project in working order. I may say that I have got J. Maitland, Esq., as patron, also R. L. Jones, Esq., as president, and have already received names of two members. So, fanciers, send in your names to me, at 12, Walkden Street, Mansfield.

Joseph Smith, Sec., pro. tem.

Hugglescote and District.

Sir,—It has been suggested by several fanciers in the locality that a Cage Bird Society be formed for Hugglescote and district. There are many people who keep cage-birds of one variety or the other in the neighbourhood, and it is perhaps needless to say that the formation of such a society would stay a long-felt want, and be very beneficial to cage-bird men as against societies already in existence which do not cater for the cage-birds solely. In view of the fact stated, I see no reason why a good company of fanciers should not be drawn together and the society formed. With a view to bringing about the desired result, I shall be pleased if fanciers and friends interested wonld be kind enough to forward their names and addresses to me as soon as they possibly can.

William Cooper.

Henfield and District.

Sir,—At a well-attended meeting held at the Rainbow Temperance Hotel, on April 28, J. Eardley Hall, Esq., in the chair, we formed the Henfield and District Fur and Feather Society (including cage birds). The society has no radius, and the subscription is only 2s. 6d. The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, J. Eardley Hall, Esq.; Vice-Chairman, F. Wisden, Esq.; Committee, Messrs. Wadman, Davey, Minchin, Duke, Pullen, Brooks, Baines, Wisden, Fry, and Baxter. I shall be pleased if fanciers and intending members in the surrounding districts will be kind enough to forward their names and addresses to me, when all information will be gladly given by me.

J. A. Bentley, Hon. Sec.
Henfield, Sussex.

[This makes the astonishing total of 40 new societies devoted to the cult of cage birds which have been formed since the 1st of January last—twenty-five of them for cage birds only. Who says the cage bird hobby is on the decline?—Editor, Cage Birds.]

A Successful Start.

Sir,—I should like to tell you what I can concerning my experience in the keeping of my birds. The Yorkshire, I think, is the premier bird of the day. Of course, what I have are not show birds; I keep mine more for the purposes of song. But nothing pleases me more than to see a good show bird "standing like a guardsman." I am thinking of changing my stock and going in for Lizards. I was successful in the Easter show held at Carnarvon with a broken cap Lizard hen; I got vhc in the Any Variety class. I have learnt a deal through your popular paper. I am always trying to get new readers by speaking of Cage Birds, and I would not like to be without it personally on any account.

Lost, Stolen, or Strayed.

A Suggestion to Show Secretaries.

Sir,—Now that the show season will soon be upon us, may I be so bold as to offer the following suggestion? I may say I have been connected with the Fancy for over 20 years, and for the best part of that time I have been connected with shows both large and small. But I am sorry to say there is scarcely a show season goes by without birds going astray, being stolen, etc., and it has often occurred to me that possibly some of the removal slips sent out by the Secretary have fallen into the hands of some dishonest person who has made use of them. Therefore, I make the following suggestion: instead of sending the usual slips or giving slips from the Secretary's office, which is usually done, a counterfoil book should be used with numbers to run from 1 upwards, as enclosed. The half to be sent out with the labels should have simply the number and printing, as shown below. So that persons wishing to take their exhibits away at the close of a show may be able to do so by taking the slip to the secretary's office, and giving in the exhibitor's name and address, and also the number of entries made. The Secretary, by referring to the corresponding number in the book, would be able to see at a glance if it is correct. I have no doubt that if the above suggestion should be of any benefit in securing the safety of exhibits and less worry for secretaries of shows, some of our show printers could supply such a book. Of course, I do not wish to say that the above will stop dishonesty, but it may improve the present system. The counterfoil and sheet should appear somewhat as follows:—

C. W. Mead.

| To be retained in the Secretary's book. | To be sent to the Exhibitor. |
|---|---|

Six Youngsters in Four Eggs.

SIR,—I notice Mr. J. W. Boocock's record of his experience with six chicks in four eggs in your last issue. I have a Clear Yellow Yorkshire which I bred last year. She laid her first egg in the nest; next day she dropped one on the bottom of the cage (it broke, of course), and next day I was surprised to see a broken double-egg, that is one egg as large as a pigeon-egg, and another complete egg of the usual size inside it. And the hen was none the worse for it. I should like also to give you my experience this year. I have been a breeder for nearly 20 years, and have never had this trouble before. I have lost a number of hens in the following manner. The feathers were all puffed out; the birds were panting for breath, and after death the upper part of the body of some of them was black, the others showing no sign of the cause of death. Some I lost after they had laid, others after the eggs had hatched, while some died after the young were a week old. I saved the greater number by a dose of warm salad oil, and a diet of scalded bread and milk. The complaint is not the usual one to which both cocks and hens are liable. It is a different complaint. The panting is very frantic. I do not, by the way, remember having a cock bird ill. Some old fancier's experience may be of use to others, and that is my chief reason for writing.

The Cage Bird Section of the Walthamstow F.A.

SIR,—I have the pleasure to announce that I have been appointed hon. sec. of the Cage-Bird Section of the Walthamstow Fanciers' Association, and as this section has not flourished or made any progress for some considerable time, I am endeavouring to try and bring it up to a status worthy of its being called a cage-bird section. I am, therefore, presenting this section with two handsome silver challenge cups, to be competed for at the Young Stock and Annual Shows for most points, so that I hope to do my very utmost to make this section a success. Even if I should fail, I shall have the satisfaction of knowing that it was through no fault of mine. I sincerely hope fanciers will rally round, remembering that "many can help one whereas one cannot help many," and do their best to keep this section afloat. I shall be only too happy to supply fanciers or any intending fanciers with any information concerning the advantages of belonging to the W.F.A., which is open to the world. The entrance fee is 1s., and the subscription 2s. 6d.

A. J. MARLEY.

Singular Allegation against the Secretary.

SIR,—As a fully-paid-up member of the above-named society, and not being able to get any satisfaction out of our present secretary as to when he is going to call a meeting, I feel compelled to "rush into print," because he simply ignores any letters I send him. Having regard to the letter I sent him on April 22nd, of which he took no notice whatever, I consider that I am quite justified in taking this course, not only for myself, but for my fellow fanciers. I also consider when men have been put to a large expense in buying class birds and show cages, according to the society's standard, and have gone to the trouble and expense of exhibiting their birds, in addition to conforming to the multitude of conditions that the society issues, only to be openly defied by one or two men, it is no small wonder the society does not prosper. May I suggest to the few paid-up members of the society that they call a meeting, and invite intending fanciers to join our ranks, and treat our present Secretary and Co. with the same contempt to which they have treated us? For the sake of the Lizard Canary I trust some fancier will take the matter up, and that if the U.K. Lizard Society is going to continue, let it be better conducted in future than it has been in the past. The special letter to which I have referred above was as follows:—

April 22nd, 1909.

DEAR SIR,

In reference to the U.K.L.C.B.S., of which you are hon. secretary, I should esteem it a favour if you will kindly notify me whether I have won the gold medal for the novice Lizards, offered by the U.K.L.S., and when you are going to call a meeting of the society to determine what to do, in reference to same. I notice that the winners of the cup and medals in connection with the L. and L.F.A.C.B.S. have got their awards, and I think it is high time the winners of our society got theirs, otherwise for the society in all fairness to disband and refund subscriptions to the very few members who have paid their subscriptions to be decoyed.

The Sad Case of Mr. Barwell.

An Appeal to our Readers.

SIR,—Allow me through the columns of CAGE BIRDS to appeal to the Fancy generally, and especially to British bird exhibitors, on behalf of Mr. C. Barwell (Northampton). who has been suffering for a long time from valvular disease of the heart, with no hope of recovery, and who has a wife and a small family dependent upon him. I might say that the Shoe Operatives' Trade Society, the Northampton Hand-in-Hand C.B.S., and the United Order or Free Gardeners have had a united meeting, and have decided to inaugurate a benefit on his behalf by the issuing of subscription sheets. Therefore, I appeal to the charitable to help the needy, and knowing this to be a genuine, deserving case, I hope fanciers will send on small donations to me, knowing as we do that many can help one where one cannot always help many. Fanciers, I appeal to your generosity, as this case has been under the treatment of eleven doctors, who all pronounce it incurable.

J. WATSON, Treasurer.

Foresters' Arms, Northampton.

The Colour Feeding of Canaries.

SIR,—I have read Mr. Stewart's letter and Mr. Midgley's article on this subject with interest. Mr. Stewart insinuates that I advocated the daily colour feeding of birds from interested motives, but such is not the case. Long experience has proved to me that the average bird colours better when fed on colour food daily, and is of decidedly stronger constitution when the seed box is not removed from the cage. I am willing to admit that a bird teeming with natural colour will colour well if fed every other day; but all birds are not full of natural colour, and it would be foolish for anyone to expect birds of poor natural colour to colour well unless colour-fed daily. Mr. Midgley, I notice, advocates colour-feeding twice daily. This, of course, ensures the birds having fresh-made food always before them; but I am convinced that feeding on colour-food once a day is enough. Mr. Stewart's plan of withholding seed and forcing his birds to eat the colour-food, I consider both unwise and cruel. The birds require seed to build up their constitutions, and the egg contained in the colour food also aids in this respect. The small amount of colour in the colour-food charges the bird's blood with colour, and the blood in turn colours the plumage. I maintain that it is necessary to feed for both stamina and colour, and to do this properly the birds must be fed daily on both seed and colour-food. If a palatable food be prepared, with pure, tasteless pepper as the colouring agent, there is not the slightest need to remove the seed box.

J. W. RAMSDEN.

An Appeal to Fanciers of Cowdenbeath and District.

SIR,—I would be very glad if you would insert this letter in your valuable paper to see if the fanciers would come forward and help the Committee of Cowdenbeath and Dis. C.B.S. This society was formed by some of the fanciers of the district, with a view to having a show, and helping novices along their way. Now, those who cried most about having a society formed, and gave in their names to be members of such a society, have never turned up to any of the meetings. Now, the reason I gave at the first meeting when called to take the chair was this: The cage-bird fanciers had no chance to show their birds at the local show for want of classes, and I thought all along, with the rest of lovers of cage-birds, that a society was necessary, so I got a bill put in one of the local dealers' windows asking for names of all those interested in the formation of such a society, and received 28 names of those who were willing to become members of such a society were it only formed. Now, the society is formed, but alas! those who had handed in their names have not turned up at a meeting. Now, fanciers, you don't get justice at the local poultry show with only a few classes to put your birds in. I appeal to you to rally round your society and have a show of your own in Cowdenbeath.

DAVID DUNCAN, Chairman.

Moraig Bank, Cowdenbeath.

The Bournemouth C.B.A. Withdraw from the C.B.U.

A Resignation and a Repudiation.

SIR,—With reference to the announcement under the above heading in your last week's issue, I should be obliged by your making it known that, having for several years past taken an active part in the affairs of the B.C.B.A., also representing it as delegate to the C.B.U. for District No. 9, I had nothing whatever to do with the decision to withdraw from the C.B.U., I myself being no longer a member of the B.C.B.A.

LAST SEASON'S YORKSHIRE UNION SHOWS.

INTERESTING ANALYSIS OF THE ENTRIES BY MR. F. HAMMOND

SIR,—I shall be pleased if you can find space in your journal for the enclosed tables, giving a full classification, etc., of Canaries exhibited at the Yorkshire Union shows during the past season. I trust the information may prove interesting to your readers generally, and it will, no doubt, be of service to societies in this district in the compiling of their schedules for future winter shows.

A new and specially interesting experiment, by the Cinnamon marked Yorkshire Canary Club, will be given a trial at next season's shows. Any society desiring the club's patronage will be required to make six classes, two of which will be set apart entirely for novices, and one-half of any loss sustained by the society in providing these two classes will be borne by the club. The idea is to encourage the novice fancier to take up this variety, and, having done so, to afford him an opportunity of exhibiting in his own class or company, instead of having to compete in the open classes as hitherto. Seeing that the membership of the club is open to the world, and the subscription is only 1s. 6d. per annum, together with the fact that novice members will compete in these two classes for the usually handsome and valuable prizes offered to this section of the club's members, it will be surprising indeed, and disappointing also, if the hon. secretary has not very soon to report an increase in membership approaching, if not exceeding, 100 per cent. It is now for the novices to live up to their reputation, and prove that the club shall not suffer for its efforts on their behalf. No doubt they will send on their subscriptions at once, and see to it that all classes provided for them receive a bumping entry. It should be stated, for the information of those not conversant with the workings of the club, that a "novice" is one who has not won a first prize with a Canary in open competition. Also, that any information concerning the club will be gladly given on application to Mr. H. H. Towers, 8, Close Road, Glusburn, Cross Hills, near Keighley, Yorkshire.

FRED HAMMOND.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

The Nesting of the Goldfinch.

SIR,—I was glad Mr. Clegg took my criticism in good part, re "The Nesting of the Goldfinch." The Goldfinch begins to breed in the middle of May, and continues till the middle of October (at least)—five months. I catch what Goldfinches I require. All catchers will tell you if they go out at the end of October that they catch young Goldfinches at various stages of the moult—some clean-moulted, some nearly moulted, some half moulted, some just beginning to moult, and others (Greypates) without a feather moulted. If Goldfinches had only two nests this would not be the case. Again, there were three nests which I saw reared by the old ones in a cage, nests which I am sure were built by the same old birds, because they were building and feeding the young both at the same time. As to the authors he quotes, Mr. Clegg will often find them wrong in practice. For instance, most writers, including the great Buffon and Bewick, state that the Goldfinches line their nests with thistle down. Now, if they had only two nests, where are the birds to get the thistle down from? Thistles don't shed their down till the end of summer.

R. J. CLARK.

[Our readers will be very pleased to have some further notes on the Goldfinch from your interesting pen.—EDITOR.]

What Size Box Shall I Require?

SIR,—I have been a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS ever since I first knew about it, and am in the habit of saving copies—I put them away in a box. I find that my first one is No. 40, Vol. II., dated October 18th, 1902. I am sorry to find I have three missing since that date, and as my box is now quite full, I notice the rapid strides your very valuable paper has made. Twice at least it has increased in size, to say nothing of extra pages and other improvements, and that I have now to make a new box. I beg to ask, Mr. Editor, if you can tell me what size I had better make to hold the next seven years' "C.B."

E. PASS.

[What the future may have in store for our once little journal CAGE BIRDS we are not permitted to foresee. But if your boxes, Mr. Pass, may be measured by our intentions on behalf of the cage bird community, they will need to be no whit smaller than hitherto.—EDITOR, CAGE BIRDS.]

A Good Start with the Yorkshire Canary.

SIR,—I have been in the Fancy for three years, and I have not got yet beyond third prizes. Still, I have had to learn how to breed in that time, and not having had any experience before, I did not expect to jump to the 1st and specials all at once; one must creep before walking. In my flight I keep my young during the moult, and my hens in the winter. I reared 26 young ones last season from seven hens, and showed at the next feather, and at our annual shows, nine birds in all, and got six cards, viz., two 3rds, two 4ths., vhc, and hc, of which I am very proud, seeing that the year before I showed five and drew all "blanks." But thanks to the knowledge I have gleaned from reading CAGE BIRDS (I have taken your paper since commencing in the bird fancy), and the kindly hints I have found fellow fanciers I come in contact with ever ready and willing to give, I hope with reasonable luck to make progress. My particular fancy is the Yorkshire Canary.

A SHEFFIELD NOVICE.

I cannot speak too highly of, nor give too much praise to, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," by Claude St. John, writes Mr. J. Jones (Kirkdale), and I intend to go by it and CAGE BIRDS at all times.

Under the White Rose.

THE Yorkshire County B.B. and M.C. hold their annual general meeting to-day (Saturday), 7 p.m., at their headquarters, Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, and a large gathering is expected. The business is urgent, and very important—balance-sheet, election of officers, next season's competition, specials, etc., etc., and Mr. W. R. Myers, the secretary, will be delighted to see a few new faces there, so please attend.

GREEN Marked Yorkshires are, after all, to have someone to look after their interests. The club that was talked about so much during last show season is due to hatch in about fourteen to 21 days, and after such a long incubation should come out healthy and strong, and with good and substantial food will prove a valuable adjunct to the clubs already in existence. Over thirty names of intending members are already on the books, and it is very likely that this number will be doubled in quick time when affairs are put into working order. This variety is the prettiest and most attractive in the Fancy, has many adherents all over the country, and a club to cater for it will be gladly welcomed.

A NOTED British enthusiast has given me the following list of birds seen during his usual week-end ramble: Kestrel, Swallow, House and Sandmartins, Yellow and Pied Wagtails, Stonechat, Wheatear, Whinchat, Willow Warbler, and a company of Twites. The latter bird is stated by an eminent authority on British birds to be only a visitor to these shores, whereas my friend states that they breed regularly on Baildon Moors within a few miles of Bradford, and have done so for some years; in fact, some years ago he secured a clutch of eggs and all were hatched and successfully reared under Canaries. Anyhow, I intend to have a run over some week-end to have a peep at them myself.

ON Good Friday I saw a good few Wheatears not far from Queensbury, and in splendid trim they were. In fact, I never saw birds look better; clan and straight as a new pin; and I hope later to discover their breeding haunts in this vicinity.

CANARY breeders here have had rather a hard time of it during the past week, May being ushered in by hail and snow, and one or two of the nights being exceptionally cold, a thick white frost being in evidence on one morning, and many have suffered severe losses to their young stock.

AT the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S. meeting on Saturday last, the Hoyland (near Barnsley), and Dis. C.B.S., applied for admission and were received in the ranks of the Union. Twenty-eight societies are now affiliated, with a total membership of about 1,250. It is expected that one or two more societies will be enrolled in the near future.

"STRAIGHT-'UN."

OBITUARY.

It is with regret, writes Mr. A. Bosworth (Rawtenstall), that I write (especially after Mr. J. Rukin's letter in your last issue), to inform you that his youngest son passed peacefully away on Sunday afternoon last, and I am sure all fanciers will join me in tendering our deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Rukin in their sad bereavement.

Fanciers will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. (Moore, wife of Mr. R. Moore, Hugh Street, So. Benwill, Newcastle, after a long and weary illness, writes Mr. Thos. Taylor (Gateshead). The funeral took place on April 30th, and several fancier friends attended, including Messrs. Telford, Corston, and myself. I am sure our much-respected friend will have the sympathy of all in his sad loss. We regret to learn that Mr. Moore is compelled for the time being to relinquish the Fancy, and is selling all his stock and utensils.

Illustrated Ideas

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 306.
A NOISELESS CAGE DOOR.

Sent by J. W. Dawson, 113 Bradford Road, Otley, Yorks.

Here is a sketch of a noiseless cage-door. It is a great benefit to breeders who are troubled with nervous hens to have a door that will not screech when lifted. When making the door, leave the punched bar two holes longer (as shown in the illustration), and drill them out a little larger, so as to allow the door to slide up easily. Fix the door on to the straight wires, and solder them on to the front of the cross bars. If you get them parallel, which you can do easily, the door will move without the slightest noise.—J. DAWSON.

No. 307.
AN IMPROVED CAGE-DOOR CUTTER.

Sent by J. Hardy, 4, Winston Street, Hartlepool.

In CAGE BIRDS recently I saw a cutter for making doors illustrated. I send you herewith a sketch of one I made myself, and which I have used for two years. An advantage it has over the ordinary one is that you can make doors to any size by moving the cutting arm backwards or forwards, as the case may be. You can also renew the cutter at any time, and you can use it by hand (it is not everyone who keeps a brace by him). I hope the sketch will be sufficiently explanatory of the idea.—J. HARDY.

Wild Bird Life.

The Nest of the Chaffinch.

The month of April and the early part of May are certainly the most enjoyable time of the year. Everything around us is starting into fresh life. We have done with hoary winter, and are looking forward to the long, bright days, to the pleasant rambles across fields and woodlands, and to the hours spent with the birds and the wild life of the open. The Swallows, the Martin, Turtle Doves, Nightingale and Cockoo are with us, and daily we are adding the names of new arrivals to our list. We saw the first Swallow on Good Friday morning—a single bird hawking the district for an hour or two. To our eyes he appeared lonely; and we looked anxiously for his companions; but none came for a full week. Now they can be seen darting down the village street and twittering round their accustomed haunts. For some years now they have regularly nested under the rafters of the wood-shed, and when they first arrived they flew about the yard for a short time and suddenly darted in to visit the old nest, in the same old manner of last summer; and all the old nests have been visited by the returning birds, so that they must either be the parent birds or the young ones of last season. Any way, one thing is certain, viz., that the same birds return to the scenes of their former nesting site or birthplace. Since the cold weather left us our resident birds have been busy. Young Song Thrushes are about, and eggs and nests of this species and the Blackbirds and Missel Thrushes are fairly plentiful. A pair or two of Chaffinches have commenced to build, and recently we saw a remarkable nest of these clever builders. It was placed on the branch of a fir tree within a few inches of the main stem, and so closely did it harmonise in colour with the surroundings that we should have passed it had we not seen the old bird there, the green and grey lichen covering the nest being of exactly the same colouring as that on the branch of the tree. One hardly knows whether to look upon these remarkable evidences of protective colouration as accidental, or as part of the bird's natural instinct for the protection of its eggs and young. I have, however, at times found nests built without the slightest effort at making use of material to harmonise with local colour; in fact, in some cases, the birds could not possibly have done more to attract attention to the structure.

How Cuckoos Migrate.

It is a well-known fact that the autumn migration of the Cuckoo is contrary to that of other birds. The old Cuckoos leave the country first, leaving their offspring to follow later. If it were possible to find out, it would certainly be interesting to know if the spring migration differs in any way from that of other birds.

The Glossy Magpie.

The description of a Magpie is generally that of "a black and white bird." This is misleading, for the live bird in health is a splendid fellow, his plumage having the most beautiful shadings; and his quick alert ways give him fresh colours at every movement.

The Rare Bittern.

That rare bird of the marshes, the Bittern, has visited us again this winter, and more than one specimen has been gathered for the collector. A wounded bird will defend himself with claw and beak, and do considerable damage. He is a hearty feeder, and the contents of his stomach are generally of a curious description. Yarrell says: "I found in the stomach of a Bittern the bones of a pike of considerable size, and another contained a Water Rail whole and six small fishes. His booming note was at one time a common sound of the marshes.

"Yet the Lark's shrill fife may come
At daybreak from the fallow,
And the Bittern sound his drum,
Booming from the sedgy shallow.'"

Rooks and Wire Worms.

An old writer positively declared that Rooks did no wrong when seen pulling up the young sprouting corn. The wire worm is one of the greatest scourges to which farmers are exposed; and yet it is to the Rooks chiefly, if not entirely, that they are able to look for a remedy. Cased in its hard shelly coat, it eats its way into the roots of corn, and is beyond the reach of weather, or the attacks of other insects or small birds, whose short and softer bills cannot penetrate the recesses of its secure retreat buried some inches below the soil. The Rook alone can do so. When the Rook is seen jerking up root after root of the rising crop, the careful observer will be able afterwards, if he examines minutely, to detect in many of these roots the cells of a wireworm.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at ou rrisk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

PARROT AVIARIES, MORECAMBE.

Now please remember that during the last 18 years I have bred thousands of Budgerigars, and I publicly wager £50 that I have imported, manufactured, sold, and shipped more wired cokernut husk nests for Budgerigar breeding than any other man living; so have any bragging copyists, or so-called shippers sufficient British pluck to accept? If so, step forward; if not, don't brag, but stand down. For 18 years my husks have been unequalled. Don't be gulled by inexperienced shopkeepers; listen to what experts say:—"Cage Birds" says they are "far superior to the old husks." "Feathered World" says: "Undoubtedly, the new busks are very superior to the old." Again, "Exchange and Mart" says: "Those prepared by Mr. Harper are very superior to the old style, which often fail to pieces at the most critical time, with disastrous results for the nestlings. You had better order the improved form; even if it is a little dearer than the old-fashioned sort, it is cheaper in the long run." "Fur and Feather" tells its correspondents: "They have distinct advantages over the old sort." "Poultry" has said: "For Budgerigars we advise the use of the improved style of husks." Surely these are convincing testimonials.

Don't forget, you have the benefit of 18 years' practical breeding experience. I don't keep a shop; one quality only, the best. My "Improved Secure" husks are 4/6 dozen, smaller quantities 5d. each. Few Cockateel nest boxes 1/6 each. Illustrated pamphlet, entitled "Budgerigar Breeding," free on application.

THE KING PARRAKEET.

Drawn from the Charming Bird exhibited at the Plumstead and Woolwich Show by Miss Flora Brammer (Fulham, S.W.)

The King Parrakeet is an exceedingly handsome bird, and a popular pet among birdkeepers. The head, neck, breast and underparts are a rich crimson, back and wings a lovely green, and the long tail two shades of blue. The bird is a native of Australia, and when imported into England is very hardy, living for a good number of years. It has a musical voice for a Parrot, and often learns to imitate the human voice with success.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned withiu the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ¼d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

HARRY ALLEN.
FIRST FOR QUALITY.

Ladies and gentlemen, I have the following for sale: Three hand-reared cock Larks, singing daylight and gaslight, with full, loud voice, either indoors or out, they are real ceiling lifters, price 10/6 each, with cage and my new book. These birds are very cheap. Beautiful cock Canaries, singing very hard, 7/6, 8/6, and 10/6 each, and are well worth their money; good hens, 3/-, 3/6 and 4/6 each; these are Yorkshire and Norwich. I have a grand lot of good steady muling Linnets, they are very large birds, 2/6 each. I hold the world's record for mulers. Linnets, in full song, with a beautiful polished cage, and my book of secrets and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6; this is a real bargain. Look! Fierce singing cock Linnets, with blood-red breasts and extra loud voices, with new cage and my book of secrets, right for catching or contest singing only, 2/6. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Linnets taught by the world's champion, will sing anywhere, only 1/6. Deposit your money with the Editor of this paper for honest stuff; all on seven days approval. Larks, singing grand and as steady as rocks and as straight as arrows, 2/- and 2/6; a few, singing extra loud, 3/6. My new book just published, How to train Linnets for contest, and how to get Larks fit in a very short time, 9d. each; four packets of my special mixture, 1/-; Lark food and Thrush food, 8d. per pound; the best food you can possibly buy. Gentlemen, I make this food myself. All the above are in the pink of condition, and are well worth your money; they are clean, sound, healthy birds, so please state wants and write to the largest British bird dealer in the world.—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

NOW'S YOUR CHANCE.

Having more pairs than I can put up for breeding, I can spare few pairs at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, £1; same as I would breed from; also few spare cocks at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; few spare hens at 6/-, 7/6, 8/6; in clears, ticked and green marked; same blood as winners at Shipley, Windhill, Bingley, Bradford, and other shows too numerous to mention, including Palace; all on four days' approval; money returned if not satisfied; stamp reply.—Hudson, Confectioner, Thackley, Bradford.

MAY I ASK A Favour?

We all know there are testimonials and testimonials, and the favour I ask is:—Will you oblige by carefully reading the few following as examples of the unbounded satisfaction given, whether at home or abroad. The originals can be seen at any time. For very obvious reasons I leave out of Foreign extracts, names and addresses.

Jamaica.

April 21st, 1909.—Allow me to return you very many thanks for sending me Canaries and box of goods. I consider them a fine lot.—Dr. ——— to W. Rudd.

Telegraph Co., Singapore, Straits Settlements.

March 29, 1909.—The Canaries that you sent per ss. "Machoon" reached me in first-class condition. Many thanks for the same. There are some very good birds here, but none to be compared to yours. Such birds are not procurable here.—H. W——— to W. Rudd.

Ghent, Belgium. May 6, 1909. — I am pleased to tell you that the Yorkshire cock arrived yesterday, safe, and gives every satisfaction.—E. J——— to W. Rudd.

Lincoln. May 5, 1909.—The Rev. J. B— thanks Mr. Rudd for the prompt attention he gave to his recent order. The birds came safely to hand this morning, and, as expected, gave entire satisfaction. The Rev. J. B——— is especially pleased with the Canaries and yellow Budgerigars. Mr. Rudd shall certainly have all future orders.

Quick Work.

388, Manchester Road, Blackrod. May 8, 1909. — I received the two Yorksbire hens on the 5th of May and both are now nesting. I shall be pleased if you will send two Norwich cocks for a friend. T. Derbyshire to W. Rudd.

Surrey Villa, Long Lane, Finchley. May 7, 1909.—Muling hen safely to hand. I am very pleased with it, and perfectly satisfied; if you send all your birds out in a similar condition to this one you are to be congratulated. Thanking you for promptness.—F. Hughes to W. Rudd.

160, Lower Wortley Road, Leeds. May 8, 1909.—Birds received this morning quite safely. They are real beauties, and I am delighted with them. Never saw anything to equal them. Thanking you for prompt attention.—G. A. Roberts to W. Rudd.

7, Anglesea Street, Duhlin. May 8th, 1909. Yorkshire hen arrived safe. I am very pleased with same.—R. Jamieson to W. Rudd.

HERE are some Prices and Varieties.

PLAIN-HEADED NORWICH HENS.

Clear Yellow, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Clear Buff, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-. Ticked or Variegated, 2/9, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-. Pairs Norwich Plainheads, Matched for Breeding, 7/6, 8/6, 9/6. CRESTED BRED HENS, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 40/-. CRESTED COCKS, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, to 100/-. CRESTED HENS, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- up. COCKS! CRESTED BRED. Some large feathery birds—simply given away at 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 up. MATCHED PAIRS FOR BREEDING CRESTS, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- up.

Reliable Bargains for the Experienced and Amateur.

My special matched pairs of prize-bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-; Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, and 30/-; Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-; Lancashires, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-; Cinnamons, 8/6, 9/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; Lizards, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-; Border Fancies, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6. These never yet have been equalled for their marvellous value, and must be seen to be appreciated.

To Beginners:

If you cannot afford a big price send for a pair of my correctly matched Norwich at 8/6 or 9/6; and now note this.—In most cases where you send for pairs at this price, you are sent two huffs, often both marked birds—this is where you do not get what is required—well, I send you one marked, and one clear; one buff, and the other yellow. Travelling cage 3d. extra. Then for 3/6 I will send you a double breeding cage, fitted with everything complete for an immediate start. Total for birds and cage 12/3 for 3/6 birds, or 13/3 for 9/6 birds. But I would strongly recommend you to have my Cage No. 100; it has sand drawers, and is fitted with sanitary furniture throughout, and the price is only 5/-.

Songsters.

Thousands now on hand, specially selected, not haphazard birds, quality sent to each, according to price sent, and in all cases the best I can do, and what I cannot do in this line, no other man (or fictitious trader) can in the world. Norwich, Yorkshires, Mules (Goldfinch, Linnet, or Siskin). Note prices: 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-.

Feeding Hens.

3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; the latter suitable for all large varieties. Beware of hens offered as feeders that are only erect small Belgians, or Germans; they are too small for feeding anything but the smallest varieties.

Travelling cages in all cases 3d. extra. For all others please see free illustrated list, sent immediately upon receipt of post card. This is copyright, so unblushing imitators, please note, or you may have a painful reminder.

W. RUDD, THE Bird Specialist, Norwich.

DARLINGTON C. AND B.B.F.A.

Meeting held at George Hotel, May 5th. Mr. J. Wildsmith presided. It was decided that the special prize given by our President (Mr. H. Pike Pease, M.P.) for our open classes, be competed for by members in the open classes, members competing for same to nominate four birds at time of entry; highest number of points to count. The classification for our open show to be held on October 16th was arranged same as last year, with following exceptions; Goldfinch and Bullfinch in one class instead of a separate class for each, as last year; in the Yorkshire and Norwich sections we have two unflighted classes for each variety—for yellow and buff—instead of one unflighted class for Yorkshire and one for Norwich, as last year; two novice classes have been added to members' classes—A.V. Canary and A.S. British (open to members who have not won a first prize in open competition). We give a hearty invitation to all fanciers to join us, as our Association is open to all. Members' classes are at a reduced fee to open classes, and full prize money is paid out in all members' classes. Next meeting night, June 2nd; F.F. and Open Show business.—R. S. BLACK,

Club Reports.

FORFAR AND DISTRICT C.B.I.S.

Usual monthly meeting, held on May 1st, in the Granite Bar, when it was decided to hold a First Feather show on July 3rd, 12 classes to be provided, viz., 4 for Norwich, 4 for Borders, 1 for Mule, and 3 for wild birds. Mr. J. Byars (Brechin) will judge Norwich, and Mr. W. Grewar (Forfar) the remainder. Mr. J. Bowman has kindly granted the use of a room in the Granite Bar for the show. We have decided to hold an open show on Oct. 23rd, in the Masonic Hall, Forfar, which is without doubt one of the very best in the North for such a purpose. We trust the Fancy will rally round and give us a bumping entry as a send-off.—W. GREWAR, Hon. Sec.

ABERDEEN O.S.

Meeting held in the Trades Hall on April 30th, the president, Mr. Hector, in the chair. A letter was read from the secretary of the Scottish N.P.C. intimating that the club show was fixed to be held in conjunction with Aberdeen, on Dec. 17th and 18th. All the conditions named by the club were unanimously agreed to. Mr. W. Clubb was appointed to receive names of fanciers willing to join the S.N.P.C. Classification was gone over and the following alterations made: Greenfinch fed or non-fed; Siskin, fed or non-fed; Redpoll or Twite, Bramblefinch, Chaffinch, any variety of Bunting; any variety of soft-billed British Bird, Nightingale or smaller. Rules of competition were passed, with the exception of the rule for members' unflighted classes; after some discussion it was decided to drop the last clause of the rule.—J. BRYSON, Sec.

HULL C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at Oddfellows' Hall on May 3rd. Previous to the meeting the talk naturally turned round to the number of young being reared, the majority of members reporting only moderate luck; some had only just paired the birds, while others had the first round nearly all clear. Others, again, had had a lot of young dead in shell. Mr. Harland said he had 28 like this, out of 32 good eggs; this he attributes to a very heavy thunderstorm at about the time the birds were due to hatch. Mr. W. Pepper reported good progress; he had 32 young, four on the sticks, and several more about ready to leave the nest. Various samples of colour-feeds were on view, also samples of Fox's egg food. The colour-feeds caused much discussion, the choice being finally left to the members themselves. Mr. Geo. Harland was asked to read the paper prepared by Lady Doughty on "Bird Culture." Before reading it, he said, he would like to say that it was through the courtesy of the members of the Grimsby O.S. he was able to do so, they thinking it would be very interesting to their near neighbours across the water. Mr. Lugg, the representative of Messrs. Fox's Egg Food Co., attended. He explained the merits of his firm's productious, their egg food in particular. His remarks were followed with great interest by all. several members intimating their intention to give the egg-food a thorough trial. This ended one of the most pleasant meetings in the history of the society.—ERNEST R. RIDLEY, Hon. Sec.

GATESHEAD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Usual meeting, held April 28th, at headquarters, Lockhart's Cafe, High Street, presided over by the chairman, Mr. T. Almoud. The attendance was the largest we have seen for years, many old and new members being present. We noticed some faces that have been missing for a long time; in fact, it was one of the best meetings the society has had. Long before the time of starting we had to shift our quarters to the larger room, which was filled. We again enrolled new members, which now seems to be a usual thing. Nine were proposed and accepted, which now brings up the grand total to forty in three months, and there are more to follow. It was pleasing to see Mr. Hutchinson (Newcastle) join us, he being one of the Newcastle secretaries, and secretary for the Northern Crest Club; it showed the good feeling prevailing amongst us. Mr. Patterson (Chirnside), that well-known judge and exhibitor of the "wee gem," received a hearty welcome into the ranks of the Palace of the North. Yet another secretary has joined us —Mr. Lance Hall, of the Pelton C.B.S. Messrs. Foster (Pelton Fell), Bairstow (Langlee Park), Wood, and Chapman (Newcastle), Prior and Watson (Gateshead), also joined. Correspondence was read from Mr. Halliday, our Yorkshire judge. The nominations for a judge for first feather show in first week of July then took place. Several gentlemen were proposed. The secretary was instructed to write for terms. Mr. Crawhall then gave his lecture on "The Difficulties of the Breeding Season." He dealt with all the troubles which befall fanciers in the breeding season, and was listened to with great interest. In conclusion, Mr. Crawhall said that if anyone would like to ask any questions he would answer them to the best of his ability. A warm discussion followed. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Crawhall brought a most pleasant and interesting evening to a close.—G. BUCK and H. JOHNSON, Hon. Secs.

POPLAR AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting of the above society was held at their headquarters, on Thursday, April 29th. Present: Messrs. Hunt Bros., Cook, Cowles, Dearing, Pinder, Kidman, Lowrie, Pine, Whitman, Barber, Hammond, Plumb, Wyatt, Mottram, Ash, Reeves. The chairman addressed the meeting as follows:—Once again we are favoured by the presence of our esteemed and respected friend, Mr. House, who has kindly consented to give us a lecture this evening on the Yorkshire Canary. I am reminded of past services rendered to us by this gentleman, and I am sure that I am voicing the feelings of this meeting by saying that we feel grateful indeed to Mr. House for these services rendered from time to time; we owe him a debt of gratitude. I trust all present will give him their best attention, and have no doubt we shall all benefit very considerably by the lecture. Mr. House, who spoke for just over one hour, went fully into the value of breeding for style and shape, and especially emphasised the fact that if good, typical birds were required, the preference should be given to neat, small hens. At the close of the lecture many questions were asked, and were answered to the satisfaction of the enquirers. The enquiry of Mr. Plumb is worthy of particular notice, owing to the fact that he had brought a Yorkshire Canary up with him which was out of condition, for the lecturer's opinion on same, as to what was the probable cause. After many enquiries by the lecturer, it was finally given as his, the lecturer's, opinion, that the probable cause of the bird's being out of condition was the use of disinfected sawdust on the trays of the cages, which article had the tendency to affect the liver of the Canary, and thus throw it out of condition. The lecturer's assumption on this subject gave rise to many questions from the members present, and the lecturer gave it as his opinion that sawdust was not a satisfactory covering for cage bottoms; he much preferred sand, and in preference again, silver sand. Mr. Cook also enquired from the lecturer if he was of opinion that a hen given plenty of baths during the process of incubation would help to prevent a bird leaving the shell with a flat head? This remark was treated by the lecturer and the meeting very jocularly, but after the lecturer giving his views on the matter, the enquirer continued to say that he could not understand an eminent authority on the Canary, such as Mr. Mundell, making an assertion like this without having some grounds for it. The chairman proposed a very hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was given with acclamation.—H. W. COOK, Hon. Sec.

PR STON O.S.

Meeting held May 6th. It was decided to have the annual ramble on Sunday, May 23rd, and to go by the 9.30 a.m. train (Central Station) to Longridge; then to walk through the country to Brock. We shall meet at station at 9.15 a.m. After other business Mr. R. Anderton gave the members a fine lantern display on the subject of British and Foreign birds and butterflies. It was highly interesting and instructive, and greatly pleased the members.—B. TAYLOR, Sec.

QUEEN'S PARK (Glasgow) AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A most successful meeting was held on April 20th, in Marie Stuart Hall, Langside-road. The membership of this new club is steadily growing and was well augmented at this meeting. The business was principally concerning the First Feather Show on June 26th, and the Secretary was pleased to be able to report having secured the services of a popular judge. Fanciers are cordially invited to join us. Meeting night, last Friday in each month in above-named hall.—GEO. N. THOMSON, Joint Sec. and Treas.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (OPEN DERBY) O.A.

The time allowed, as per our rules, to Scotch Fancy and Belgian breeders who desire to become members of the above association is rapidly drawing to a close, only three weeks or so remaining. On April 23rd last were sent out over four hundred notices to those who had beforehand received a copy of membership ticket, requesting their decision, etc. Up to the present the replies have been very gratifying, which augurs well for success. Still, there are nearly this same number of tickets yet in the hands of fanciers to be accounted for, and I would request them to kindly give the matter their urgent consideration, and let me have their reply before the expiry of the time allowed (May 31st). On behalf of the executive I extend all a cordial invitation to join us. It is in your own interests as breeders of these birds that you should accord support to such an association as ours, which caters so well for them, and which does everything it can to create greater interest in the breeding of them. Having yet a few of the rules on hand, if any fancier desires to have a copy for examination with view to membership, I shall be glad to forward one. Our next meeting, on the 29th inst., is timed for 6.30 p.m. instead of 8 p.m., as usual. This is done with the desire to give country members an opportunity to be present, and as the election of judges takes place, with other important business, it is to be hoped they will attend. We will further announce this meeting in your issue of 22nd inst., also publish full "list of members' names" for season 1909, on June 19th. Now, fellow fanciers, I make a final appeal to you to rally round us as members, and give me the great pleasure of reporting at our May meeting that we have surpassed our last year's total of 178.—J. R. MEIKLE, Hon. Sec., 51, Lothian-road, Edinburgh.

YORKS. COUNTY B.B. AND M.C.

Second annual meeting was held on May 8th, and judging by the names sent in for enrolment as members, we are anticipating a most successful show season. The following gentlemen were put on the list of members: Messrs. J. Netherwood (Wakefield), J. Nicholson (York), J. Wilson (Malton), J. Bousfield (Knaresboro'), A. Spencer (Doncaster), exhibiting members; and Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield), to honorary membership. The report and balance sheet presented were considered highly satisfactory, as the deficit of 25s. left over from last account has been wiped out, and all liabilities paid; we now start this season with a small balance in hand. The officers for ensuing year were then elected: Mr. D. Duncan, Junr. (Harrogate), president; vice-presidents, Messrs. W. A. Cowgill (Bradford), T. H. inman (Bradford), J. Isherwood (Wakefield), T. Boyle (York); Messrs. S. Dean, T. Wood, C. Ross, P. Jowett, J. Lane, P. Mason (all Bradford), B. H. Wilson (Bramley), J. Nicholson (York), F. Myers (Yeadon), J. Bescoby (Doncaster), J. Wilson (Malton), S. Helliwell (Halifax), J. Bousfield (Knaresboro'), H. Stake (Brighouse), J. Thomas (Otley), J. S. Clarkson (Halifax), H. Spinner (Doncaster), J. Netherwood (Wakefield), were elected members of committee. W. Riley Myers, 23, Ingleby Place, Bradford, was again appointed secretary; auditors, Messrs. S. Dean and R. Halliday (Windhill). Mr. T. Wood proposed and Mr. Isherwood seconded that "the secretary be instructed to get quotations for rules, printed in book form, with names of members inserted, and report same to next meeting of committee. The rules were then gone into and slightly altered in one respect, viz., "that societies wishing to obtain clubs' patronage to make a minimum of five classes for British birds and their Hybrids." Will secretaries kindly make application for same?—W. RILEY MYERS, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held at "Crown Hotel," Station-street, on May 5th, Mr. Broadhurst in the chair. Messrs. Derry, Steventon, Churchill, Bass, and Woodcock were elected to membership. It was decided that the annual members' nest feather show be held July 17th, with Mr. W. C. Wells (Erdington) as judge. Several alterations of previous schedules were made, and three extra novice classes and a Border Fancy class added. Special prizes were promised by Messrs. Broadhurst, Harvey, and Cowley. At the request of the chairman, the secretary outlined a proposal to hold the next annual open show at the Masonic Hall, New-street, and stated that he had been offered the use of the hall on favourable terms, considering the central position, being only a few yards from the Town Hall and Council House, and within two minutes' walk of the L. and N.W. and Midland Railway stations, and five minutes from the G.W. Railway station. He also said he had received promises amounting to six guineas towards a guarantee fund, payable in the event of loss on the show, and hoped to increase same to ten guineas before the next meeting. It was decided to have a special meeting called to settle the matter, the secretary to "postcard" each member.—J. H. DE MAILLET, Hon. Sec.

Under the White Rose.

THE Y.C.C. annual general meeting is to be held to-day (Saturday) at the Market Tavern, Bradford, and much business of an important character is to be put forward. Next season's competitions, prizes, etc., will be under consideration, and members will do well to attend.

YORKSHIRE County B.B. and M.C. held their annual general meeting on Saturday last, at headquarters, Market Tavern, Bradford, the attendance being rather small, the good weather having probably something to do with this. Most British enthusiasts would very likely be out in the country, the day was so splendid. The first item of interest was the balance-sheet of the year's working, and it is a pleasure to note that last year's deficit has been wiped off, so that next season the prospects will be full of promise and hope. Mr. D. Duncan, jun., of Harrogate, was elected president for next term, and being an exceptionally good worker, the club will be likely to benefit to a great extent. Mr. W. R. Myers is again to be secretary and treasurer, and these two, with a strong committee, composed of six residents within the Bradford district and twelve outside this area, should make things "hum." So, hurry up! fanciers; and support your club in a manner worthy of your varieties.

THE provision of novice classes by the C.M.Y.C.C. seems likely to boon the club to some considerable extent. A large number of new members will be proposed at the next meeting, one fancier having no less than 12 (all novices) to put forward. It is thought the number of members will increase by at least 50 per cent. by this new move.

GREEN-MARKED breeders are now moving a little in regard to the formation of a club, and are looking forward to the meeting to put things in order. At Great Horton First Feather Show (which by the way is the only open summer show to be held), this variety is well catered for, two classes for uneven marks and one for foul marks being provided. Two also are provided for cinnamon marks, but I am sorry to note that the Norwich have been neglected. There is no doubt a couple of classes would have filled well, a large number of novices now taking up this variety.

THROUGH this column I should like to make a suggestion to the Y.C.B.B. and M.C., and that is, that the club arrange a meeting at some place outside Bradford, say, Otley, or some such place, invite fanciers through the Press, or per post, split up into parties for rambles, then meet at some good place for tea, and afterwards have a meeting to compare notes and observations; somewhat after the style of naturalist societies. This, I think, would be of great interest, and would do a little to increase the membership of the club.

"STRAIGHT-'UN."

Singing Contests.

WEST HERRINGTON.

Open Linnet singing contest, held at "Shoulder of Mutton," on May 8th, when 36 birds competed for 10s., given towards all entries by Mr. R. Fawcett. There was a very good attendance and some excellent singing was heard. Results: 1, Hays; 2, 3, Welsh. Judge, Mr. G. Green. Timekeeper, Mr. M. Summerill. Book-keeper, Mr. J. Fogin.—LINTIE.

LEEDS.

Usual contest, held at King's Head, Shannon Street, May 8th, when 27 birds sang. 1, Lister; 2, 3, Crowther. Judges, Messrs. Summers, Naylor, and Jennings. Also, on May 9th, when 30 birds faced judges, Messrs. Inson, Melia, and Cooper. 1, Stead; 2, 4, Crowther; 3, Lister.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

Usual Linnet contest held May 2nd, when 19 birds sang. 1, Walker; 2 and 3, divided between Wood and Binns. Judges, Messrs. Hayes and Towers; timekeeper, Mr. Dean. Contest on May 9th, when 40 birds sang. 1, Soloman; 2 and 3, divided between Hardcastle and Chippindale; 4, Johnson. Judges, Messrs. Nevins and Towers.—W. DEAN, Sec.

Usual weekly contest for quality singing held May 9th, at Skinner's Arms, Buslingthorpe-lane, when 14 birds sang. 1, Turner; 2, Sellers; 3, Fenwick. Judges, Messrs. Naylor and Symons.—WALTER NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

Week-end contest for Linnets well patronised by a good entry of birds at the Plasterers' Arms, Skinner-lane. Mr. A. Kendall gave three excellent prizes, and the winner, owned by Mr. T. Johnson, sang a grand round. After contest, Mr. C. Lorriman delighted the company with a grand concertina solo. 1st, Johnson; 2nd, Lorriman; 3rd, Howlett. Judges, Messrs. Crane, Clarke, and Towers. Remember grand contest on Whit-Tuesday. See advertisement in CAGE BIRDS next week.—T. CRANE.

SHEFFIELD.

Result of usual weekly contest held at Newmarket Hotel, Sheaf-street: 1st, Palfreyman, 78 secs.; 2nd, Spotswood, 67 secs.; 3rd, Stokes, 62 secs. We have a big annual contest on Whit-Tuesday, when we sing for £20. Members only can compete.—H. FENN, Sec.

LEIGH.

Linnet singing contest held at "Railway Tavern" on May 8th, when Mr. J. Jackson gave 10s. to an entrance of 1s. a bird, which was made up into five prizes. Result: 1st and 3rd, Mather, 118 secs. and 71 secs.; 2nd, Green, 73 secs.; 4th, Jones, 69 secs.; 5th, Plank Lane Bill, 68 secs. Judges, Messrs. Ellison and Poole; timekeeper, Mr. Milligan. Twenty-three birds sang. Don't forget T. Jump's benefit match, May 15th, Millstone, Wigan. We have picked Mr. Fenn's challenge up, and are only waiting for a date; we are singing four Sheffield birds against four Leigh birds for 10s. a bird, in their own style.—J. W. JONES.

In the Courts.

Giving a Wrong Name.

Joseph Hunt, Wolsey Street, Leicester, was summoned on May 5th, for committing an offence under the Wild Birds Act, 1880, on April 15th, and refusing to give his real name and place of abode, and also with having in his possession certain wild birds not included in the schedule annexed to the Wild Birds Protection Act, namely, two Brown Linnets, recently taken.

Defendant admitted having the birds, but said he had got a cold, and when he gave his name the policeman could not understand him. —P.C. Stafford said he was on duty near Blackbird Lane when he saw defendant with two other men in a field, and on going towards them they all ran away. Defendant, however, returned to fetch his Linnets, which were in cages. Witness asked him to give his name and address, but for some time he refused. Eventually he said his name was Joseph Jones, which was wrong. Witness took him to Sanvey Gate Police Station, and there found out defendant's proper name.—Hunt stated one of the two "men" was aged nine years. He had read the list attached to the Act, but could not find "Brown Linnet."

The Bench said defendant was not "allowed" to take the birds. Really the offence committed by defendant was in not giving his name and address. He would be fined 5s., and in the second offence the case would be dismissed on payment of costs.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given each week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

*The Ways of Our Kingfisher.

My father keeps a lot of birds, among which was a little Kingfisher. My father would bring it downstairs for us to watch. He would place a bowl of water with a few small fish, in the bottom of the cage and it would dive and catch them and beat them on its perch till it killed them. It would swallow them head first, and vomit back the bones in pellets. One thing we found was that it had two claws in front two behind.—Sent by Cyril Harrison (age 14), 17, Regent Street, Hebden Bridge.

*A Song of the Sparrow.

I'm only a little Sparrow,
A bird of low degree;
My life is of little value,
But the dear Lord cares for me.

He gives me a coat of feathers—
It is very plain I know,
Without a speck of crimson,
For it was not made for show.

But it keeps me warm in winter,
And it shields me from the rain;
Were it fringed with gold and purple,
Perhaps it would make me vain.

Sent by Arthur Richardson (age 14), Pollington, near Snaith, S.O., Yorkshire.

The Starling's Revenge.

Many years ago a gentleman kept a Starling named Boh. Bob's greatest enemy was the cat. She was a stout, able-bodied animal, and between them there were frequently dreadful battles; but Boh was generally victorious because of his malicious propensity to fly on to her back, grip fast hold of her neck, and peck at her ears. Their mutual bitterness was extraordinary. The cat would at any time desert its ample dinner for the sake of purloining the morsel given to the Starling, an injury which the latter had a peculiar way of revenging. As sure as ever the cats'-meat man made his appearance at the area railings and nobody but the cat and the Starling were in the kitchen, the latter would hide himself behind the window curtain and hawl out "Not to-day," with so excellent an imitation of the maid's voice that over and over again the meat man has replied: "Thanky mum," and trotted off leaving puss dinnerless.—Sent by Harry Smith, 268, Long Lane, Bermondsey, London, S.E.

YORK.

Usual weekly Linnet singing contest held at Crown Inn, North-street, when upwards of 20 birds competed. Result: 1st, Bean; 2nd, Stothard; 3rd, Moore; 4th, Lee. Judge, Mr. Perry. Timekeeper Mr. Cooper.—J. W. SMITH, Hon. Sec.

Usual weekly Linnet singing contest held at Bricklayer's Arms, Palmer-lane, Hungate, on May 1st, when 20 birds faced the judge (Mr. Paver). Result: 1, Oldroyd; 2, Huntley; 3, Barnard; 4, Mangham; 5, Buckle. Timekeeper, Mr. J. Limbert, sen. On May 8th 22 birds faced the judge (Mr. Paver). Result: 1, Mangham; 2, Oldroyd; 3, Emerson; 4, Dorando; 5, Laverick. Timekeeper, Mr. Limbert, sen.—WM. EMPSON.

HULL.

Usual week-end contest held at headquarters, North Bridge Hotel; 21 birds entered. Some good singing was heard all round. Mr. F. Allen (Human Linnet) officiated as timekeeper and judge. 1st, White; 2nd and 3rd, Dearlove; 4th, Broadhent; 5th, Davinson; 6th, Scarfe. Mr. F. Allen is retiring from contest judging for a good many months.—H. MOORE, Hon. Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Blackburn Linnet Quality Singing Club.—Usual contest, held at Old Red Lion, Snig Brook, where 14 birds were entered. The members and company were entertained to some extraordinary good singing. Results: 1, 2, Topping; 3, Rostron. Judges, Messrs. James and Nelson; timekeeper, Mr. T. Slater. After the contest we had some excellent singing.—G. ROSTRON and T. SLATER, Secs.

Twitterings.

I have now eighteen young birds from two pairs, writes Mr. F. S. W. Bates (New Southgate).

We hear that Mr. F. Collins (Camborne) is engaged to judge the First Feather Show at Falmouth, in July.

I heard the Cuckoo on May 5th, at Lawnswood, Otley Road, Leeds, writes Mr. F. W. Carver (Leeds). I thought it early considering the weather.

We hear that Mr. T. W. Richards, of Narberth, has purchased that 1909 Crystal Palace winning British Goldfinch which was exhibited by Mr. C. Prior.

Kindly note my change of address from No. 16 to No. 45 King Street, Alnwick, writes Mr. W. A. Broadley, hon. secretary of the Alnwick and District C.B.S.

Mr. T. Heath will judge the cage birds at the Dover Show on November 3rd and 4th, write Messrs. Abbott and Austen, hon. secretaries, Dover and Dis. F.F.S.

Messrs. Hunt and Davis, of Blackwood, Mon., write expressing the satisfaction they have received from the use of "Bronchorine" in cases of asthma among their birds.

Our First Feather Show will he held July 1st, writes Mr. J. W. Lowes, secretary of the Stockton-on-Tees and Dis. C.B.S., when Mr. Marwood (Thornaby), will judge.

We have appointed Mr. Strachan (Aberdeen), to judge at our annual show, to be held on December 11th, writes Mr. Wm. Cumming, secretary of the Forres and Northern O.A.

Mr. J. Hodder (Old Street, E.C.), asks us to request the sender of a letter from Runcorn to kindy communicate with him again, as his missive has unfortunately been mislaid or lost.

A fine specimen of the Hoopoe, a bird which is a rather rare visitor to Ireland, was observed on May 7th, near Trabolgan. Several years ago one was shot in Trabolgan, the property of Lord Fermoy.

Our little lad's death has left some sore hearts behind him, writes Mr. John Rukin (Rawtenstall). About 40 of his companions belonging to the Boys' Brigade attented to do him honour at the funeral.

All applications for the Northern B.B.M. and F.B. Club's patronage, writes Mr. J. Bertram, the secretary, must be made as early as possible (radius, Northumberland, Durham, Westmorland, and Cumberland).

A ramble will take place through Hanbury on Saturday, May 15th, when the ramblers will meet at the station at 2.10 prompt, write Messrs Elliott and Wood, hon. secretaries, of the Burton-on-Trent C.B.S.

Last week, says the "Morpeth Herald," Mr. A. Foster's large clock in Bridge Street, Morpeth, stopped, and could not be made to go. It has since been discovered that a pair of Sparrows had built their nest inside the works.

Readers in need of a really reliable springnet trap, up-to-date in every detail, and spoken highly of by practical catchers, should note the trap advertised in our columns by Mr. W. Cornwall, 339, Gladstone Street, Peterborough.

I did not know how to breed a bird before taking in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. A. Brown (Wood Green, London, N.). At the present time I have 30 young birds doing well, and 40 eggs due to hatch out from the first round.

Kindly note that, according to Mr. W. Vardy's wish, we have relieved him from the duties of judging at our open show on November 13th, writes Mr. A. Flint, joint secretary of the Tideswell C.B.I.S. Mr. J. Trengove has been elected in his stead.

We have elected Mr. T. Dixon, of Bedlington, to judge at our Members' First Feather Show on June 12th, writes Mr. Wm. Elliott, secretary, West Stanley and Dis. C.B.S. Our membership is increasing rapidly, and breeders are kept very busy just now.

My Bullfinch, writes Mr. J. H. Smith (Swindon), almost exactly imitates a fine cock Thrush which the people living opposite my house have. He was caught wild this past winter, and began singing about three weeks after I had him. Is this not rather unusual?

Kindly note, writes Mr. P. H. Oakes, late hon. secretary of the Ludlow C.B.S., that Mr. J. Bessell, 5, High Street, Ludlow, Salop, has undertaken the office of secretary to the society, with myself as assistant secretary. All future correspondence must therefore be addressed to him.

I commenced taking CAGE BIRDS with your last Christmas number, and have compared it with several issues of your contemporary, but early decided which was the better paper for fanciers. The superb coloured plates which accompany the paper occasionally are well worth preserving.—W. BOYDELL (Euxton).

As a proof of the circulation of your valuable paper, you will see from the enclosed letter that I am sending my "Secure" breeding husks for Budgerigars to India, writes Mr. T. Harper (Wolverhampton). Through the instrumentality of CAGE BIRDS I have also sent husks to New York, Spain, Holland, France, and other countries.

The Lancaster Primrose C.B.A. has definitely decided to hold an open show this year on a much larger scale than ever before, November 19th and 20th being the dates selected. The show will be held under C.B.U. rules. One of the best halls in the town has been taken for the occasion, well lighted and heated, and close to both stations, L.N.W. and Midland. Liberal prize money has been provided, and an expensive electro silver tea and coffee service, value £4 10s., has been purchased, which will be awarded for points. Mr. Wm. Mundell (Bradford), will be judge.—J. H. NAYLER. hon. sec.

The International Border Contest will be held at Altrincham, Cheshire, this year, on December 3rd and 4th, writes Mr. Tom Harrison, hon. secretary, Altrincham C.B.S. The society has engaged a magnificent hall, electric lighted, free from draughts, and nicely heated, and one minute's walk from station.

At our last open show, writes Mr. W. Dale, hon. secretary, Swindon and Dis. C.B.A., we had a loss of over £20. With the aid of a draw we have now reduced our deficit to about £5. This state of affairs seems to frighten our members; at any rate, our meetings are very poorly attended. I have recently been made secretary, and should like to see some of this apathy (or fear) removed.

We have engaged Messrs. W. A. Cowgill and J. Wilkinson (of Messrs. Wilkinson and Danby), writes Mr. E. Woodhead, of the Hartlepools C.B.S., to judge the Canaries and the British and foreign birds respectively at our show on October 30th next. As this is one of the few instances in which Mr. Wilkinson can be prevailed upon to adjudicate, we feel sure all his friends—and they are very numerous—will give him a stiff morning's task.

We are not having much luck in the way of breeding around here, writes Mr. W. Payne (Cannock). The winds being so cold and the weather so frosty, the young birds are dying off, and some fanciers have had clear eggs. I have been a constant reader of your valuable journal, CAGE BIRDS, for over three years, and I find it full of good information.

For proof of Sandiford's Royal Red feed see last week's Twitterings, where I give you gentlemen's orders last season. These gentlemen were claimed by another vendor as having used his because they competed for his specials, while we were never asked to give any. Then judge for yourselves how much colour-feed they used of anyone else's. You will find every leading exhibitor orders from 20 to 60lbs. each. See advertisement columns.—(ADVT.)

Mr. Geo. Walker, (Brechin).

The members of Brechin C.B.S., writes Mr. John M. Finlayson, the assistant secretary, have to mourn the loss by death of their energetic secretary, Mr. George Walker, who died on April 24th, at a comparatively early age. His cheery presence is sadly missed, and the sympathy of all "birdie" folks will, I am sure, be extended to his widow and son in their sad bereavement.

At the general meeting of the Six Bells and Dis. F.S., held at Cwm Hotel, on May 3rd, writes Mr. W. J. Edwards, secretary, the annual show was fixed for December 8th. Several new members enrolled. The membership is open to a radius of five miles, and I shall be pleased to receive the names of intending members for nomination, also of any fanciers wishing to guarantee classes or give specials. My address is 5, Upper Griffin Street, Six Bells, Abertillery.

Owing to the enormous volume of business which has come their way through fanciers' appreciation of their goods, Messrs. Fox Bros. have had to remove from Ludgate Hill to more commodious premises at Granville House, Arundel Street, Strand, London, W.C. The firm are putting on the market a colour-food ready for use (finest quality pepper combined with their noted egg and biscuit), and for which they anticipate a heavy demand; readers should not fail to obtain a sample tin.

The Royal Cornwall Show, on June 9th and 10th, this year is to be honoured for the first time in its history by a visit of their Royal Highnesses, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and a record attendance is expected. Although St. Columb is not itself a very large town, it is the centre of a large district and is very convenient. From the exhibition grounds a charming view of the surrounding country is obtained, and during the show the full band of the Royal Marines will discourse sweet music. Exhibitors who have not received a schedule should write without delay.—SYDNEY H. TAMBLYN, hon. secretary.

At the monthly meeting of the Exeter and Devon P.P. and C.B.S., held at the Guildhall on May 6th, Mr. Mark S. Adams, resigned from the position of joint hon. secretary after several years, owing to pressure of business. Those present spoke in high terms and appreciation of the work he had done for the society during the time he had been connected with it. Mr. Adams is leaving his present address, 9, Cleveland Street, St. Thomas, at the end of the month, after which it will be Buddle Cottage, St. Thomas. The annual show will be held in the lower market, Fore Street, on October 13th, under C.B.U. rules. Mr. Payne (Gloucester), will judge.

The Leyton and Dis. C.B.A. cordially invite fanciers to join in their ramble through Epping Forest on May 22nd, writes Mr. B. F. Forse, hon. secretary. Our popular vice-president, Mr. J. S. Clarke, will act as guide. A train leaves Liverpool Street at 1.42 p.m., calling at Stratford 1.57, Leyton 2.1, Leytonstone 2.5, Snaresbrook 2.9, George Lane 2.11, Woodford 2.16, Buckhurst Hill 2.20, arriving at Loughton 2.23. There is also a fast train from Liverpool Street at 2, first stop Leytonstone 2.14, and all stations thence to Loughton, arriving at 2.32. Another train leaves Fenchurch Street at 2, calling at Stratford 2.17. Leyton 2.20, Leytonstone 2.24, Snaresbrook 2.27, George Lane 2.30, Woodford 2.34, arriving Loughton 2.41. The party will assemble outside Loughton Station, and a start will be made immediately after the arrival of the train timed for 2.41. Arrangements will be made for a substantial tea at the "Owl." Will fanciers who join kindly notify me a few days previous?

I had over thirty replies to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS from all parts of the country, writes Mr. A. Scott (King's Lynn), which shows how much your popular paper is read.

I sold my birds by wire, writes Mr. A. L. Keith-Murray (Bideford), by 2 p.m. on the Friday previous to the date of the issue of CAGE BIRDS in which my advertisement appeared. I have only one bird left. Many postal orders had to be returned.

I had twenty-eight applications for my Norwich cock Canary, writes Mr. J. Gibson (Kendal). It was quite impossible for me to reply to all who did not send stamps. I take this opportunity of thanking them. I received eight replies on the Saturday morning.

Kindly thank all who have written me in reply to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. G. W. Saunders (Sutton). I had so many applicants that I could only reply to those who enclosed stamps and to several others; I was unable to reply to all.

At the Jubilee Palace Show over 300 awards were won by birds moulted solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. The list includes Mr. Godley's champion Norwich and Cinnamons, Mr. Hodder's noted Norwich winning Ramsden's teapot in Southern Norwich competition. In the Yorkshire section, Messrs. Bailey and Swanger, Amblers, Shackleton, Hartley, Halliday, Ogden Bros., Rennie, Greaves, Crisp, etc., secured most of the prizes, and every bird was colour-fed solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. Every first, second, and third prize in the Lizard classes went to birds colour-fed solely on Ramsden's Pure Pepper. This is not advertising "bluff," but actual truth. In most cases the pepper was supplied direct, and in every case the exhibitor had to write "R.P." against his entries to denote that the birds had been colour-fed solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. Reference to the show catalogue will prove the truth of this statement. Ramsden's Pure Peppers are unequalled for purity and richness of colour. This season's Tasteless is of marvellous colour, and the Hot is richer in colour than ever, being a blend of carefully selected Spanish and Natal capsicums. When you ask for Ramsden's Peppers, see you get them. If the dealer offers you something "just as good," don't have it. Insist on having Ramsden's, the best the world produces, and fully guaranteed. Prices: Tasteless, 2s. lb.; 5-lb. canisters, 7s. 6d.; 22lbs., 30s. Hot, 3s. lb., 5lbs. 12s. 6d.—J. W. Ramsden, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London, S.W.—(ADVT.)

Northern Yorkshire C.C.

I shall be glad to receive applications for patronage from secretaries of shows in the four northern counties. For championship competition we require five classes, and for novice competition two classes. At each show we give silver medals; also specials for points over the total shows. The average number of entries at the shows receiving our patronage last year was 12 per class in champion classes, and 19 per class in novice classes.—T. C. CRAWHALL, hon. secretary, 121, St. George's Terrace, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

A Generous Offer to Readers.

Every reader should note the splendid offer made on the back page this week by Messrs. Spratts Patent, Ltd., 24, Fenchurch Street, London, E.C. This world-renowned firm will send post free a box of their famous food specialities for cage-birds, and an up-to-date book on breeding and keeping Canaries and British and Foreign birds, to all readers sending their names and addresses to them on a postcard, and mentioning CAGE BIRDS when writing. Take advantage of Messrs. Spratts' generosity at once; it will cost you but a halfpenny.

HOSPITAL EGG WEEK.

An Appeal to Owners of Laying Fowls.

A few weeks ago we ventured to place before our readers particulars of a scheme being undertaken by our contemporary, "The Poultry World," and many readers of CAGE BIRDS who kept fowls wrote expressing their appreciation of the idea and promising it support. We would remind them that next week,

MAY 17 to 22 IS HOSPITAL EGG WEEK, when boxes containing not less than one dozen new-laid eggs should be sent in, carefully packed and carriage paid, addressed to

F. CARL,
Managing Director "Poultry World," 154, Fleet Street,
London, E.C.

Of course, any number of dozens (or eggs over a dozen) may be sent; we leave that to your generosity. Write "Hospital Eggs" plainly on all packages. These will be distributed unopened among the various metropolitan hospitals, the authorities of which are co-operating in carrying out the scheme, so that any letters concerning the packages should be sent separately.

Remember that every dozen eggs will help, and that next week, May 17 to 22, is THE week.

Health of the Hen.

It is naturally of the utmost importanco that tho health of sitting hens should be kept as perfect as possible. At this time somo hens are peculiarly liable to atmospheric changes, and seem to contract colds and coughs. Prevention is the best safeguard against this. Draughts should bo rigorously excluded, and when a serious drop in temperature occurs, a pinch of hemp may be added to the diet for a day or two, and discretion used in airing the room. Although medicines are not to be recommended for sitting hens, a few drops of glycerine and a drop or two of tincture of tolu might be added to the water if there appear any signs of serious cold or wheezing.

Panting or gasping is often seen, especially in warm weather, in sitting hens, and is often simply due to an overheated condition, and in some cases to hens being too fat. Such appearances are nothing to worry over, and the hens usually come round alright as soon as the weather gets cooler or the young are hatched. A small pinch of Epsom salts in the water for a day or two would also remove the trouble, which is more apparent than real. A nervous hen will frequently sit gasping—the very picture of distress—as long as anyone stands by the cage looking at her. But a moment lator, when she is left alone, she is quite alright again, as is seen on taking a quiet glance at her when she is unaware of being observed. The remedy in such a case is, or should be, obvious to everybody—leave her severely alone. Constipation is a common thing, dne to the hen's inactivity, but if the diet is simplified as indicated, it is no serious matter. If it become serious, then a pinch of Epsom salts is the best remedy, but undue loosenoss must not be allowed to set up.

If the adoption of each or all of the schemes mentioned does not prevent a hen leaving hor nest, the writer fears there is no more to be done than in the other cases mentioned, and no time should be lost in looking around and finding a suitable pair of foster parents to take over the care of the eggs and future chicks.

The Influence of the Cock.

Another cause of hens forsaking the nest is strikingly illustrative of the varying dispositions of individual hens. This is the removal of the cock after the full clutch of eggs has been laid. In most cases the hen will pay no heed whatever to the absence of her mate if he is removed when she has sat for one or two days after laying the last egg, but there are still many whimsical hens who show their resentment at such treatment by promptly leaving the nest when the cock is removed, and absolutely refusing to be coaxed or compelled into returning to it. It is, therefore, necessary, when one desires to remove the cock for any purpose whilst the hen is sitting, to let her get sottled down to her task, and sitting steadily and closely before making the separation, and then keeping a sharp look-out for a few hours on that hen. If she leaves the nest in an hour or so, and does not appear to be inclined to return, the probability is that she will not as long as the cock is away. Many of them will leave the nest in a few minutes; others may sit uneasily, frequontly merely standing over the eggs, and constantly calling to the cock for an hour or two before finally leaving the nest. But when they do leave it, their whole boaring will show that so far as they are concerned, family cares may "go hang" if it is to be an unfair division of labour. In such cases the cock should be returned at once, and the hen will as a rule just as promptly return to the nest and resume her dities as she relinquished them. But one must act promptly, at any rate within two or three hours the cock should be returned, or there will be great risk of the eggs being spoilt by cold.

It will be gathored from this that the averago working man who has to be absent from home many hours at a stretch, should guard against removing cocks from sitting hens when about to loave home, unless they are perfectly satisfied about the character of the hens, or have some reliablo person to entrust with the duty of watching the hen and returning the cock if necessary.

A Too-vigorous Male.

Perhaps one of the most disappointing unions a novice can make is that of mating an excessively lusty cock bird with a hen which obstinately refuses to sit when the cock is removed. It is an unhappy union all round, and, unfortunately, one which anyone is apt to fall into, as one cannot tell how any particular bird will behave in the breeding cage until it has been proved. With such a cock it is almost impossiblo for a hen, unless she is herself a "bit of a tartar" and bent on doing her duty, to sit out her time. The cock, after a few days of inactivity, is soized with the desire to begin all over again, and harries the hen unmercifully, not infrequently dragging her bodily out of the nest at short intervals, so that the eggs are lucky if they do not como to grief in the first few days after his ardour returns. Of course, the best and proper course is to remove him and leavo the hen to finish the task herself, but if she now leaves the nest and refuses to sit without his being in the cage, then there is going to be trouble one way or another. If tho cock is kept away there is scarcely a ghost of a chance of the hon sitting out her time, so that the loss of the eggs may be regarded as a dead "cert"; on the other hand, if the cock is returned, the chances of tho eggs escaping destruction until hatched, or of the young being reared afterwards, are quite infinitesimal.

Buff Scotch Fancy Hen.
Third Prize at the Crystal Palace "Jubilee" Show for Mr. E. Todd (Inverness).

Foster-Parents.

If the whole choice rested between these two birds, one would naturally take the infinitesimal chance, and return the cock, in which case the diet of the pair should be limited to the simplest fare, and besides giving a little cooling green food daily, add a pinch of Epsom salts to the drinking water every few days. But in such a case, if a larger choice is to be obtained, and tho birds are good ones, a pair of fostor parents should be found and the eggs of the good birds transferred to the common foeders. In lieu of this, the eggs should be transferred to the foster parents, and this pair of birds allowed to bogin nesting again after a few days' rest. In a good number of cases this untimely vigour of the cock is the outcome of a too generous diet, and of not sufficiently lowering the supply of rich and stimulating foods after tho eggs are laid. This, however, is a subject that has already been fully dealt with.

Testing and "Helping" Eggs.

Many old hands make a point of testing eggs when the hens have been sitting a while—say, six or eight days. The practice, however, is of littlo real valuo, save to those who wish to get all they can out of the birds, and then by discarding clear eggs and giving every hen a full clutch to sit upon, it often happens that a hen or two will be left without any oggs at all, and these are left to make a fresh start. The plan is not one to be commended to the novice, and indirectly it works against one's interest in another direction, for by keeping evory hen fully employed in this way tho chances of a hen being available for a feeder for a good brood of promising youngster which may be forsaken, are very considerably reduced, whereas if every hen had been left with her first complemont of eggs to sit out the time, and, may bo, hatch out one or two young, those hens might have been very usefully employed in bringing up broods of more valuable stock that required such assistance. Therefore, taking things all round, the best advice that can bo given the novice is to let any curiosity in knowing the possible number of full eggs to go ungratified.

"Helping" the eggs at hatching time is another thing which the novice should rigorously avoid, save and except the simple process of immersing them in warm water if they do not show signs of hatching out on the fourteenth day. This may be anticipated in warm weather by immersing them for a few moments on the thirteenth day, and again early in the morning of the fourteenth. But as far as any oporative interference is concerned, the novice had better fight shy of it, and leave Nature to take her own course. This kind of work is probably almost, if not quite, confined to the young beginner. It is doubtful if any really expert and practical hand ever dreams of such a thing as helping to release chicks from the shell.

THROUGH A BIRDROOM WINDOW.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

They Smile at the Budget.

My Sacred Kingfishers were what would be described by teetotal people as moderate drinkers. In fact, I don't think they can like water. My soft-food probably caused a certain amount of thirst, and compelled them to imbibe in moderation; Prowinowski says: "It is rather a misnomer to call the bird a Kingfisher, since it not only does not plunge into the water to capture fish, but it is even found in dry and sandy places where it cannot obtain water, from which it would appear that it can exist without drinking."

The Sacred Kingfishers throw up pellets of undigested food, much after the manner of Owls and kindred species. At first I did not know this, and when I saw one of the birds writhing its neck about in a most convulsive way, I thought it was going to have a fit and die straight away. I was therefore greatly relieved when it merely threw up a dry pellet, and then looked as if nothing had happened.

They are almost mute, but if hungry or discontented make a querulous sort of note. They can perch perfectly, but are very awkward on the ground, proceeding by a series of jumps with the feet close together, like boys in a sack race. In flight they are swift and rapid as Swallows, and go straight ahead just like our own native Kingfishers. In appearance they are lovely little creatures.

A Pair of Sparkling Eyes.

The upper part of the head is a sort of greenish turquoise blue, iridescent in the light; the back is a beautiful greenish blue, while the tail itself is what I should call azure; the upper part of the throat or bib is snowy white in the male, but much more dingy in the female; the breast and sides are a beautiful rufous brown in the cock, but much duller in the hen. There is a dark line of black running from the back across the cheek to the back of the head, in a line with the eye. The eyes themselves are very large and what we should call in a girl we were fond of—melting. The beak is very large for the size of the bird, and is curiously pointed upwards.

All the time I had my birds they were always in the most perfect plumage. If they go the least bit ruffled there is something wrong with their internal arrangements. Increase the live food at once and they will soon grow sleek and tight once more. In a large aviary by themselves, I feel sure they would breed. I should provide them with an ordinary Parrakeet nesting box, with some decayed wood in the bottom.

I believe I have read somewhere that a hen did actually lay an egg in England, and that it was white and very round. Gould says that in a state of nature they lay four or five eggs, and that they nest in the gum trees. I kept mine in a perfectly cold room all through a most severe spring, when it was pain and grief for a human being to enter, and they never seemed to feel it a bit. I therefore think I am justified in saying that they are not delicate.

The Temptation and Fall.

Being very poor, I was one day tempted to sell. A rich neighbour came, saw them, coveted, and offered me a big price, and like Adam, I succumbed to temptation. I have been sorry even since, as no doubt Adam was, for it is years and years since I have heard of any Sacred Kingfishers in the market till last year, when the Australian Bushmen had a single bird for sale.

If ever the luck comes to any of my readers to secure a pair of Sacred Kingfishers, let them be sure to seize it. Such chances only come once in a life time. Only remember that you must feed them right. As Lamb said of a mild and dulcet substance that most appealed to his palate, the mealworms will ever have a fair sepulchre in the grateful stomach of that judicious bird Epicure, Halcyon Sacra.

I felt very miserable the morning my Kingfishers went away, though I knew that the man who had bought them had a bottomless purse, and that they would devour mealworms to their heart's content; and that I could sometimes go and see them free of cost; but who likes to see another enjoying your choicest treasures? It isn't human nature to do so. A pair of Brown's Parrakeets, however, did much to console me. You will remember the old French proverb:—"Quand on n'a pas ca qu'on aime, il faut aimer ce qu'on a.

THE SONG THRUSH AND ITS TREATMENT.

By C. PEARCE.

The Song Thrush (Turdus musicus) is, to my mind, the king of the Thrush family, for the simple reason he is the best songster of them all. If the species is properly fed and well looked after, they will live in confinement for a good number of years. The only objection I have to their being kept in cages is that they commence singing too early in the morning.

How to Hand-rear.

They are one of the easiest species to hand-rear that I know of. My method of hand-rearing is as follows: Take the nest when the young ones are about twelve days old; feed them for the first few days on hard-boiled egg and crushed biscuit, made rather sloppy by the addition of warm water; then, after a few days, add a few ants' eggs and dried flies, gradually making it less sloppy. Continue with this mixture until the young can pick up for themselves. As soon as they leave the nest, get some small mealworms, dip them into some milk one by one and drop them in the young ones' mouths.

When they are able to feed for, and take care of, themselves, I use the following as a stock mixture: To 2lb. of chicken meal add 4ozs. of dried flies and 4ozs. of ants' eggs, also crushed hen's egg shells to act as grit. In addition, I give each one four or five mealworms per day, also any live insects that I can get, such as house-beetles, snails, garden worms, caterpillars, etc. This is an inexpensive feed, but I have always found my birds to thrive and look well upon it; and what is more to the point, they are generally in full robust song. If the birds are required for exhibition purposes, the hens are generally the best, being more evenly spotted than the cock birds.

Cage for the Thrush.

As regards cages, I am fully aware that opinions differ considerably as to the size and shape of suitable cages, also as to treatment of the Thrush. I may here mention that I make it a rule to keep my Thrushes out in the open, both day and night, summer and winter, in sunshine or rain, snowstorm or frost; and I have never yet found a single specimen to suffer any ill-effects from this treatment. Commonsense should convince anyone that it is natural for them to be kept in the open; whereas if you coddle them up by bringing them indoors at night-time, and then out in the cold wind in the daytime, they are more likely to catch cold and to suffer accordingly.

The cages I use are of the box pattern type, about 28in. long, 21in. high, and 11in. deep, with wire fronts only, and with a door in front of each and at the side. Each cage has a sheet of zinc on the top so as to overlap 1½in. at the side, and 2in. in the front; this keeps the rain from making the inside of the cage wet. I also use deal or fine sawdust in the drawboard, which I prefer to sand, because it keeps the birds' feet and tails clean, and also absorbs the moisture from the excreta. Further, I use a picture-frame with glass painted green, which I fix to the front of the cage at night to protect the bird from rain, wind, cats, etc.

I invite fanciers who have not given this interesting and handsome bird a trial, and who have the convenience for keeping it, to do so at once, as I feel convinced they will not regret doing so, the cost being quite nominal.

The Carriage of Birds . . . . by Passenger Train.

By G. WHELLER.

A Lecture delivered before the City and Suburban A.C.B. on March 22nd.

When a Bird Gets Lost or Dies.

The sender having carried out his obligations and the railway company theirs, nothing further happens in connection with the transaction; but in the event of the bird getting lost or dying in transit, trouble starts. It is then the duty of the consignee to advise the sender that he has not received the bird or that its condition when received was not satisfactory. It would then devolve upon the sender to communicate with the sending company, who are the contracting party for loss or damage, and any action in the matter must be against the company with whom the contract for its carriage was made, irrespective of whether or not during transit the bird has travelled over more than one railway.

The mode of procedure should be to ask them to prove the delivery of your bird; failing this to submit your claim for its value. The claim should be sent to the Stationmaster at the station from which you dispatched your bird.

In preparing your claim give nothing more than the statement of facts as required. I am strongly in favour of making the amount such a sum as you have ample proof is the real value of the bird, and this amount should be its market value, as any railway company would be successful in resisting a claim for a "fancy price," and would be in a position to get expert advice on the matter if it came to a case of going to law. Having settled the figure you are asking for in respect of the loss, back it up with such evidence as you can obtain, and stick to your claim, the practice of "putting on a bit" to take off later I don't agree with; railway companies "will pay," or they "will not pay." When they have decided which they are going to do, if it means paying the claim it is then the duty of the agent to try for a reduction, failing which to pay the claim.

Successful Resistance of Claims.

There are many ways in which a railway company may be successful in resisting claims, Chief of these is the fact that the packing has not been done properly by the sender; what appeared when accepted by the company as a carefully packed parcel fit to travel successfully has turned out to be packed with rotten material, with the result that the contents have broken out and got lost. This might not happen in the dispatching of birds, but I think it is a point that should be borne in mind by fanciers and others sending birds by rail to see that the cage or cages are of a substantial make. Then, again, if a couple of birds were put in one cage and during the transit whiled away the time by fighting (with disastrous results), I think the company would claim successfully that this was a "culpable negligence." Or, it may be that the bird dying on the journey could be proved to have been suffering from some complaint prior to its having been handed to the company for transit, the sender perhaps being unaware of the fact. This would enable the railway company to resist a claim. Then, many cases for claiming have been brought about through insufficient address resulting in long delays caused by communicating with sender, etc. The company would be successful in a case of this sort.

Having in view the fact that there might probably be a claim in respect of any bird you are sending by rail, an important point should be made note of, and that is in respect of the company to which you are handing the bird. In the event of that company being in a position to take the bird the whole of the journey themselves, they are able to deal with you in respect of any claim you may have to make, and will sometimes, as a matter of policy, settle a claim where they need not, or where they may have a chance of getting out of it. But where two companies are concerned in the transit, difficulties arise. One company may be prepared to settle the claim for policy reasons, while the other company for the very same reason would refuse; with the result that the public go down between the two stools, and many a claimant has to resort to law over claims of every description where two companies are concerned, mainly because one or the other is holding out on a matter of principle, although it is notorious every company has given way and settled claims as a matter of policy. Thus you will see that wherever it is possible the services of one company only should be sought.

At the Other End of the Journey.

In the event of a bird being refused by the party to whom it has been sent, both sender and consignee would be advised and would be held responsible for any risk or expenses resulting from such refusal. The company may, after a sufficient lapse of time, sell the birds. To obviate any trouble of this nature, the cause should be removed, which invariably is, that the bird is not up to the advertised point. A case may arise where the bird, when delivered, shows signs of having received rough treatment and is refused on this account. Notwithstanding this, the companies would still give notice of liability, and under the circumstances the better way is to accept the bird and sign for same "not examined," because the condition of the bird may be due to no fault of the company. In such circumstances you would be still liable to them for any expense incurred.

There is one little matter which, although it might not come exactly under the category of railway transit, is, nevertheless, closely related, and that is the sending of birds on approval. I think there should be a distinct understanding with the party to whom you are sending your bird, that in the event of his not completing the bargain, he should be called upon to declare the value of the bird on the return journey. Failing his doing that, the liability of the company being only to the value of 5s., your redress with the sender would result in complications. There is a point in connection with the sending of birds to shows and other places of a similar character that should be noted, and that is the fact that they must in all cases be sent "carriage paid," and the indemnity form you sign is applicable to the return journey as well. So that unless you make some arrangement with the show people you may find your bird returning under conditions which debar you from making a claim beyond 5s.

In conclusion, I should like to impress upon all present this evening the importance of seeing that their obligations to the company are carried out, and where possible show you have done so. As a rule there will be very little trouble in bringing home to the railway company the fact that they are solely responsible for any damages that may have arisen, for always bear in mind that the first enquiries made by the companies are whether the sender has left any loophole that will enable them to refuse the claim.

The Discussion.

G. had sent a bird by train, but did not insure it; it got delayed and died within a couple of hours of delivery. The company offer him 5s., which is in accordance with their conditions signed by him at the time. He was of opinion they should have paid for value of bird, remarking that the conditions were only the company's bye-laws.—Answer: The company will only accept birds under their conditions and they must be adhered to; for a matter of 6d. the questioner had lost his right of claiming £2.

What difference is there between an insured bird and one not insured, in so far as the company deals with it in transit?—The insured bird would be signed for by every company's servant through whose hands it passed in transit.

Two birds duly insured had been delayed, and within a short time of arrival both died. Stationmaster advised sender that he had no claim because the birds were actually alive when handed to him. He admits he did not examine them at the station.—In my opinion the Stationmaster is wrong, or it may be bluff. The man should, of course, have examined them or signed "not examined." I think the questioner has a good case and that the company would pay if pressed.

Can the company make a passenger pay for a bird he carries with him under his arms?—Yes, the company undertakes to carry the passenger and his personal luggage only; anything he has with him which is not his own "personal luggage" is "excess luggage."

Were you bound to accept the company's conditions of carriage?—Yes, because the company are not common carriers and accept goods only on the conditions they lay down.

A questioner doubted the right of the company to examine the bird before accepting, and pointed out the trouble caused.—It should be obvious that the railway companies want to protect themselves from frauds, and they are quite right. Fortunately, it is not exacted in all cases. I should presume the Stationmaster had met trouble in some previous case for not doing so.

After the lecture, Mr. Wheller remarked that the points that struck him most in the questions asked were that bird fanciers were very similar to others; they would sign conditions and never trouble to read them, although in all cases the railway company handed them an exact copy of the conditions they had already signed, and that it only occurred to most to look the matter up when something went wrong. Again, when a claim is made, fanciers expected to be paid at once, forgetting that some railway companies, like traders, were liable to forget.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

A Tail Trimmer.

There is at present on view at the Zoo one of those remarkable birds from South America known as Motmots, the first that has been shown there for a good many years. The great peculiarity in tho habits of these birds is that they artificially improve their own tails. The natural shape of the Motmot's tail is like the Magpio's, but the bird prefers it with a "racket" tip, so it bites away the webs from the centre feathers near their ends, and thus produces a short length of bare shaft before an oval disc of feather. The present bird is about as big as a Jay, but with short legs; its plumage is very handsome, green abovo and chestnut below, with a lovely band of brilliant blue all round the black crown. The scientific name is Momotus subrufescens. Motmots feed mostly on insects, on which they dart like fly-catchers; but they also eat fruit, and, judging from those the Zoo has had, do well in captivity.

Is Feather-eating Natural?

Of course, if the Motmot only chewed its tail-tips in captivity, and never showed the racket-tips in a wild state, everybody would put down the habit as an unnatural one; as it is, it stands unique in the animal world. It is as well here to raise, however, the question as to why birds go in for feather-eating or feather-biting; and I may remind my readers that Grebes habitually eat, and apparently digest, their own feathers as a natural thing, even in the wild state. It appears to be only the larger species that do this, however; the Dabchick does not. Feathers are evidently grateful and comforting to the stomach of the large Grebes, while tho tough little Dabchick may enjoy a botter digestion, and be able to do without such weird delicacies.

There is very little doubt that the feather-eating habit often points to some deficiency in the matter of diet; M. Rogeron, of Angers, a great authority on Water-fowl, says that the Red-crested Pochard, if not properly fed, will eat its own feathers; and I onco saw a duck of this species at the Zoo deliberately eat a Swan's feather a couplo of inches long. Everybody also knows how fowls in confined runs often take to feather-eating, though they never, apparently, practise this vice when allowed a run in the open.

A Suggested Remedy.

Now a bird may conceivably take to feather-eating for quite different dietetic reasons. Either the diet is too low, and the bird craves variety and a more animalized menu; or it is too high, and it needs a corrective; monotony of food also is a factor which has to be considered as inducing abnormal habits. I would, therefore, suggest to anyone who has a feather-eating Parrot to vary the treatment according to that which has gone before; i.e., if the bird has been having "bits from tho table," including meat, egg, etc., I should advise, as most experts do, putting it on a plain diet of seed, fruit etc. If, on the other hand, it takes to feather-eating when it has been fed on what is supposed to be the proper diet, I should indulge it with anything it fancies—you can't make it worse, anyhow, and may do it good. The more one studies the feeding habits of wild birds, the moro one is surprised at the variety of foods they take, and thero can be no doubt that in many cases it is the lack of variety in diet that is at the bottom of a great many of our cage-bird difficulties.

Earth-eating Among Birds.

In this connection I would allude to the fact, apparently little known, that some birds will eat earth. Bechstein mentions this as a habit of the Yellowhammer, and the keepers at the Zoo have observed it with the Blue-winged Sivas. Moreover, M. Rogeron suggests that the Common Duck does so; it is obvious, he says, that when you see it "bibbling" in newly-formed puddles in the road after a shower, it cannot be extracting therefrom any nutriment in the form of animal or plant life. Possibly earth is taken as a corrective by such birds, as coal and cinders are by pigs, and grass by cats and dogs. I do not think it at all impossible, however, that some birds may extract nutriment from mould; earthworms, as we all know, do so, and the digestive organs of a worm are curiously like those of a bird in some respects, tho crop and gizzard both being present in this humble creature, while tho gizzard contains grit as a bird's does. I would therefore suggest that the supplying of a lump of fresh earth at pretty frequent intervals to our cage-birds might in many cases be found to act beneficially on their condition, and would certainly not be likely to do them harm.

Beginning with Foreign Birds.

As this is the time of year for commencing foreign bird-keeping in outdoor aviarics, it is well to particularize a few of tho most suitable kinds for beginners to keep, as often people take up this class of bird haphazard, get hold of delicate or uninteresting species, and ultimately givo up foreigners in disgust. Now, tho birds I always recommend beginners to start with are Budgerigars and Java Sparrows; they are extremely hardy in constitution, and very pretty to look at; moreover, the two species can be kept together, and set off each other's colours admirably. It is a mistake, however, to associate Canaries or other weak-billed birds with arrant pot-biters like these.

If one has a fancy for something smaller the quaint little Zebra Finch is a very hardy little chap, and a practically certain broeder; he will do well along with Canaries, Goldfinches, and other harmless birds. With foreign soft-bills, the choice is limited, it being practically a case of Pekin Robins or nothing, for nearly all other foreign soft-bills are scarce and dear in comparison, though Red-eared Bulbuls have been fairly cheap of late, and these will do well along with Pekins, and mako a pretty contrast.

Why Not Breed Goldfinches?

When, by the way, are we going to start domesticating one of the most charming cage-birds in the world—our own Goldfinch? There is no great difficulty about it, for Goldfinches have been bred not only in aviaries, but in breeding-cages in a room, with the same general treatment as Canaries. Some people will bo asking what is to be gained by this; not much, perhaps, if English Goldfinches are used, but I believe that if we started with Siberian birds, or even by crossing these with English hens, we should ultimately be able to breed Goldfinches more beautiful than any which now exist in nature. We could certainly greatly increase the size, and we might be able to combine tho clear "whites" of the Siberian with the rich body-colour of the British race.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Chat about Yorkshires.

By W. MUNDELL

The Discussion.

Mr. Crisp: How often would the lecturer think it necessary to introduce Belgian blood into one's stud? Would a quarter-bred Belgian once in four years, say, be too frequent?—A quarter-bred Belgian might with safety be introduced every four or five years; and you might occasionally cross in with your stock two half-cousins having Belgian blood in them. That, of course, would be interbreeding. Still, I should run them together. I use Belgian blood on both sides.

Questioner: Do you, then, get everything from the Belgian; swagger, figure, style, and so on?—Yes, everything.

What is Pedigree Breeding?

May I ask again, said the questioner, if the lecturer, when mating up his birds, does so from sight?—No.—Would you, for instance, put two flat-headed birds together?—No; I believe in pedigree breeding. It is a well-known fact that if you havo birds which throw a fifth claw you will be able, by interbreeding, to get a strain of birds possessing a fifth claw on each foot. So, in regard to flat-headed birds; if you keep pairing such together you will ultimately fix those head properties in your strain. But I would, of course, if necessary, pair occasionally flat-headed birds that had come from round-headed parents.

Questioner: Then you mate from sight?—Yes, in that sense, I do. But I should not pair for that reason alone. You must keep to your pedigreo breeding. By pedigree breeding (the lecturer went on to explain, in answer to a question), I mean the keeping of a stock of birds knowing perfectly well the properties they will produce. I have, for instance, a strain of birds; perhaps the cocks are worth not more than, say, five shillings each. Now, I pair these cock birds to a strain of hens having quarter Belgian blood in them, knowing what I can expect from them. A good strain of birds has to be built up, and you can only do this by following the methods adopted by all successful breeders of any variety of Canary; it is all pedigree breeding.

Mr. Crisp: Have you ever known one of the first-class specimens of Yorkshires to be bred from mongrels, or from what one might term medium stock?—Well, not from mongrels, but from pedigree-bred birds, yes. A breeder can tell which birds throw the best average by pedigree breeding. When a show specimen does come, it is a freak or a "sport." And there is not one of them a year that will stand the ordeals of the show-bench, and maintain its honours, so that nothing will touch it. A really good specimen, when it does come, goes to the top at every show; but, as I say, you don't get one every year.

Questioner: The lecturer says he mates from sight, and that he periodically introduces some Belgians or larger stock birds; now, what I should like to know is, is that accepted pedigree breeding?—I did not say stock birds. I said I have a stock bird which I keep in with the stud. Thus you might have a Lancashire cock bird and pair it to a Yorkshire hen, selecting from among the young of this pair suitable birds for breeding with. About six years ago I asked someone to lend me an old yellow Plainhead winning cock bird. I ran this with a Yorkshire double yellow bird, and the blood of these is in all my stock to-day. But, of course, I kept breeding them along with my Belgian birds; watching them, and pairing them up with discretion.

Mr. Crisp: But that is purely selection.—Pedigree breeding is nothing but selection. Questioner: I must disagree with you there. I understand by pedigree that it means simply blood. And I should like to know why you did not retain the blood of the original specimens. My point is that the birds you discarded were of precisely the same blood as those you kept. To my mind it was a case of selection and pedigree breeding.—You must have pedigree and follow it up, even if you have to let the others go. You can call it selection if you like.

Mr. Crabb: There is one point that has been brought out that should be made clear, and it holds good in other varieties. That is, if you cross your birds, as presumably Mr. Mundell does, you get certain young which take after the one parent and some which take after the other. Now, the lecturer, after introducing the Lancashires, selects those young which take after the Yorkshire parent and puts the others away. But you can't clear out pedigree altogether, and pick one bird here and another there. I am inclined to think that Mr. Crisp should do what the Scotchman did when he was asked which of two given things he would have: "I will take both," he said. You want both selection and pedigree, as a matter of fact.

The Introduction of New Blood.

Mr. Crisp: When purchasing new blood does the lecturer accept a man's word as to the pedigree?—I have not brought a stud bird into my bird chamber for the last 17 years. The hens I got from a Yorkshireman, who went "down the river" through not introducing fresh blood; his birds were much too little, and he sold all his birds at 6s. 6d. each. They were beautiful things, but little. There is no doubt about it, if you stick to the one strain you will have to keep on introducing position and length, if your birds are to hold their own.

Questioner: Therefore, I take it, it is absolutely necessary to introduce new blood?—It is. Questioner: But the point is that if you are introducing this new blood, the Yorkshires you produce are, it appears to me, simply "glorified mongrels." (Laughter.)—Well, what is a Crested bird, or a Cinnamon? In fact, can you tell me of a variety of Canary that is not a mongrel? (Laughter.)

Mr. Silverthorn: It is practically the same in the case of all species of animals; breeders are bound to introduce an outcross occasionally.

Mr. Crabb: There is another point, and that is that taste changes; and the Yorkshire of to-day is not the same as that existing in the time of Thackrey. The Norwich, too, is a different bird to-day compared with what it was some years ago. And you must keep introducing new blood in order to follow the taste and get what is wanted.

Mr. Curtis: I should like to know from the lecturer where breeders of the Yorkshire get that lovely buff feather from which they have on their birds, and which makes the feather look like a piece of boxwood? Do they get it from the Cinnamon-marked birds, or from the Greens?—It comes from the old-fashioned Norwich birds.

Questioner: How is it then that you cannot get that same texture of feather on the Norwich that they get on the Yorkshires?—For years and years we have been trying to breed with Cinnamon-marks, and it is by crossing dark-eyed Cinnamon-marked cocks with little, almost puny, pink-eyed hens, that we get most of that texture of feather to which you refer.

Mr. Silverthorn: In referring to the drop-tailed birds, do I understand that you meant birds which carry long tails?—There is a lot of the Lancashire in the birds, and Lancashires will be found to drop their tails somewhat, and that accounts for the drop tails I spoke about.

Questioner: And yet you would not breed with them?—No, I would not. I take care to select those birds only which do not drop their tails.

Where are the Birds?

Mr. Ramsden: Can you give us a tip as to where we may find those breeders whom you referred to who only breed about twenty pairs, so that when they have done with them we may stand a chance of getting those birds? (Laughter.)—Well, there are some such breeders about. But I wonder how many of the birds that were exhibited, and that won first prizes at the Crystal Palace, were bred by the exhibitors?—Questioner: Perhaps you would not answer your own question? (Laughter.)—No, I wouldn't. (Renewed laughter.) The fact is, there are so many shows and so many different ideas as to the birds themselves, that when you go to a show you get there all the winning birds you have seen during the season, and I say there is not a good Yorkshire bird on the bench to-day—I mean a right good one. But if you were to classify the birds, and bring me all the winners, and let me judge them on the table, when you had got, say, the first three winners and placed them on top, you would then be able to see the difference between them and the others. The specimens would not run close together, either. When a winner is found it stands right away. I believe certainly there is plenty of room for good ones to-day.

Coxhoe and District C.B.S.

SIR,—A special meeting will be held in the Lynside Inn, Coxhoe, in connection with the above society on Saturday, May 22nd, at 6.30 p.m. prompt, for the purpose of making rules and appointing officers. As this is a very important matter, we would like all members who can to make it convenient to attend. W. J. MUDD, Sec.

West Terrace, Coxhoe, R.S.O., Co. Durham.

A Successful Start.

SIR,—Allow me to relate my experiences with three pairs of Yorkshires—two cocks 1908 and one 1907, and two hens 1907 and one 1908. Two pairs laid four eggs each, and set on February 25th and 26th, and hatched eight young. On the second round three pairs laid thirteen eggs and hatched thirteen young, leaving me at present with twenty-one young birds. The best advice I can give anyone is to keep birds clean, as cleanliness is the chief road to success; and also to read CAGE BIRDS regularly, as I have done for the last five years, gaining some very valuable information. GEO. STARES.

Is She a Suffragette?

SIR,—I see in CAGE BIRDS, "Old Maid" has a hen Canary, which is like one I have myself; but, in my case, the bird is a Silver Lizard hen, named "Vixen," owing to her fighting disposition. I have placed six different males with this hen, and I find she will only mate with one that can and will give her as many "good hidings" as she gives him. Although, again, she will mate and rear her young, she never gives up her fighting. I find that in each case, if the cock shows fight she will in time come to her senses, and if the cock is of a mild temper and will not fight, she does her best to murder him. I have had to remove three very quickly in order to save their lives. This will be her third season. I thought I would see if she was any better, so placed number six with her—one like herself. They fought for two days, pansing only to get breath to eat or to say ugly things to each other. In the end they were mating. But having grown tired of her cat and dog lives with partners, I keep her as a foster mother. Like Suffragettes, she thinks she can do without males, for she makes her nest and lays and sits quite independent of them. I hope my letter may be a small guide to "Old Maid."

A WOULD-BE HELPER.

The Border Fancy Canary in the South.

SIR,—I am pleased to see a few more letters on the above subject in last week's issue; I feel assured that ultimately the discussion will clear the air a little and help to bring about the desired type of bird. The standard of excellence so handsomely brought out for our guidance might well be termed complete, and clear enough for all to follow; but any observant visitor or member with a discriminating eye, who attends the various shows held on both sides of the border, will be forced to the conclusion that there are, indeed, many types. One seldom sees two judges taking the same type and style of bird. I know it is very difficult for the amateurs to follow, and, as I have already said, it is quite impossible that each can be on the true path. In reply to Mr. Hadwin, I see he asks me if Scotland led the way in getting rid of the thick-necked bird? Now, I think, for the interest of all, we had better let that fly stick to the wall. I feel sure that taking a stand either for or against this would neither advance the type of the bird nor create harmony amongst the members of the two clubs concerned, which latter I for one am working to obtain, for the future welfare of our wee favourites. Personally, I don't want to awaken any sleeping dog, and thereby cause a feeling to arise on one side of the Border against fanciers on the other. And I daresay that, after fully considering the cause, Mr. Hadwin will agree that a point of more vital importance to our English brothers is to get them to seriously consider whether this is not one of the things in regard to which they are lacking, and are therefore behind Scotland. Also, in regard to size, there is little doubt that taking them on an average, English fanciers favour a larger bird than we do here; indeed, I see Mr. Hadwin makes a little blunder likewise, when he states "as little over five inches in length as possible." Do not the rules say, "not to exceed five inches"? My own opinion is that a bird over that length should be left out of the show cage, if not the breeding-room. Mr. Hadwin also says he totally disagrees with me when I consider that exhibitors should study the fads of judges, etc. Now, if he looks over my letter again, he will notice that instead of disagreeing with me, he is only strengthening what I have said, and therefore agrees with me. I am, as a matter of fact, as much against studying the fads of any judge as any one; but, at the same time, I find I must do so in order to keep my birds "in the tickets." And the remedy he offers in his concluding remarks will not come to pass in either his day or mine, as I know that to tell any judge that he is going away from the standard with his awards, and that therefore he must "go," is more easily said than done. Each judge has a certain number of breeders and followers, who think his standard the right one; therefore, as long as they do so, and are on the committees of societies, they will vote for the particular judge they favour. I only wish that I could feel confident, as Mr. Hadwin does, that with a few strokes of the pen we might cause all judges to have the true standard adhered to on both sides of the border. I am afraid the time will be as "lang a-coming" as the fisher who sat down waiting for the stream to run dry, when he should be able to catch all the trout. I am sorry to see that Mr. Smith says he will write no more unless "Wee McGregor" discloses his identity. I fancy I hear "Wee McG." saying, "What for, ma?" He has a good cheek to ask my name, pa?" Therefore, I trust that Mr. Smith will defend himself likewise through your pages; for, although he has been held up to some uncalled-for personalities, as I have, by the youngest adopted, if not the saftest member of the "McGregor" clan, there are many fanciers who thank him for introducing this controversy into your pages.

J. PATTERSON.

SIR,—I am glad I have at last got "Wee MacGregor" to practically admit he is the great Mr. J. Robson, and to get such an admission it is worth putting up with the abuse and slander I have been subjected to, although at the same time I am sorry a man in his position in the Fancy should endeavour to silence criticism by attacking a novice under a nom de plume. If such a condition of things were to prevail it would drive novices from the Fancy. I warned Mr. Robson to be careful, but as he still repeats his slanderous suggestion that I am Mr. J. Smith and Mr. W. M. Thomson, also that I am a "disappointed exhibitor," I will explain the reason why I think he is so bitter against me. I do not like to do any person any harm, but as in the face of warnings he gives me no alternative but to either allow the public to think he is right, or to make an explanation, I therefore adopt the latter course. At a certain London show I exhibited an even-marked Border, and on going to the show in the evening of the first day I noticed Mr. J. Robson had awarded the second novice special to a prominent exhibitor. So I called a steward and pointed out that such exhibitor was not a novice, therefore the award was in error. He informed me, after consulting the Secretary and Mr. Robson, that clearly a mistake had been made, and that Mr. Robson would revise his awards. When my bird returned home the card stating my bird had been awarded the special for second best novice bird was attached to the cage. A few weeks after, on receiving the prize money, I wrote to the Secretary pointing out that I had not received the special, but I was informed the said special had been awarded by Mr. J. Robson to his brother's even-marked bird. I thereupon wrote that that could not be so, as this bird had been awarded the first novice special. In reply to this, the Secretary stated that a mistake had been made, and that the revised awards were: first novice special Mr. I. Robson's Cinnamon marked second novice special Mr. I. Robson's even-marked. It seemed to me to be scarcely satisfactory, to say the least of it, so I wrote to the Secretary complaining, and then I wrote to you, Sir, a letter, which you kindly inserted in your paper, suggesting that fanciers should not exhibit when a relative was the judge. A few days after the appearance of the letter enquiries were being made in Carlisle whom I was getting at. This even-marked bird, I believe, was sold to a lady fancier and exhibited at the recent Palace show, but was then wrong-classed by Mr. Robson. As Mr. Robson still suggests that I am Mr. J. Smith and Mr. W. M. Thomson, I will prove it is a lie if Mr. Robson will give £5 to the Fresh Air Fund. Mr. Robson evidently thinks I copy his example. In conclusion, I can assure Mr. Robson that, although we have been introduced to each other, I have no desire to claim his friendship.

ROBERT ELLWOOD.

P.S.—Will Mr. W. M. Thomson kindly oblige by communicating with me? The above address will find me.

The Norwich Plainhead Club Special Prize Fund.

SIR,—May I draw the attention of the members of the Norwich Plainhead Club to the fact that a subscription list has been opened, at the instance of several influential members, with the object of providing a fund out of which the committee will be able to considerably augment the ordinary specials which have hitherto been given by the club, in order that more interest may be taken in the club, and better support given to patronage shows by members other than those actually interested in the cup? I have been asked to appeal to all members for their support. As the committee will meet shortly to allot specials and select patronage shows, etc., I shall be very glad to receive as early as possible donations (no matter how small) which will be thankfully received and acknowledged.

The Green Marked Yorkshire Canary Club.

A Plea for the Even Marks.

SIR,—Now that the formation of the above club is almost assured, it would be as well to consider the position of the oven-marked birds. It is often said that it is doubtful if there is a good, even-marked specimen in existence. At the present time the cause of this paucity is undoubtedly the lack of classification for even marks, and the classification was done away with to prevent the practice of faking the birds, which was in vogue at one time. May I, through your esteemed paper, ask the promoters of the above club to include the even marks in the classification? Say they ask the first year for two classes, let them read as follows:—"Yorkshire, Uneven or Even-marked Yellow," "Ditto buff." This will give the even marked birds a chance of competing in something like equal competition, instead of having to take their place in the A.O.V. Class amongst Crests and sundry other varieties.

T. C. CRAWHALL.

A Curious Case.

SIR,—I have a "Hartz Mountain Roller" (cock bird, I believe) of last July's brood that has, for the last two months at least, been bare of feathers around and below the vent. The first that I noticed wrong about the bird was that it seemed swollen below the vent; then, after a few days, it discharged something about the size of a large bird's egg; this something had a thin film around it, which bursted on my pricking it, and also had the appearance of sawdust. During the cold weather I used sawdust for the cages, instead of sand (except a little sand placed in a corner of each), and this bird was in the habit of picking up the sawdust. After noticing how the bird was I immediately gave sand again, withholding the sawdust altogether; I also gave extra green food (dandelion). The bird soon got lively again, and it now appears perfectly healthy, with plenty of life. It sings well, but has not a feather around or below the vent. I feed it on about two-thirds best Spanish Canary and one-third summer rape, with a leaf or two of fresh dandelion or chickweed daily. Each bird has a piece of cuttlefish fastened up, and I may also say that I occasionally give a pinch or two of either maw or inga seed. This bird moulted early, and has been kept in the same room. I should be pleased to know if any of your numerous readers has had a similar experience. PILOT.

Is the "Bird Gambler" the Curse of Bird Clubs?

SIR,—As my best wishes go with the genuine bird lover, and one who finds enjoyment and pleasure in the keeping of his pets, it has occurred to me how different are his sentiments as compared with a large section of bird keepers. The "bird lover" cares little of the whiz and burr of excitement that affects the "bird gambler." To the bird lover there is little difference in the value at which he estimates his pets—the only difference being that of affection aroused by some strange tameness or pretty mannerism that brings some particular bird more prominently before the eye. How different with the "gambler." His must be a bird that is in the money! He does not support the hobby in any way. He will probably never go to the monthly meeting of a society, or in any other way advance the hobby for the love of the birds. 'Tis true he pays his subscription to whatever particular club he belongs—generally a few days before the show date, so as to obtain his entries 33 per cent cheaper than he otherwise would! He obtains his subscription back by the sixpences he has saved in the entries!—so his name appears as a member (!) of the club. How on earth does he support the hobby? Each bird he enters is with the keen intention of taking the prize money. He takes the money; that the hard-working secretary, and committee-men have struggled to guarantee, men who have always to keep putting their hands in their pockets, buying specials of all kinds to attract competitors to put their birds up to get sufficient gate to make the show pay its expenses if possible. But what does the "gambler" care if the club drops out?—nothing! He simply transfers to another. Clubs drop out for two things (which may be summed up as one), want of interest, tantamount to want of funds. If one tried to trace his gifts to the club, one would find them conspicuous by their absence. Were all fanciers and bird-lovers of the same mind, the hobby would not last a season. When the year ends, and a debit is found in the club's exchequer, who is the loser? Not the gambler. It is the committee men and the few enthusiasts who have to pay the piper, men who come miles to attend these meetings without reward of any kind, except their love of the thing, and who, if not wonderfully careful, are flung relentlessly into the columns of the Press. The London Federation, thank goodness, will assist in the heavy task to a certain degree. It will stop "the gambler" in the members' classes. It will stop the evil practice to the extent of allowing him to be only four months in arrears instead of nine, which means, generally speaking, only his lending the money for a few weeks, for if he only gets a "third," he wins. How, I ask again, does he benefit the hobby? What is wanted now is to bar him the "open" show. How can you compare this man with a bird lover, who keeps his birds as birds should be, as birds of pleasure? How many societies show any return at the end of the year for the labour of the secretary (a job it is difficult to get any man to take up), the committee, and the enthusiasts? To the man who always owes his subs. (sometimes for two years) to his society, who never goes to any meetings, is full of complaints against one and all, pays his subscription as a last resource, with the sole idea of getting it back in a few days. Bird keeping is not a hobby, I submit, but a gamble. If all club members took but the slightest regard for the welfare of their clubs there would be many a radiant face throughout the United Kingdom to-morrow, whereas the "gambler" has got so strong as to become almost a curse.

IPSO FACTO.

A C.B. Society for Southall.

SIR,—A meeting was held on Monday, May 10th, when it was definitely decided to form a society for Southall and District, the society to be called "The Southall and District Cage Bird Society." The membership is open to all fanciers. Meeting nights the first Monday in each month. The following officers were duly elected:—Chairman, Mr. A. E. Argyle; treasurer, Mr. H. J. Hireson; Committee, Messrs. W. H. Phipps, C. Huxley, J. R. Morgan, G. Kinns, W Smith, G A. Neal, E. M. Kidd, and J. Timberlake; secretary, T. G. Jeffery, 10, Western Road, Southall, Middlesex, who will be pleased to furnish any information respecting the society. All fanciers are cordially invited to join; the subscription is 2s. 6d. per year, with an entrance fee of 1s.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES.

Getting in Condition.

No Name.—I'm afraid you will not be able to do much breeding with the Yorkshire that is now moulting and sits huddled up on the perch. I suspect you have had it exposed to draughts or to great variations of heat. You must see these are quite avoided and keep the bird in a fairly cosy place where the heat is regular. As staple diet, give a mixture of three parts Canary to one summer rape, and three times a week give a pinch of hemp separately. Every second day give a half-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake or egg food with two drops each of sherry and cod-liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and a pinch of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it. Dissolve a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine in two tablespoonfuls of port wine, and give the bird twenty drops of this mixture in the drinking water two days in every three, until the moulting is stopped. It will be quite useless attempting to mate the bird until it is quite strong and active again.

Deformed Claws

Hopeful.—You ought to have attended to the claws as soon as the bird left the nest, or even before it did so if you had noticed that the hind claws came forward. Give it small, nearly round perches, about the size of an ordinary lead pencil, and see if it will arrange its claws with an effort to enable it to perch upon them. If it does, leave in the perches, and this alone will remedy the defect in the course of a few weeks. But if the bird makes no effort to stand on these perches, return the ordinary perches, and then get a piece of tubing, as used on a feeding bottle, cut off two pieces about a sixteenth of an inch wide, and get someone to hold the bird whilst you pass one of these rings over the three front claws, and, holding the hind claw back against the shank of the leg, push the ring upwards until near the end of the hind claw. Leave it in that position, so that the hind claw is held backwards by the rubber ring. Do both the same, and let the bird wear them for a fortnight; then remove them, and again try the thin perches.

Nesting and Not Laying.

W. H. K.—I suppose you have examined the nest, so as to be sure the hen really has not laid. It sometimes happens that a hen continues building up the nest after beginning to lay, when the eggs are often quite hidden from view without a close and careful examination of the nest. Failing that, I take it you are also quite satisfied she has not laid either in the nest or on the cage floor and the eggs destroyed. Your description of the swollen condition of the vent, as though the hen was about to lay, seems to imply that you handled the bird for examination, which is not advisable, unless rendered quite necessary. But still it is very unusual for a hen to appear so near laying, and then resume the normal condition without having done so. I have met with a few such cases generally in hens a few years old, and my experience is that they rarely, if ever, do any good in that season. I would advise you to be certain on the above points, and if she really has not laid, nor now shows signs of immediate laying, separate her for a fortnight and give her the following course of treatment; then mate her with a vigorous young cock, and try again. Feed on plain Canary as a staple, with green food, groundsel, chickweed, and dandelion, in unlimited quantities. Half a teaspoonful of summer rape daily, a pinch of inga three times a week; and half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops each of port wine and cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day. In the drinking water give twenty drops common gin, six of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for the first week, and in the second week give two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day.

Mopes on the Perch.

A. L.—Your feeding is not sufficiently generous. In addition to giving a staple of plain Canary, give also a half teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and twice a week a similar quantity of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, or a small piece of bread and milk sprinkled with moist sugar. You might ring the changes on the last three items, and add a few grains of inga or gold of pleasure to either of the two first-named. On two other days each week give a few grains of hemp. Give all these extras alternately, and on different days, to make variety. Give a spray of groundsel or chickweed every day. Keep cage well supplied with clean gritty sand. In the drinking water give twelve drops of glycerine and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence daily for three days, and every alternate day for another week. After this give four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid in the water for a few days.

Young Losing Feathers.

"Mep."—The feathers you sent have undoubtedly been broken off in the quill by some means, and as you say the hen cannot pluck them, I am inclined to think the nestpan or box, or perhaps some of the nesting material, was responsible. You should see whether there is any coarse material, or roughness about box, and whether it is too small, so that in either case the movements of the young might cause the feathers to be broken off. The feathers also are very small and poor indeed for birds seventeen days old, so it is just possible there may be some abnormality in the plumage. Your feeding is not quite correct. Try following: Give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape in the boppers; in separate vessels give as much cracked hemp daily as the birds quite clear up; also a supply of egg food given fresh twice a day at least, and in such quantities as the birds clear up each time; chickweed or groundsel also give fresh twice every day—not twice a week. A saucer of soaked rape may be given in addition daily, but great care must be exercised that this does not become sour. I do not think there is the least likelihood of the sea sand being responsible for the defective plumage.

Two Norwich Cock Birds.

Bert.—I have no doubt whatever your surmise as to the draughty position being the cause of the panting and heavy breathing is the correct one, but in moving the young cock too near a hot water cylinder you have, I think, to use a trite phrase, merely jumped out of the frying-pan into the fire. Now that there is a prospect of the weather continuing mild and settled, if you can place both birds in a room where no fire is kept, do so. Failing that, keep them quite out of reach of the heat of the fire, so that they will enjoy as equable a temperature as possible. In either case see that draughts and chills, and damp are rigidly avoided. What is required is an equable temperature and pure air, rather than extra warmth. Feed on a staple of plain Canary, and give separately twice a week half a teaspoonful of summer rape; on two other days a few grains of hemp, and on two other days half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it, and sprinkled with a few grains of gold of pleasure seed. Give green food—chickweed or groundsel—daily. In the drinking water for the first week give twenty drops of whiskey, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash, every second day. After this give twenty drops of whiskey, six of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day after for another fortnight if necessary.

Die with "the Rot."

Tom.—It would have been best had you described some of the symptoms exhibited by the young before death, as I am afraid I do not clearly understand what trouble may come under the designation of "rot." Are the crops empty or do they contain food when the birds die, and is there any appearance of diarrhœa? It is quite useless to try to make a random guess at the cause of the trouble; therefore I would advise you to send the next that dies to our post-mortem specialist for examination. Meantime, the following may be useful: You say you give crushed hemp in the hopper, but mention no other seed. If this implies that you give no other seed, this is decidedly wrong, and might account for the deaths. You should give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part rape in the hoppers. When the young are hatched, give a little pure yolk of egg first day; next day add a little bread or powdered biscuit, and afterwards add an equal bulk of the bread or biscuit to the egg. On the fourth day begin to give a little green food, groundsel or chickweed in preference to dandelion, fresh twice a day, and after eight or ten days add cracked hemp in a separate vessel. You now begin to give hemp a good deal too early. At the end of a fortnight, if there is a large brood, a saucer of soaked rape may also be added, but you must be very careful that this does not become sour. It "turns" very rapidly in warm weather.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Baldheads.

J. S., Castletown.—The baldness you speak of is not uncommon in old and debilitated birds, and is apt to occur in any weakly or poorly-fed stock when it is apparently due to exhausted vitality. But when the birds are young, as you say yours are, the cause may often be looked for in irritation caused by insect pests, or parasitic skin complaints. You ought to have said whether the skin appeared healthy or otherwise, but, anyway, try the following treatment for a few weeks, and if a cure is not effected, write again enclosing this reply, and giving the particulars asked for. First see both bird and cage are perfectly free from insect pests. Allow birds to bathe freely in fine weather, and add a few crystals of permanganate of potash to the water in the bath—just enough to make it a light pink colour. Feed on plain Canary only as a staple, and give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days the same quantity of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice each week for a month add also to the sponge cake as much as will cover a threepenny-piece of a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash. Twice a week give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, linseed, inga, and gold of pleasure, as an extra. Give chickweed and groundsel freely each day. Once or twice a week you may slightly anoint the bare skin with sulphur ointment, but do not daub on enough to soil the remaining plumage.

Something Gone Wrong.

A. E. Wigston.—If your hen is a young one, I should attribute her erratic behaviour largely to this fact, and another probable cause is your method of feeding, which, although you do not particularise about it, does not seem to be an ideal one. Take away pan and all nesting material, and keep hen by herself for a fortnight. During this time feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple; twice a week give in addition half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, linseed, and inga, and on two other days half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with a few grains of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it. Give a daily supply of chickweed, or groundsel, and one dandelion leaf a day. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand, and a piece of cuttlefish in it. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, every second day for a week, and during the second week give twenty drops of chemical food every second day, and on the alternate days two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel. Then mate up and try again, and when she commences to sit, stop all extra food and give only the Canary and rape in the hopper, and when young are hatched follow advice given to "Downcast" in this issue.

Disheartening Failures.

Downcast.—A bad spirit this, in which to meet failures. You must buckle up and not be downcast any more. To a certain extent I think your feeding is partly the cause of your losses, and perhaps the room is partly to blame. If I were selecting any building for breeding Canaries in, anything in the way of "moisture," which must, I take it, indicate dampness, would put it entirely out of court at once. Damp and draughts are about the most fatal things which come into the lives of caged Canaries. Therefore, if there is really any dampness in your room you must take steps to correct it at once. Another thing, you evidently started breeding too soon for your situation. Instead of having a temperature of between 44 and 50 degrees, you should have waited until it kept somewhere about 55 degrees. Having attended to the points suggested, and guarded well against draughts, feed on following lines, and you should be able to save the next broods. Give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape in unlimited quantities in the seed boxes regularly. When young are due to hatch, give half a teaspoonful of finely-chopped pure yolk of egg twice the first day; ditto the second day; the third day the same quantity of egg, with an equal bulk of bread crumbs or powdered biscuit added; fourth day the same as third, but given three times instead of twice, and a spray of chickweed, groundsel, or lettuce, added; fifth day, double the quantity of egg food, and green food twice. After this add a little more biscuit to the egg-food; give as much as the birds will quite clear up two or three times a day, a liberal supply of green food, fresh, two or three times daily; and when the birds are eight or ten days old add cracked hemp to the diet in a separate vessel. At a fortnight old, if a large brood is being fed, you may also add a saucer of soaked rape. Keep all food and water vessels scrupulously clean, and never allow any stale food to remain in cage.

Brevities.

Buying Eggs (D. Tisso).—Sorry I do not know where you could procure eggs from Crests to hatch out under your hen, whose eggs you have broken. The only means I can suggest of gratifying such a desire is to look around among your local birdy friends and see if one has had the misfortune to have a pair of adults go wrong after laying who might be induced to let you have the eggs for your hen to hatch out. I cannot suggest any price for such a deal; that must be a matter for mutual agreement between the parties concerned.

Knotty Feathers (Valuable Bird).—With your repeated plucking out of the knotty feathers on the wing butts, I can quite believe the wings appear sore, and are sore. It would be something to marvel at if they were not. Leave them quite alone. They may possibly dry up and disappear after attaining their full growth, but if they do not you will not improve matters by continually plucking them out, and will only cause the bird unnecessary suffering. Slightly anoint the place once or twice with pure vaseline or castor oil to soothe the soreness.

Hatching and Accommodation (Lily).—(1) Seeing your birds are kept in a rather warm kitchen, it is most likely that the cause of the two eggs failing to hatch properly was lack of moisture. Had you put them in a saucer of warm water for a few moments on the evening of the thirteenth day, and again on the morning and evening of the fourteenth, they would probably have hatched out all right. Do this with the next clutch, and also allow the hen to have access to a bath daily, if she desires it, for about a quarter of an hour each morning for the last three or four days of incubation. (2) I assume the measurements you give of the cage are in inches, not feet, and in that case it will accommodate four Canaries if you give it frequent attention in the way of cleaning and sanitation.

Unfertile Eggs (Perplexed).—The Lancashire hen that had four nests last year with only one fertile egg amongst the lot, was, to say the least, not being given a fair chance to succeed this year. Being a young bird, and also mated with a young bird, would to a certain extent account for the unfertility, as there exists no other variety in which it is more important to have at least one of the parents well matured, and over a year old. Perhaps this year she will do better if the four nests last season did not prove too great a tax upon her undeveloped frame. Unless you marked the first egg in order to identify it, you cannot be sure it was this one that proved fertile. On the contrary, I should say it was not, but rather the last egg in one of the clutches, my experience being that when some of a clutch are unfertile, it is almost, if not quite, invariably the latest laid that are fertile.

A Curious Case (Pilot).—The case is a very uncommon one judging by your description. It is not so very rare for fowls to lay eggs containing abnormal substances, but for a supposed cock Canary to present you with a substance like a shell-less egg which contained matter like sawdust, after it had, as you assert, been formerly in the habit of eating sawdust off the floor of the cage, is certainly unique. I should imagine the bird is a hen, notwithstanding the fact that it sings well, and that the substance was an abnormal egg. Your diet is very fair, and as the bird appears healthy, I should advise you to leave it alone and do nothing beyond substituting gritty sand in cage, and giving a liberal supply of green food, or a pinch of Epsom salts every now and again to keep bowels regular. The bareness will disappear most likely when the bird moults.

Fawn or Cinnamon? (W.H.C.).—I suppose what you call fawn colour is cinnamon, and it is by no means unusual to breed birds marked with this colour from a green bird. The buff green cock would undoubtedly have cinnamon blood in his veins, and if the clear buff hen had pink eyes, she, too, would be related to cinnamon blood, and for such a combination to throw cinnamon marked young is not unusual at all.

Still They Die (Nemo).—You ought to have enclosed the reply to which you refer as having followed closely, as I cannot tell which you may refer to. Anyway, I do not think I have advised anyone to give two kinds of green food in turn as you say you do, so perhaps, after all, you have not adhered very closely to rule. I think you would be well advised to send the next that dies for post-mortem examination to see if you have infectious fever among your birds. Then, when you have more broods, try what scrupulously following advice given to "Downcast" will do. For green food, I prefer chickweed, groundsel, lettuce, in order named. When these fail, watercress, dandelion, last of all.

Deformed Claws (Hopeful).—First try effect of giving the bird small nearly round perches, about the size of a lead pencil. If it manages to arrange its claws properly when on these, even if it has to make an effort to do so, leave it alone, and it will gradually cure the deformity itself. But if it does not appear to make any effort to clasp the perch, you must put on small rubber rings for a few weeks and give ordinary perches meanwhile. You will make suitable rings by cutting off a sixteenth of an inch from the rubber tubing on a baby's feeding bottle. For fuller details, see another reply this week.

Yorkshire with Asthma (Truro).—Now you have removed the bird from the room which caused the trouble, feed as you see advised here. Keep it in a comfortable temperature, quite free from draughts, and extreme fluctuations, though it need not necessarily be a very warm one, and guard against draughts and chills in future. Do not allow it to bathe in cold, chilly weather until quite recovered. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, six each of glycerine, and oxymel of squills, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day afterwards for another fortnight if necessary.

Returning the Cock (Beginner).—Now the second hen has gone to nest, you have done quite right to remove the cock and keep him by himself. When the young of the first hen are about a fortnight old will be quite early enough to return him, and he will then probably take upon himself the task of helping to finish off the young. There is no necessity for the formalities of introduction prior to returning him, but if he is very vigorous you should keep an eye upon him for a few hours to see whether he has designs upon clearing out the nest pan for the hen to start again. Should he prove troublesome in that way, keep him away until the young are old enough to be put in a nursery cage.

Making things Variable (J. L.).—I am constantly pointing out the danger and risks of a variable temperature, yet you wish to know whether it would do your Canaries harm to be in a room where a fire is burnt only at night. Now summer is upon us, and the little fire that would be burnt in consequence would probably make no appreciable difference, its effect would be practically nil, but when winter arrives, if there is sufficient fire burnt regularly at night to raise the temperature to any great extent, and none during the day, you must be well prepared to deal with a stock composed chiefly of soft moulters, and wheezy and "groggy" specimens generally.

German Hen (A Constant Reader).—Your feeding is probably the cause of the bird's condition, but you are silent upon this point. Feed for a fortnight or so same as advised "No Name." Give no green food until diarrhœa is quite stopped, then begin to give a leaf of dandelion daily, and gradually increase it to three or four leaves a day until she has gone to nest, when you must again discontinue it. In the drinking water give for two days six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. After that, give twenty drops of whiskey, four of tincture of gentian, and a piece of gum arabic the size of a small pea for a few days. Shake the latter until gum is dissolved. Hot water will expedite the process.

Bare and Scurfy Neck (X.Y.Z.).—You cannot properly diet and treat for the baldness whilst she is sitting and rearing young. But when the young are quite out of her charge you might put her on the treatment given in full detail to another correspondent under "Bald-heads." Slightly smear bare patch with sulphur ointment twice a week instead of the vaseline, as advised, but do not overdo it, and soil surrounding feathers. As you say, the hen is not a good one, and has already starved to death two broods. I should not consider her worth troubling with, as you will certainly find this trouble very difficult to cure.

Stopped Moulting (Anxious). — Am glad to hear your bird is now in fine plumage under treatment advised. Stop medicines for a week. Continue to feed the same, except that you should drop the sponge cake, with the addition thereto, and give instead a small piece of bread sopped in milk and sprinkled with soft sugar and a few grains of gold of pleasure seed. Give this three times a week for two or three weeks, which should suffice to get the bird in nice plump condition, but do not continue it long enough to make the bird over-fat. Continue to give green food, chickweed or dandelion, or both daily. After an interval of a week give twelve drops of glycerine, and two each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day for a week.

Inflamed Feet (Anxious).—The bird's diet is probably at the root of the trouble. Stop giving household tit-bits. In addition to the staple of plain Canary, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, twice a week a few grains of hemp, and on two other days half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake. Give a little watercress, lettuce or groundsel daily. Keep cage and perches scrupulously clean and strewn with clean sand, and also see the perches are properly shaped with no sharp edges and suited to the size of the bird's feet. Give six drops of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence in the drinking water every second day for a week, and on the alternate days four drops of tincture of gentain and ten of glycerine. Bathe feet once or twice in a warm solution of boracic powder for a few minutes, dry gently, and anoint sparingly with a little pure vaseline or cold cream.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Feeding a Chaffinch.

A Novice.—I seem to be very frequently giving the method of treating Chaffinches. As a staple seed mixture give the following: Canary and teazle four parts each, summer rape, charlock and linseed one part each. In addition give a good feed of white sunflower seed or safflower seed daily; or put one part amongst the stock mixture. Smashed walnuts (and other nuts) are greatly relished also and should be given occasionally in the light of a special treat. A small feed of hemp can be given once a week. Give a mealworm or two every day, varying same with flies, smooth caterpillars, grubs, earwigs, spiders, aphides, gentles, wasp grubs, etc., as obtainable. Chaffinches will eat most kinds of live food. These birds are not particularly keen on green food, but will nibble with appreciation a sprig of shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, dandelion, etc. Radish, turnip, and summer rape seedlings, are usually eagerly devoured, however, when just sprouting, which they soon begin to do when soaked in cold water.

In an Aviary.

Wee Bit.—I am afraid your idea is not very practical. For instance, the birds you let out of the cages into the open aviary would not return to the cages of their own free will, and the catching of them would be a difficult matter, and bring about the upsetting (or frightening) of all the other inmates. The birds flying loose should be kept away from those caged up. If you want to breed Hybrids, you certainly must not put more than one couple in each quaker-oats box. The number of pairs, of course, need only be limited by the room you have at command for the cages, and time at your disposal to look after them. You would have to provide some cover (shelter) in the open portion, which would, I should think, accommodate up to half-a-dozen pairs—the fewer the better if results are desired. Holly, box, privet, and ivy, are all good evergreens, while fir branches, gorse, etc., bushes placed about provide good cover.

A Disagreement.

B. T.—Really, you are in a better position than I am to decide which of the birds in your aviary is guilty of plucking the others. You should devote half-an-hour to watching the inmates (in the evening, or early morning, would do), when the culprit would soon stand revealed. At a guess, I should think it probable that the pair of Chaffinches and the odd hen Bramblefinch are fighting among themselves. I have very frequently in this column spoken of the danger attending unmated birds being left in an aviary. You should either remove the Bullfinch and Bramblefinch, or else find them mates. The method of feeding which you outline seems to be fairly adequate, except that the seeding greenfoods should be supplied daily, and not once a week only. Five or six pairs will be ample for breeding purposes in your place; non-breeders are best kept out.

Over the Coal House.

Boots.—I should think you could construct a very decent place in the position you mention. You should most certainly board the inside and put the tarpaulin (or tarred felt) over the boards. Further, from what you say, I fancy it will get very hot in the height of summer, and you should arrange some protection from the mid-day rays of the sun. I think the building would be very suitable for muling couples; even more so than for Canaries. Your notion of stocking it, however, made me smile, if you will pardon my saying so. In the first place, the calculation of one square foot of floor-space is for a single bird, and not for a pair; and in the second place, this is only very rough and unreliable—certainly not intended as a guide to be religiously followed. I hope you are not trying to breed with 35 pairs of birds in a place of 35 square feet floor area. You will have a rare holiday sweeping up the feathers and the bits. Seriously, each muling couple should have a separate compartment—my own get a cage at least 36 by 11 by 16 inches. Then one can hope to do some good. But with a host of couples crowded together—never.

Young Birds in an Aviary.

Miss M.M.—No particular preparation is necessary for feeding any young which may be hatched. You supply the usual seeds, and give suitable green food (including seeding wild kinds, chickweed, shepherd's purse, groundsel, grasses, etc.), and the old birds will utilise them freely. All else needed is the provision of two dishes of soft food daily—one containing a first-class insectivorous mixture, and the other the usual egg and biscuit (or bread) adopted by fanciers. If you choose to do so you can omit the latter item—should you give it, be certain it is always fresh and sweet, changing the supply twice or thrice a day during very hot weather, and keeping it in a well-shaded portion of the aviary. Some fanciers say their birds never take to it; but that is not my own experience. I have several which have taken to it readily this season, including Siskin, Linnet, and Bullfinches. A feed of small mealworms daily would be appreciated and any other suitable insect food you can lay hands on, especially shepherd's purse, etc., infested with "blight." By-the-bye, home-made "egg-cake" would answer admirably as a substitute for the egg and biscuit. It need not be moistened at all, providing it is not too stale and dry, but may simply be crumbled into a suitable dish and placed in the aviary. Don't add anything at all to it. But give the insectivorous food in addition.

Hand-rearing Chaffinches.

R.N.S.T.—I don't believe in taking any young Finches from their parents at too early an age; let them show their feathers nicely before you remove them. Up to the twelfth day (from the 10th to 12th) is safe enough. The food to be used is the usual kind—that is, egg and biscuit. Crush two Oshorne biscuits, and well mix with them the yolk of half the white of a hard-boiled egg, using a fork to do this with, one with thin prongs. When feeding take the required quantity of this mixture, and make it the consistency of thin paste (or of cream) with new milk. See that it is always sweet and free from the slightest taint of sourness. It must be made fresh at least once daily. Often I put in a good pinch of Plasmon powder, which I am never without in my bird-room. A few small cut-up pieces of mealworm may be dipped in milk and popped into their mouths pretty frequently; likewise any house flies you can capture should also be fed to them. As the youngsters grow, add a little soaked and just sprouting summer rape to the stock food. Steep the rape seed in cold water which thoroughly change every day. It will soon begin to germinate (hurst), and is then ready for use, dabbing it as dry as possible in a towel before mixing it with the soft food. Gradually increase the quantity of this rape in the food. When they begin to pick up for themselves, wean them on to soaked rape, maw, lightly cracked Canary and hemp seeds, hulled and broken up sunflower seed kernels, and, above all, seeding chickweed, shepherd's purse, and groundsel tops. I have had them pick up ants' eggs with relish (especially live ants' eggs); in fact, I often mix some amongst the food I hand-feed with. See reply to "A Novice," this week.

Brevities.

A Missel Thrush (W.R.).—The Missel Thrush certainly sings, especially in the early spring, but in my opinion its melody is far inferior to that of the Song Thrush. It is a loud, boisterous kind of song.

Wild Seed (Sherwood Forest).—It is an ordinary sample of what is known as "farmer's screenings"—residue from the threshing machine. It is suitable to offer British birds to pick over, but could be vastly improved by the addition of such wild seeds as thistle, dandelion, gold of pleasure, etc.

Sample of Teazle Seed (F. Groves).—I cannot detect anything wrong in the teazle seed, either by taste, eye, or microscope; indeed, it looks a good sample. I think the death of the Goldfinch was merely a curious, albeit unfortunate, coincidence. Only a powerful poison could have killed the bird so quickly.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hard-bills" and "Soft-bills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Flying on the Wires (Mr. Finch).—If you have the upper part of the wire front covered with glass (inside the wires of course), this might help the bird to lose the habit. It is not difficult to arrange, in the ordinary loose-fronted box-cage. The method has been recommended more than once in Cage Birds as efficacious; I believe it has been the subject of one "illustrated idea."

Redpoll-Canary Mules (G. Wells).—You could certainly put a steady cock Redpoll with your hen Canary, with hopes of breeding Mules; they are not hard to get. The cock Redpoll-Canary Mule has a pleasant little song, and utters it freely, but it cannot be termed either a very varied or very loud song.

A Finch Mixture (Goldie).—The sample of Finch mixture is a very good one of its kind, and with the addition of a liberal dash of sunflower seed would answer for the Greenfinch. It does not contain enough hemp and teazle for a Goldfinch, and far too much rape. You could still give the mixture of thistle, dandelion, sesame, cornflower, gold of pleasure, etc., as a tit-bit.

Bramblefinch-Chaffinch Hybrids (T. Donaldson).—I do not think these Hybrids have been bred in an ordinary cage; I may be wrong, but cannot call to mind reading or hearing of a case. They have been bred in aviaries, and the hens built their nests in the ordinary way, out of suitable materials supplied.

For Floor of Cage (Woodlark).—For the floor covering of my Larks' cages (either Wood or Sky), I use a mixture of half road-dust and half fine, but sharp, sand (bird-sand, put through a fine sieve). A Woodlark should have a perch in the cage, fixed rather low down (it depends, of course, on the type of cage in use).

Over-feeding Finches (Ruvigny).—It certainly is possible to over-feed Finches. A Goldfinch allowed to suddenly commence to gorge ad libitum on egg-food, might "turn up queer," likely enough. Some of my own Goldies are over-fond of it, and especially one Siskin which I have; but I only give a limited quantity to birds which are not feeding young.

Sex of Song Thrush (Cecil).—There is no true outward guide to the sex of Song Thrushes other than the song. I have tried several said-to-be infallible methods of distinguishing cock from hen, but with negative results. It looks as though your bird is a hen, seeing how well it is looked after and how excellent is its condition.

A Breeding Matter (A. Hill).—You should certainly test the fertility of the eggs by allowing the hen to sit, as they may quite likely have been fertilised by your friend's Goldfinch. In any case, let her sit a week before taking the eggs away, to afford her a rest. She would not be long, then, before building again. It is a good sign that the Goldfinch does not peck at the hen. But, of course, I can't tell from a letter whether he is in breeding trim. You must judge that for yourself by his song, his actions and the colour (clear or otherwise) of his beak.

Nesting Material (A. McWatt).—Moss, bents, tiny twigs or rootlets, dried grass, hair and wool are all that any hen British Finch requires to choose from in the way of nesting materials. Most of these are conveniently supplied by the well-known "medicated nest-bags" sold at the bird-shops and seed dealers. The other things can easily be gathered in the lanes. Personally I find the best thing is to get old (first-round) Linnet, Greenfinch, Blackbird, etc., nests, and pull them to pieces, after storing them in a moderately hot oven for twenty minutes or so. The nest of practically any small species will answer—even the Pied Wagtails, for instance. After the wild bird's first brood is out and about will be quite early enough for the average Hybrid couple to have nesting material.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S.

Feeding Young Budgerigars.

W. Broadbent.—You would find "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," price 7d., post free, from this office very helpful to you in breeding and rearing this handsome species. Canary, white and spray millet, with a few oats, greenfood and clean cuttlefish for the birds to peck at, will fully meet the case. If the birds appear fond of it, a plain biscuit or dry crust of household bread, may be thrown to them daily. Madagascar and Blue-wing Lovebirds will live peacefully with the Budgerigars, as also will Cockatiels, but before I can express an opinion on this point you must let me have particulars as to size of your aviary. Birds that will agree together where they have space, will tear one another to pieces in confined quarters.

Budgerigars Out of Condition.

Anxious.—Either during their journey to you, or else since coming into your possession, the birds have somehow taken a chill, and I fear the signs you describe rather point to pneumonia in one of the birds at least, and I fear you will lose one or two. However, the weather is all in your favour and the birds may pull through, though it will delay their breeding. For one day, let their drinking water consist of one teaspoonful Dinneford's Magnesia and one ounce of water, repeating this after a week's interval. Several days each week well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. I should also supply a little lettuce, and should most certainly try and get some grass in flower (seeding grass) for them; this is their natural food, and is obtainable now almost everywhere and almost every garden supplies a little, while hedgerows and waste land usually abound with it at this season. Delay giving the Chemical Food for a week and give the following mixture (obtained from your chemist) daily for that period: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills and glycerine in equal parts. For use take one teaspoonful of the mixture to one ounce of water, this constituting their only drinking water. Hope they will recover, but test the birds' roosting places for draught—some window sashes are very leaky.

Naming a Species.

P. J.—It is a Pileated or Chingold Song Sparrow. It is really a Bunting, though called a Sparrow, and is a very handsome species, though not adorned with gorgeous plumage. The ordinary Bunting mixture will suffice for this species, viz., canary, millet, oats, hemp, rape, and a little sunflower seed, greenfood, and one or two mealworms or other insects per bird daily. A few ants' eggs (cocoons) might also with advantage be given. Also any garden or hedgerow herbage, which is covered with plant lice, will be very beneficial for them. It is a pity you let the bird escape. This species has been bred in an English aviary, and has also crossed with a near species, and reared hybrids in this country.

Treating Java Sparrows, &c.

A. J. Adams.—All the birds you name should agree well together, and will thrive on a diet of Canary, white and spray millet; with greenfood, grit and water for drinking and bathing. I find lettuce and grass in flower (seeding grass) to be preferred to any other kind of greenfood, though some species will eat flowering and seeding chickweed freely, but the latter should never be gathered from wet ground. When they are feeding young they should get a little soft food mixture daily and also a few ants' eggs (cocoons), as bought, scattered over their sand. These are hardy species and should do well with you, but, like all species of birds, they must not be subjected to draught.

What Parrot is it?

W. C. D.—It is an Australian Roseate or Rose-breasted Cockatoo. It is a hardy species and should do well with you. I have a Hawk-headed Caique, which is quite an accomplished talker, and he often indulges in the gasps you speak of, and I have taken it as expressing pleasure, judging from the bird's demeanour accompanying it. You can really do nothing further to develop its talking capacity, save keeping it where it will hear plenty of conversation, repeat words to it, and generally pet it and make a fuss of it. Parrots and Cockatoos are very appreciative of such tactics, and they certainly try hard to mimic those they are specially fond of. Now it has made a start with a word or two, it should pick up others. However, the Roseate is not a great talker in this country, though in its native land it enjoys quite a reputation for talking capacity.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Amazon Rough in Plumage.

T. T.—Confine birds to seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, and green food. A little potato may be given, but it should be quite unseasoned Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish continually in cage, also grit. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Give one or two doses (one teaspoonful to the ounce of water) of Dinneford's Magnesia with two or three days between each dose. When not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food and continue this till the bird is in good feather. A dose of Dinneford's may be given occasionally to keep the bowels moving freely, but the excreta should not be permitted to become or remain watery.

Breeding Budgerigars.

M. R.—It nearly always means interrupted and lessened results to have the sexes unequal during the breeding season, and this is what it amounts to with your Yellow cock bird incapacitated, though I have little doubt but what the eggs from the Yellow hen will prove fertile, the cock bird having evidently proved unfaithful to his former partner. I should put the almost blind cock mercifully out of its misery and procure another male bird, so as to level up the sexes, and the birds will soon mate up and settle down to breeding and continue right on up to the advent of cold weather or the moult, though they do not always stop for this. You would find "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" from this office very helpful.

Green Parrot in Poor Plumage.

J. B. L.—It is the sops, pudding, table scraps, etc., that are responsible for the mischief. Confine your bird's diet to seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, and nuts, with cuttlefish and grit continuously in the cages. Give, say, 4 doses of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful to the ounce of water) with 2 days between each dose—in between, and continue for a month or longer, well colour its drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. As it has been used to sop, you can just moisten a piece of biscuit in the Chemical Food water; but do not on any account give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. I prefer the following mixture: Canary, hemp, wheat, maize, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds in equal parts; get either a pint or a quart of each, well mix and keep a supply continuously in the cage, and you will find it a cheap and wholesome mixture. When a bird's digestion has been upset, it takes some little time to put it right, or, rather undo the mischief of an unwholesome diet.

Budgerigar with Broken Foot.

R. H., Hereford.—In the previous query no mention was made of any wound, simply the fracture was referred to. It would appear that the wound had become poisoned, as there were signs of humour in the wound and all the toes were affected. Again, Budgerigars, or in fact any species of birds, can be very brutal to an ailing companion, and in many instances it is sufficient only for a bird to be ailing or injured for its mates to mob it to death, or nearly so. It frequently happens that fractures do not heal properly, and that the foot or toe will gradually decay away. I have had this occur with Zebra Finches, and yet they have lived and bred; but the foot of your bird was undoubtedly poisoned and you certainly did quite right to put it out of its misery. A good way to dress any bleeding wound is to well cleanse it in tepid water and lightly touch it with Friar's Balsam; this soon dries and checks bleeding, and mostly the wound heals. The cause of the abnormal growth of beak I should say was occasioned by its not having cuttlefish or mortar rubbish to nibble at. I do not remember the conditions under which your bird was kept, but birds naturally, when possible, grind their bills against hard substances. My Budgerigars use the aviary walls for this purpose. If they are caged, keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in their cage, and also a piece of rock salt or mortar rubbish, and the same in the aviary if there is no wall they can get at. However, occasionally, in spite of every precaution, an abnormal growth of bill will occur; in such cases it should be carefully trimmed down to normal size.

Grey Parrot Unwell.

J. F. D.—As the bird still appears fairly strong (It is marvellous what some Greys will stand), there is still hope, but you have let the case run on too long and let the trouble get too deep-seated to enable one to treat with any degree of confidence. Give three doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful to the ounce of water—with 2 days between each dose; see the bird drinks it up before any other drinking water is offered on these days. Spray or cleanse the nostrils (with a camel-hair brush) with glyco-thymoline daily till the trouble ceases; continue to foment, but when the face has become dry, touch the facial swelling with tincture of iodine; that is, if you can do so without the tincture entering its eye, which you must not permit. Note: The iodine must not be used on a festering growth, only on a firmish fleshy swelling, which from your letter I take to be the case with your bird. Stop milk sop; such should never be given, and give instead a little plain biscuit moistened in water that has been made the colour of port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food; do not make it too sodden, but at the same time fairly well moisten it, as the bird has been used to sop. Get a box of honey and horax from your chemist and wipe the bird's mouth out with this, or, at any rate, put a little on its tongue twice daily for a time. The other portion of its diet should consist of the seed mixture, ripe fruit, and a few nuts (shelled walnuts are best). Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. You had better carefully treat as above, and under the circumstances, report progress in a fortnight's time with particulars.

Brevity.

The Breeding of Budgerigars ("Novice, Cheshire").—Budgerigars do not use any nesting material, and though personally I prefer the ordinary cocoa-nut husk to any other nesting receptacle for these birds, yet your boxes as described should answer perfectly well. Canary, millet, oats, and greenfood will suffice, though if they care for them when they are feeding young, you can supply dry crusts of stale household bread. For these birds there is no greenfood to equal grass in flower (seeding grass) and fresh lettuce.

PARK AND LAKE AVICULTURE.

Answered by Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.

An Ailing Squirrel.

W. S. Negus.—As you do not mention giving your squirrel any animal food, this may be the cause of his falling off in condition, as a certain amount is always desirable, consisting of such things as eggs and bread and milk, chicken or rabbit bones to pick, or, better still, mealworms and the eggs of young Sparrows. Give water regularly. He would probably be better with a mate, but breeding is not very likely.

Rearing Young Moorhens.

J. Hooke.—You can rear young Moorhens on much the same food as young Pheasants, egg and bread crumbs, mixed up with ants' eggs and dried flies, with well-scoured gentles, if obtainable. But remember that for the first week or so they do not pick up, although they run about, but expect the parents to find the food and hold it up to them; thus you will have to do a good deal of hand-feeding at first When grown up they can be fed like poultry.

Hand-rearing Grouse.

M.G.P.—Grouse can be reared artificially, like Pheasants, and on similar food (see that recommended for young Moorhens under another query), but plenty of green food, such as chopped tender grass, lettuce, and onions, must be given. Give heather if you can do so regularly, but Grouse will live without it, though they always need green food in great abundance and variety; you had better try them with all tender shoots of non-poisonous plants. When kept in a garden they have been found to eat strawberry leaves and those of fruit trees. When grown up they may have some grain, oats by preference.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (R. C.).—This bird died of "bird fever," and in all probability the other losses may be attributed to same disease.

Black-headed Nun (R. Aitchison).—Apoplexy, probably the result of too much good food, and not enough exercise.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Carbolineum avenarius (W.R.D.). — Many thanks for writing us.

The Breeding of Linnet Mules (E. Wood).—We shall be very pleased to receive the promised account of your experiences.

A Seed Saver (F. S. W. Bates).—We do not remember this idea, but will endeavour to trace it. Glad to hear of your great success in breeding.

Photo (J. S. Emerson).—We wish you every success in the hobby, and shall be glad to see the photograph of your room when it is completed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A Question for Budgerigar Breeders.

SIR,—Will some of the readers of CAGE BIRDS kindly inform me when to take young Budgerigars for hand-rearing, and how, and what to feed them on? Perhaps "Action Hay" can oblige me.

A. J. HOLLOWAY.

A Question for Goldfinch Fanciers.

SIR,—In your issue dated April 17th, I noticed a letter from "W. M." respecting a constipated Goldfinch, and the best way to cure it. I have been expecting to see a reply from some of our noted Goldfinch fanciers, but have not seen it yet. I may say that I saved a good Finch in the following way: I gave a small teaspoonful of dandelion juice (you can get this from the chemist), in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water (fresh each day) for three or four days; I also gave half a teaspoonful of niger seed each day for a week. I may also say that I give Goldfinches plenty of niger and dandelion seed. My stock mixture I make up as follows: Teazle four parts, hemp and canary three parts each, linseed one part, summer rape and charlock half part each. I also give plenty of wild seeds and thistle seed. I hope this will help "W. M." W. A. W.

A New Society for Lutterworth and District.

SIR,—I am pleased to inform you that a meeting has been held by the fanciers in the Lutterworth district to see if we could form a society for the improvement and breeding of cage birds in this district by meetings for social intercourse, lectures and shows. About 23 names were promised for membership, which augurs well, and we consider this a good beginning which should lead to making the society a successful one. It was decided to name the society the "Lutterworth and District Cage Bird Society." It is restricted to a radius of eight miles. A series of lectures has been arranged, and a number of fanciers from Leicester have promised to come over and give us a good start on May 22nd. A Nest Feather Show has been decided on for June 26th. Anyone residing in the district who has not been communicated with, and are interested in cage birds, I shall be pleased to give any information to if he or she will send me name and address.

C. BROOKS, Secretary.

Market Street, Lutterworth.

What is a Clear?

SIR,—The by-law recently passed by the Norwich Plainhead Club was for the purpose of avoiding as much as possible the unnecessary handling of exhibition birds; therefore, when Mr. Kingsmill stated that "it is necessary to handle some winning exhibits, or otherwise you are playing into the hands of fraudulent exhibitors," the impression he meant to convey will be obvious to everyone. And you will see that I did not misconstrue his meaning in any way, nor had I any intention of doing so. I would, however, like to point out to Mr. Kingsmill that all judges are at perfect liberty to handle any bird that they think has been tampered with; but there is a great deal of difference between that and indiscriminately handling a class of clears. I would also point out that the adoption of the by-law cannot possibly make any difference to the number of classes given at shows, for the birds will be shown just the same as before, the only difference being that "thigh-ticks," or birds without surface marks, which may previously have been honestly entered in marked classes, will have to compete along with the clear birds instead. If exhibitors or reporters really want to know which are clear and which are ticked, it could easily be done as I suggested in my last letter, by exhibitors marking their entry forms "clear" or "ticked," as the case may be, for insertion in the catalogue. Mr. Kingsmill will, therefore, see that so far from reducing the classification, the by-law is simply legalising a condition of things which previously existed, and cannot possibly make any difference as to the number of classes given, either one way or the other, and he will have to acknowledge that his "Canary jumble" is simply a myth, invented by him for the purpose of deluding fanciers by drawing their attention away from the real question at issue; and I am afraid, sir, that Mr. Kingsmill, despite his little sarcasms anent the "brilliant and modern ideas of improved classification," will have to toe the mark, and move with the times, whether he likes it or not. Mr. A. Woollard's letter needs no comment. It is simply a repetition of his previous efforts, and clearly proves he does not know what he is talking about. Mr. Woollard persists in stating that a thigh-ticked bird can easily be detected by a judge without handling, by closely scrutinising it, and getting it to turn round a few times; although it has been proved time after time that the tick cannot always be found, even when the birds have been handled. But supposing that Mr. Woollard's contention is correct, why does he want the birds handled if the tick can be found by looking at the bird in the cage? Mr. Woollard also says that if the judges are not permitted to handle the birds, fanciers could go on "plucking to their heart's content." Goodness, gracious! Mr. Woollard, cannot you see that if the judges are not allowed to handle the birds there will be no necessity for plucking? Mr. Woollard also persists in stating that thigh-ticked birds, etc., cannot be termed clears, although he has been repeatedly told that nobody ever said they were. The by-law of the N.P.C. does not make a thigh-ticked bird a clear one by any means; it simply shows that the two birds are to compete in one class, which will probably be worded so as to admit both. Truly, none are so blind as those who won't see! The fact that both birds are to compete in one class openly will not in any way affect the numbers of clear birds—that is, genuine clears—for the birds will be bred just as usual, and if Mr. Woollard thinks otherwise, he is clearly under a delusion. I might say, sir, that this is my last letter on the subject. W. REID.

Cinnamon Border Fancies and Their Colour.

SIR,—Referring to Mr. Dixon's letter of May 1st, on the above question, I am afraid he is not paying strict attention to what I said in my previous letters. I think your readers will agree with me he is harping rather too much on the question of Cinnamon cock birds. If he will read again my letter which appeared on April 17th, he will see I didn't dispute the fact that he had the Cinnamon cock bird he referred to, or that he had seen the one that won at Selkirk in 1892. Mr. Dixon has convinced me there were Cinnamon cocks bred at that time; the question now is, were the Cinnamon Borders at that time superior in colour to what are on the show bench to-day? I notice Mr. Jas. Alexander in his letter says that the Cinnamon Borders in 1886 were as good in colour as they are now. Now, mark you, Mr. Dixon, he doesn't say they were superior in colour to what is now exhibited. Then, as to Mr. Dixon's friend saying he bred Cinnamons (both cocks and hens) in those early days; also that they were of better colour than now. It seems all very well to read, but then it is a very long time to carry the particular tone of the colour of a bird in one's eye. I will again ask Mr. Dixon to read my letter carefully, so as to avoid mistakes. I said, when referring to the disputed birds, that there was a bird (not birds) that was cardless. I did not say others at that particular show were cardless owing to their colour being doubted; I said there were two of the disputed birds at the Scottish National. I will here mention one of them, viz., the Yellow Cinnamon cock that stood fifth. This self-same bird (along with another Yellow Cinnamon cock bird belonging to the same exhibitor) was shown at the last City of Glasgow show, where it and the other stood cardless. More than one exhibitor remarked to the owner that they doubted whether they were colour-fed. The same remarks were passed on another Cinnamon exhibited by another fancier at the same show. It seems strange that at one show a bird is doubted for colour-feed, and at another show is said to fail in colour; there must be something wrong. I expect Mr. Dixon would have a good look at the first Cinnamon in tickets in each of the four classes at the Scottish National. I had a good look at them myself. One of these birds in particular was a grand one, but failed in colour (in my opinion); yet this self-same bird at the Crystal Palace was reported on as of nice colour; and in the same report a bird whose colour had been doubted was dubbed as "failing in colour"—a very strange thing indeed.

A Remedy Wanted.

SIR,—Can any of your readers tell me the cause of my loss of Linnets, Goldies, and Canaries? The birds are in an outdoor aviary, and I give them plenty of sound, large Spanish Canary, teazel, hemp, wild seeds, screenings from threshing machine, linseed, rape, gold of pleasure, and clean water daily. They are in good health, plumage, and song. Yet recently I have lost through death six of them. The birds may be singing one day, and then suddenly get a bit thick and gradually get worse, hopping about the cage bottom, pecking here and there, but appearing not to find what they want; then they tuck their heads in, and so remain for some time. If caught and examined their stomachs are found to be very red and swollen. I have given two drops of castor oil and put them in a cage in a warm room, or near a fire. I have put whiskey in their drinking water; chemical food also I have given, and sweet spirits of nitre, yet all to no purpose. Sometimes the breast is extended after the style of Pointer Pigeons. They also shake their heads and bring up food. They go very slim as they eat but very little, and die sometimes on the second or third day. I seldom, if ever, am able to save one. Yet there are others (they are mostly all together in a large flight) which live on the same treatment, and are strong and healthy and in full song.

PUZZLED FOR A REMEDY.

A Tip to Those With Little Spare Time.

SIR,—My experience of this season's breeding up to now, no doubt will be useful to those who would like to go in for our hobby but who are afraid to do so on the score that they have no time. I have heard that saying many times; but what have they got to say to this? I have two pairs of Yorkshires up (I must here explain that I belong to the theatrical profession, and leave home at 9 a.m., and do not return until 12.30 midnight. So you see I am away from my birds 15½ hours. My wife is out also, and the door is locked, and I carry the key. I paired them on March 28th and April 2nd. Both hens laid every day until they had four eggs each. On April 16th, one hen hatched her four. She sat well, too. But the other hen only sat for two days. She left the nest (on account of the noise I made doing a day's carpentering in the room); I took the eggs away, and she was anxious to lay again in a week. So I let the cock bird in again (drew the slide), and in spite of the continued noise I make in the morning, she takes no notice of me, and is now sitting well on another four eggs, which, like the first clutch, are all good. I opened the first lot to see, and they were all fertilized. My other hen has four strong healthy chicks 11 days old, and is feeding them well. Now as to feeding. Before I go out in the morning, I fill two egg trays with egg and biscuit, and one tray with mixed seed, and I put three good, big heads of watercress in one of the drinkers, so that it is through the wires and in the water also, which keeps it fresh; and when I get home at midnight I fill it up again, and that they don't mind in the least, but come down, get a fill up, and go back and feed hens and chicks. And they have a good supply of fresh food for early morning, as soon as it gets light. I am quite satisfied with the results, and am sure it should interest and instruct a beginner who has little time as to how to go on. Anyway, I hope it will. CHAS. B. EVANS.

The Colour-feeding of Canaries.

SIR,—I am speaking from practical experience when I say that birds can be got as good a colour when colour-fed every other day. I have birds that I fed every day in 1907, and they were very hot in colour, and the same birds colour-fed every other day in 1908 were just as good in colour. You will see that Mr. Ramsden admits that a bird teeming with natural colour will colour well if fed every other day. I would like him to explain how he knows when a bird is teeming with natural colour whether from appearance or from the way in which it is bred, because I have seen four young out of one nest all different in colour, and two of them hens, one of them being a long way better in colour than the two cocks. She was, too, nine times in the money this season out of nine times shown, and at the various shows your reporter said "very hot in colour," and at one show in particular, "very hot for a hen." I have also seen young birds shown at nest feather shows, and winning first prizes in Buffs, and, when moulted, turned out to be yellow hens; yes, and some of them red. Now, with regard to those that are not full of natural colour. I may say that if you give them colour-food ten times a day you will not get them any better in colour than by giving it every other day. Mr. Ramsden says my plan of withholding the seed is cruel. Well, I don't see where the cruelty comes in. I give the birds colour-food at 9 a.m., and in the majority of cases they have it eaten up by 12 noon. But when I was feeding every day I had to draw the seed every day from 9 a.m. until 3, 4, and 5 p.m., and all the fanciers I know, with one exception, draw their seed. Perhaps Mr. Ramsden will tell me which is the more cruel, every day or every other day? I have seen birds that would sooner die than eat the colour-food. Now, Mr. Ramsden, which way would you colour these birds? Perhaps you will say the food was not palatable. I won't say whose food it was, and perhaps Mr. Ramsden will give us a tip as to how to make colour-food palatable. I have seen it made up in various ways, and to me it is very unpalatable. I find it very easy to get young ones to eat it, but the old ones have had enough of it before, and they "fight shy"; and it is for those that won't eat it that I advocate the drawing of seed. To those who have no difficulty to get them to eat it, so much the better; leave the seed on. Mr. Ramsden says it is necessary to have seed to keep up stamina in order to get the colour. Now, as I said in my previous letter, I had as good a colour as any other fancier, and it does not seem that my birds have lost any of their stamina by my drawing the seed. And I may also state that I have 25 young ones ready to leave the nest out of 28 hatched, and the three that "went down" were accidentally killed. I think this result very good considering the parents were moulted in the above way. I would like to ask Mr. Ramsden if I am the only one he knows who draws the seed? I would advise those who were satisfied with their colour-food last year if they have any left to keep it to compare with the sample they intend purchasing this season. I find it keeps very well in an air-tight tin. The test that Mr. Ramsden advocates is very good. I find that birds colour-fed every other day eat it more freely, and seem to relish it far better. I don't want to press my system on to any fanciers, but I think that if they will give it a trial they will be more than satisfied.

A Curious Device for Sexing Birds.

SIR,—A few weeks ago I noticed in CAGE BIRDS an account of the means by which one can tell the sex of birds, by the use of a needle attached to a piece of thread. I thought it almost impossible at the time, but I have since noticed another account of it in my brother's POULTRY WORLD, and I may say he is making good use of it, by telling the sex in the eggs he is setting under poultry. I notice the needle travels in a circle if the egg holds a cock bird, and, if a hen, it swings from point to point, and if unfertile it hangs steady. I have also tried it in regard to my Canary eggs, and have found that it works true. It has truthfully told the sex of every living bird or animal that I have tried; also, it acts on human beings in the same way. I further tried it on my Bull Terrier, Yorkshire Terrier, Parrot, 20 Canaries (cocks and hens), and different British birds; also cats. I went to different friends of mine, all bird fanciers, and tested it there, and although they tried to catch me by bringing birds and animals out, all covered up except the head, the needle told the sex correctly. The most remarkable part of the business is that the needle will only work when the thread is held by some person whose body is well supplied with electricity. My brother and I are the only persons (we have found yet) who can work it in this vicinity. All my friends had a try, but the needle would not stir, on account of their not being well enough supplied with electricity. This is the reason people laugh and say it is a trick. If any of the thousands of readers of CAGE BIRDS in the North would like to see it proved, I will be happy to oblige them. Perhaps some scientific reader will be able to explain how it works. There must be electricity in everything living, and more in males than females, which electricity must connect itself somehow with that in the needle, the latter having travelled to the needle from the hand of the person holding same. An unfertile egg has no germ, and thus no electricity; so then the needle does not work. I don't wish to be argued down on what I have written, as I am no scientist. I am only saying what I have proved to be so. I can sex any egg (fertile) or bird, or animal; and will prove same as stated above.

An Explanation from Plymouth.

SIR,—May I trespass on your space for a brief explanation? I notice in last week's "Round Table" articles that Mr. C. E. Brown, in recounting his losses, states that he "had a splendid Buff stolen, and five grand birds killed on the return journey from Plymouth show." What I wish to make clear is that these are two separate incidents, and that the theft of the Buff did not occur at, or in connection with, Plymouth show. I am pleased to state that although 49 annual shows have been held by the W.C.O.S., we have no record or knowledge of any bird ever having been stolen therefrom. We naturally deplore losses in transit, but this matter is, unfortunately, beyond the control of show committees.

C. DART, Chairman W.C.O.S.

P.S.—Should like you to accept my thanks for the splendid journal you issue weekly, and as for the specials, they are indeed marvellous productions.

The London and Provincial O.S. Annual Outing.

SIR,—The arrangements are now complete for the visit of the members and friends of the L. and P.O.S. to Great Missenden, Bucks, on Sunday, May 23rd. The train leaves Baker Street (Metropolitan Railway) at 10.7 a.m., arriving at Great Missenden 11.18; fare 2s. 6d. return, each to take his own ticket, asking for the cheap day return. Hot luncheon will be provided at the George Hotel, at 1.30, 2s. per head. Ladies join the party by the 2.30 train from Marylebone (Great Central), taking the half-day return ticket, 2s. Tea at the George Hotel at 5.30, 9d. per head. We return from Great Missenden by the 8.48 train, arriving at Marylebone at 9.48 p.m. Messrs. G. Crabb and J. W. Ramsden have signified their intention of accompanying the party, which will be under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Pretty. Will members and friends kindly let me know by Thursday, May 20, if they wish to join the party, as the proprietor wishes to know by Friday the number of visitors for whom he has to provide. This being the first excursion organised by the society, I hope all friends will be present, and so help to make this function a success.

Type of Present-day Winning Norwich Plainheads.

SIR,—Please accept my appreciation of your Spring Number Supplement devoted to the Norwich Canary; also I am grateful to the gentlemen who so generously contributed articles. Mr. A. Grey's notes are superb in the first paragraphs, but the last I cannot let go by unchallenged. First, to style me as a "disappointed exhibitor" shows that Mr. Grey doesn't know who wrote the article for March 6th issue. Then his "Why, good gracious! etc.," shows him to be somewhat thoughtless. A question or two, please. How long was your "Queenie," Mr. Grey? Did you buy her, or breed her? We poor fanciers suffer a good deal from men with well-lined pockets. How long is the typical hen, nay, most of your cock birds, Mr. Grey, that you are justly proud of this year (1908)? How long are Messrs. Turner and Martin's Norwich that won so ably at the Crystal Palace? Also Mr. Cowling's yellow at Morpeth and Newcastle? I could mention many more; but just one other. How long is Mr. Dobinson's yellow that he has been so successful with? About four years ago Mr. Grey came into the Fancy able to buy himself success. He has done so, and now writes an article worthy the pen of a professional, and in the later paragraphs pulls himself to pieces by an attempt to criticise a brother fancier. "Why, good gracious!" my father was an exhibitor before Mr. Grey was born. I have a good twenty years' start of him, and knew what I was writing about, and sketching about, when I wrote on the Norwich Canary. My progress has been the result of a plodding uphill fight. Do not go back to the Border Fancy by any means for Norwich, but, good gracious! stay away from the Yorkshire and the "Starling." EDWARD FLOYD.

SIR,—Messrs. Walton and Noakes, in their remarks published in CAGE BIRDS' Spring Number, on the Norwich Plainhead, say, "we consider the present-day Norwich far in front of what was able to win ten years back as regards size and type." I beg to be allowed to differ with them on that point. I don't think we ever had Norwich as good as in those days; and, another thing, just about that time we had plenty of far better-headed birds—not the flat-skulled, browed birds you see to-day. I call such, one-year-lasters, that is the big bird of to-day. We had them equal in size, or larger, then. What about the Buff cock shown by Mellars, and friend Abbott's Buff, the largest show bird I ever saw? I believe he was on the boards for six seasons—a real laster. Also the birds shown by Wellings and Woods, P. Pendleton, Atkinson and Heaps, S. Taylor, Roe, Taylor (Attercliffe), W. Mercer, Trengove, Gutheridge and Fox, Stubbs, Irons, Silk, Dale (Liverpool), Davis (Manchester)—all exhibited better birds. I have not seen Buff hens with the same size and quality as Wellings and Woods used to show, or like the hen friend Silk won with at Liverpool. All the above-named fanciers were showing good teams consistent in type with good quality. Colour and size seems the rage to-day, especially with some of our judges. The beautifully-moulded, short, thick bird has to give way many times because of colour. At one show I attended this past season I saw a class of Norwich, I think about thirteen, in the class. The first prize bird was a red-hot one, with no type. I looked the class over, and when I came to the "c" bird I felt sorry; in fact, hurt, because I love a good bird. If I had been a buyer I would rather have had him than all the other twelve; in fact, the first bird I would not have had except as a songster. I believe the "c" bird has since changed hands. I have seen birds in the money more like dressed-up pokers, especially the yellow-marked birds—nothing in them but colour. I will say, however, we have a few of the old hands left who have stuck to type; but for alround good birds those exhibited are not as good. I myself have bred nothing but Norwich for many years, and I write for the good of the bird—to try and keep it what it should be, a true Norwich. A. MATHER.

The Proposed New Society for Mansfield and District.

SIR,—I was pleased to see in CAGE BIRDS of May 8th the suggestion to start a cage bird society at Mansfield. Why Mansfield should be without a society is a mystery to me. The district is a regular hot-bed of fanciers, and has been so far as long as I can remember. Wake up, Mansfield, and show the whole Fancy what you can do in the way of having a good society, and a show second to none. Every success to Mr. Smith, the secretary, pro tem. J. BERTIE.

Hand-rearing the Lapwing.

SIR,—I notice an inquiry in CAGE BIRDS of May 1 by "Peewit" on the above question. I would advise "Peewit" to take two or more Lapwings when they are fully-fledged. When they are hungry start them on bread and milk; the first piece will have to be put into the beak by hand. They will then very soon pick it up for themselves. They will also relish a few small worms. Raw meat is fatal at first. Personally, I find the Lapwing a dull pet, as he crouches at any sound, and is really lively only by night. When I turned mine out they disappeared in a few weeks, although pinioned, while the Oyster-catchers (or sea-pies) have remained with me for two years. I can recommend this as an interesting bird, and easily kept in condition on steeped dog biscuit. With a little cod-liver oil in cold weather, he only requires plenty of water and plenty of room.

Natural Colour Classes at Forthcoming Shows.

SIR,—We have read a deal of discussion both for and against the colour-feeding of Canaries for exhibition. No doubt there are a large number of fanciers who do not feed their birds, nor show them, seeing they have to compete with colour-fed specimens. Consequently the number of entries at our shows suffer through same. May I, therefore, suggest that all societies which cater for natural colour classes in their schedules this year, advise the Fancy of same as soon as possible through the medium of your valuable paper? This will be rendering a service to both fanciers who feed and those who do not. Many, although feeding the majority of their stock, would prefer to keep a bird or two for competition in the said classes. I may point out that the Western Counties O.S. at Plymouth are catering this (their Jubilee) year for two natural colour classes, "Norwich and Yorkshires," at their annual show in October, and the idea has been most favourably received by the fanciers in this district. If other societies would follow their example, and let fanciers know before they start feeding their youngsters, a note could be made of same, and birds which might otherwise be kept at home would possibly be seen on the show bench. I simply throw out this suggestion as possibly there are other fanciers who may like to give their views.—F. G. SMITH.

No. 308.

A Spring for Aviary Doors.

Sent by Ernest Key, 8, Norfolk Street, Coventry.

Enclosed you will find a sketch of a spring for use on aviary doors. Get a piece of rather stout wire (about 3-16th of an inch thick), and bend it the same shape as a letter Z. Let this cross the door frame and the support in the centre of the door

(as shown on the drawing) when there will be just enough tension to make the door close with a snap as you enter the aviary. Anyone using it will find that no bird escapes through the door, as is often the case when one goes to catch out a bird. It is also a good preventative of cats entering the place.—E. KEY.

For Birds with Sore, etc., Feet.

Sent by J. Lisle, 25, Ridley Street, Cramlington.

I am sending you a sketch of a contrivance which I use when dealing with birds which have sore feet, broken legs, or claws which want cutting. It is a piece of soft leather, about 6ins. by 4ins., with a hole in the centre (about 1½in.) cut out. Put the feet of the bird through the hole in the leather, then fold up, and you can do almost anything with the patient. Get someone to hold the ends, and then you have him steady. I have always used it for such like purposes as the above, and find it very successful. I hope it will be of use to other fanciers.—JAMES LISLE.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting held at headquarters, the Church Institute, 60, Paddington-street, on April 26th, Mr. A. C. Burn presiding. Letters were read from the Secretaries of the L. and P.O.S., Toronto C.B.S., and Southampton O.S. The election of Messrs. W. Cook (Hyde Park), T. Cottey, and C. G. Rolls, then took place. The following were nominated: Miss Louisa Jolliffe (London, W.), Messrs. A. M. Jones (Maida Vale), and T. C. Picard (Balham, S.W.). The pair show balance-sheet duly audited, showing an income of £11 16s. 2d., an expenditure of £11 15s. 3d., was confirmed as read; also the quarterly statement of accounts ending April 1st, showing an income of £54 9s. 8½d., an expenditure of £29 12s. 11½d., and a cash balance £24 16s. 9d. Statistics of same were given, ranging over a period of 7 years. The announcement by the Secretary of the promise of a handsome silver cup by Mr. H. Robbins, for the Foreign Bird section, was greeted with hearty applause. A vote of thanks for this valuable addition to the Association's trophies was carried. The Chairman then called upon Mr. Wesley T. Page for his lecture on Foreign Birds. At the close, questions were asked by Mrs. Morrison, Messrs. G. Crabb, G. Box, C. Prior, and A. W. Curtis. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. W. T. Page for his interesting and popular lecture, proposed by Mr. A. C. Burn, seconded by Mr. C. Prior, and supported by Mr. A. W. Curtis, was carried.—V. WYNN, Sec.

Wild Bird Life.

The King of Songsters.

Now that the Cuckoo and Nightingale have returned from their winter quarters, summer may be said to have commenced. The voice of the former bird is heard daily and during the bright moon-lighted nights the glorious melody of the "King of Songsters" enchants any listener who cares to be about an hour or two before midnight. Some people are under the impression that this bird is simply a night performer, but this is quite a mistake; he sings as much in the bright sunlight as after sundown. But I am under the impression his song is not so full and long sustained, that he does not, in a sense, "settle down to it" in the daytime as at night. During the day he is, like other feathered creatures, constantly on the move, hopping about thickets and under-woods, picking up an occasional insect, and while doing so, from time to time singing a sweet passage, it may be from a branch, or from some refuse blown together by the winter winds, or from the bare ground. A friend of mine has seen one singing while it reclined on its side basking in the warm sunshine. Although many other birds are making the woodlands ring with their love songs, the liquid melody of the 'gale can be easily detected by the bird lover who knows his music. But rich and varied as the song of the Nightingale is, he has not been quite such a favourite with our poets as the Skylark and Thrush, although both Cowper and Tennyson have some beautiful lines in praise of him. Without doubt the proper time to hear and appreciate the performance of this matchless songster is after sundown, when other singers are asleep, and the silent woods and groves are outlined by the silvery moonbeams. From some low thornbush the full-throated melody is poured forth into the night, in phrases full and rich, and distinctly rendered, with a rest between each, allowing the listener time to digest the beauty of the melody, to wonder at its richness, and anticipate, if he can, the next liquid passage. There is no repetition in the song of the 'gale; change after change may be noted, until the listener loses count, and simply gives himself up to the enjoyment of the hour, wishing that other and less fortunate mortals could share his pleasure.

A Pattern Cuckoo.

The American Cuckoo, unlike our own bird, makes its own nest and hatches and rears its young.

Mummied Hawks.

Some idea of the esteem in which Hawks were held in ancient times may be gathered from the fact that they were embalmed and buried in earthenware jars, in the same manner as the mummified bodies of human beings.

Wild Turkeys in a Park.

It is recorded that during the reign of George II. a large flock of wild Turkeys were kept in Richmond Park. During the autumn and winter they fed chiefly upon acorns, for at that time oak was the principal timber grown. The birds were hunted by dogs, and took refuge in the trees, in which the king shot them.

How Birds Feed Their Young.

The majority of wild birds are born practically naked and are closely brooded by the parent, who feeds them from the crop with partly digested food. The soft-bills are mostly fed upon insects and worms beaten to a pulp by the parents for the first few days. Some birds, such as the Pelican, thrusts its head down the throat of the old bird and helps itself.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

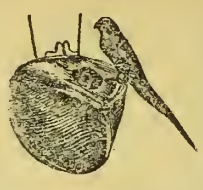
solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

PARROT AVIARIES, MORECAMBE.



Now please remember that during the last 18 years I have bred thousands of Budgerigars, and I publicly wager £50 that I have imported, manufactured, sold, and shipped more wired cokernut husk nests for Budgerigar breeding than any other man living; so have any bragging copyists, or so-called shippers sufficient British pluck to accept? If so, step forward; if not, don't brag, but stand down. For 18 years my husks have been unequalled. Don't be gulled by inexperienced shopkeepers; listen to what experts say:—"Cage Birds" says they are "far superior to the old husks." "Feathered World" says: "Undoubtedly, the new husks are very superior to the old." Again, "Exchange and Mart" says: "Those prepared by Mr. Harper are very superior to the old style, which often fall to pieces at the most critical time, with disastrous results for the nestlings. You had better order the improved form; even if it is a little dearer than the old-fashioned sort, it is cheaper in the long run." "Fur and Feather" tells its correspondents: "They have distinct advantages over the old sort." "Poultry" has said: "For Budgerigars we advise the use of the improved style of husks." Surely these are convincing testimonials.

Don't forget, you have the benefit of 18 years' practical breeding experience. I don't keep a shop; one quality only, the best. My "Improved Secure" husks are 4/6 dozen, smaller quantities 5d. each. Few Cockateel nest boxes 1/6 each. Illustrated pamphlet, entitled "Budgerigar Breeding," free on application.

TESTIMONIALS FROM PRACTICAL FANCIERS.

NORWICH WORKHOUSE.

I have for the past two years used your Cod Liver Oil Cage Bird Food and find it very good for the hens when sitting, also for rearing the young and weaning them from the old birds on to solid food, and I find it is much better and handier than the old-fashioned way. I am this year using your Canary and Cage Bird Food as well.

Yours very truly,

7, COLEGATE STREET, NORWICH.

I am again this year using your Cod Liver Oil Food for rearing young canaries. I find from experience that it is very good for them with the addition of a little yolk of egg. What few young birds I have bred this season are looking remarkably well, being plump and fat, look like making fine birds. The chief thing I like about the food is, that it does not go sour so quick as the ordinary egg and bread-crumb, and the old birds like it.

I can thoroughly recommend it to all canary fanciers.
Yours faithfully,

T. MILES, OF NORWICH, writes:

I must say what is right in referring to the Cod Liver Oil Food. I used it all through the season for rearing young birds. Moreover I COLOUR FED my birds with your foods, and they came out a fine COLOUR. The birds were healthy all through the moult. I might say I did not use any eggs with it, but it brought me out colour enough to get first and special in the Pair Class, and fourth in the Clear Buff Class at the last Norwich All England Show last November; also second, third and fourth at Diss in December.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

SANDIFORD'S FAMOUS ROYAL RED.

£50 Given in Prizes this Year.

All societies using over 20 lbs. to have a beautiful special. Read this startling proof—"The only proof." I don't need to lecture to you. Use Royal Red and it will prove you need no lectures or papers on colour feeding. (Have on view 10 tons.)

I see in last week's "Twitterings" another vendor claiming that Messrs. Godley and Hodder's birds were fed solely on his feeds last season. Their orders to me last season were: Mr. Godley 56lbs. Royal Red, Mr. Hodder 45lbs. Royal Red. At last 1909 Crystal Palace Show, in the eight champion Norwich classes, the whole eight first prize winners were moulted on Royal Red. The eight exhibitors who won them all used about 50lbs. each Royal Red. Is there any more proof than this as to who claims the premier colour-feed? Mr. J. W. Rennie, big southern winner of 1st clear yellow, 1st yellow hens, Crystal Palace, writes: "May 3rd, 1909. All my winning Norwich were fed solely on your colour-feed, and I intend to use no other on them this year." Also supplied last season: Mr. E. Baker 200lbs. Royal Red, Sam Cook, Norwich Plainhead cup winner, 60lbs., Mr. Grey, big N.N.P.C. silver bowl winner, 30lbs., Judge Vardy 212lbs., Mr. Midgley, winner two first open Norwich at last Palace, 20lbs., Mr. Dobinson, another fist winner at last Palace, 20lbs., T. Irons 70lbs., W. Booth, birds hottest in England, 30lbs., A. Hirst 30lbs., J. Wilcock 70lbs., R. Halliday 26lbs., Cleminson and Taylor 100lbs., W. Morris 60lbs., W. Whetstone 30lbs., W. R. Miles 50lbs., J. Howard 200lbs., W. Spillman 20lbs., W. Collings 20lbs., Dr. Herd 20lbs., Tams and Sons 30lbs., W. Dormer 60lbs., G. Harland 30lbs., Mr. Hope 60lbs., J. C. Barnes 120lbs., Judge Battye 100lbs. I could fill this paper with successful exhibitors' names supplied by me last year, not with 1 or 2lbs., so as to be able to compete for specials. Anyone who saw any of above gentlemen's birds last season will admit they were the hottest out.

HARRY ALLEN.
Ow' Bill, Werta' Goin'?

Am going to Harry Allen's. Why, that's just where I am going. There's no doubt about it, the old sport stands alone for British. I have a real Peathroat cock Goldfinch, a very large bird, housemoulted, with a most beautiful scarlet blaze, as steady as a rock, will pick from your fingers, and bred mules last year, he is singing hard, and very fit, price, 12/6, cage included, this is a very good bird; hand-reared cock Larks, house-moulted, can be heard 100 yards away when bung out of doors, 10/6 each; they are the talk of Leeds; other Larks, singing grand, as straight as arrows, and not a broken feather in them, 2/6 and 3/6; a few singing extra loud, 4/-, with new cage with any of them 1/- extra. I have a few contest Linnets to dispose of, either for quality singing or time singing, one guinea each; Linnets, in full song, with a beautiful polished cage and my book of secrets, and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6, this is a real bargain. Look, fierce singing cock Linnets, with blood-red breasts and extra loud voices, with new cage and my book of secrets, right for catching or contest singing, only 2/6. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. I have a grand lot of steady muling Linnets, 2/6 each, for which I hold the world's record; deposit your money with the Editor of this paper for honest stuff; all on seven days' approval; beautiful cock Canaries, singing hard, 7/6, 8/6, and 10/6; good hens, 3/-, 3/6 and 4/6 each; a beautiful cock Linnet, with hen Canary, 5/-; a very large cock Greenfinch with hen Canary 4/-; Goldfinch, with hen Canary, 7/6; my new book, 9d. each; all the above are in the pink of condition. Please state wants; plenty in stock; no waiting, and write to the largest British bird dealer in the world.—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

Another Bird-room Bought right out,

Including a lot of Breeding Cages, Flights, Norwich and Yorkshire show cages and cases, all of the best quality and practically good as new. The birds consist of Norwich Plainheads and Yorkshires, some of them costing very long figures. This entire clearance is owing to business pressure of late owner. They have been purchased for much less than quarter cost, and I shall give purchasers the advantage of this, as all are for sale. This is an unprecedented opportunity for the time of year, to obtain high-class, reliable birds and cages at a nominal figure. Please state requirements. For a few others see the following bargains:—

PLAIN-HEADED NORWICH COCKS.—Clear Yellows, 6/6, 7/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- upwards. Clear Buff, 6/-, 6/6, 6/6, 10/6. 12/6, 15/-, 20/- upwards. Ticked or Variegated, 5/-, 5/6, 6/-, 6/6, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6 upwards. PLAIN-HEADED NORWICH HENS.—Clear Yellow, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Clear Buff, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-. Ticked or Variegated, 2/9, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-. Pairs Norwich Plainheads, matched for breeding, 7/6, 8/6, 9/6. CRESTED BRED HENS.—4/6, 5/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 40/-. CRESTED COCKS.—7/6, 8/6, 10/6, to 100/-. CRESTED HENS.—5/6, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- up.

COCKS! CRESTED BRED. Some large feathery birds—simply given away at 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 up.

MATCHED PAIRS FOR BREEDING CRESTS.—12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- up.

YORKSHIRES.—The Value of all Values, including Greens, Cinnamons, Clears, Ticks, Marked and Variegated. See for yourself if wanting this variety; it is the only absolute proof. Now note some prices:—Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-; hens, 3/6, 4/-, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-. Pairs matched for breeding, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- up.

Feeding Hens.

3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; the latter suitable for all large varieties. Beware of hens offered as feeders that are only erect small Belgians, or Germans; they are too small for feeding anything but the smallest varieties.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all Infringers and Imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four week's trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us, and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

Phones: Gerrard 7708, London Wall 5489. Telegrams, "Highbred, London."

WILLSONS.

Now please remember that during the last 18 years I have bred thousands of Budgerigars, and I publicly wager £50 that I have imported, manufactured, sold, and shipped more wired cokernut husk nests for Budgerigar breeding than any other man living; so have any bragging copyists, or so-called shippers sufficient British pluck to accept? If so, step forward; if not, don't brag, but stand down. For 18 years my husks have been unequalled. Don't be gulled by inexperienced shopkeepers; listen to what experts say:—"Cage Birds" says they are "far superior to the old husks." "Feathered World" says: "Undoubtedly, the new husks are very superior to the old." Again, "Exchange and Mart" says: "Those prepared by Mr. Harper are very superior to the old style, which often fall to pieces at the most critical time, with disastrous results for the nestlings. You had better order the improved form; even if it is a little dearer than the old-fashioned sort, it is cheaper in the long run." "Fur and Feather" tells its correspondents: "They have distinct advantages over the old sort." "Poultry" has said: "For Budgerigars we advise the use of the improved style of husks." Surely these are convincing testimonials.

Don't forget, you have the benefit of 18 years' practical breeding experience. I don't keep a shop; one quality only, the best. My "Improved Secure" husks are 4/6 dozen, smaller quantities 5d. each. Few Cockateel nest boxes 1/6 each. Illustrated pamphlet, entitled "Budgerigar Breeding," free on application.
HARPER, HUSK IMPORTER, WOLVERHAMPTON.

NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held May 11th, when a large number of members listened to a fine lecture by Mr. S. W. Birchley, the well-known British bird exhibitor, entitled "Birds of the Countryside." The lecturer dealt with the life of the birds, what they fed upon, how they bred, their habits, incubation, etc. Questions were asked by Messrs. Craighill, Odell, Woods, Kenyon, Norris, which were answered in a very straightforward manner. Mr. Craighill proposed, and Mr. Aspinall seconded, that the best thanks of the society he given to Mr. Birchley for his lecture, which brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.—JOHN DAVEY, Hon. Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND BIRD CLUB.

Usual monthly meeting held May 1st in Nelson's Hotel, Ingram-street, Glasgow, President C. Hunter in the chair. The services of Mr. C. Campbell have been secured as judge for the Crests, Plainheads, and Yorkshires, Mr. Smillie will judge the Borders, and Mr. R. V. Raine the Mules, British, and Foreign birds at our annual show in November. Mr. Lawrie was to have given a paper on Canary and Mule breeding, but mistook the date of meeting. Messrs. Fernie, Coogan, and Haddon were proposed and enrolled. New members are still being received. Particulars may be had from me.—GEO. SMART, Sec., Carmyle, Glasgow.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Monthly meeting, held at Nag's Head Cocoa House, May 4th, Mr. Crane in the chair. Considering the counter-attractions of the race week, there was a very good attendance. A new member was elected from Carnarvon. After some discussion it was decided not to hold the usual nest feather show this year. The date for our annual old bird show of Canaries, British Birds and Mules was fixed for Dec. 4th, and owing to the lateness of the meeting, it was decided to consider the schedule of same at next meeting. The secretary was instructed to ask Mr. C. Houlton if he would be at liberty to judge. Some interest has been aroused by the success of Mr. R. N. Williams, one of our enthusiastic members, he having succeeded in getting a Greenfinch-Bullfinch on May 2nd, an early date—an inital attempt at hybridising. — J. SWINDLEY, Hon. Sec.

GREAT HARWOOD AND DIS. C.B.S.

The annual ramble took place on May 19th, when a party of about 22 members and friends journeyed to Hurst Green, by way of Edge End, Wiltshire. Starting at Towngate at 8 a.m., the party on reaching the green fields came across the nests of the following, namely: Blackbird, Thrush, Missel Thrush, Titlark, Peewit, Waterhen, Chaffinch, Robin, Hedge Sparrow, and last of all a wild duck, sitting on a grand nest of 8 eggs. On reaching Hurst Green, at about 1 o'clock, the party broke up, some going to Deane Bottoms, while the others went to Manor House Farm, where a good, substantial meal was provided by both parties. On leaving, we went through Winckley Hall grounds, returning hy way of Hacking Boat and Whalley Nab, reaching home at about six o'clock, the party voting it to be one of the most enjoyable rambles in the history of the club. It was decided to have another in about a month's time.—GEO. WADDINGTON, Hon. Secretary.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held May 6th, when a large number of members and friends met to hear Mr. Allan Silver on "British Birds." A most enjoyable and instructive evening was spent. In the unavoidable absence of the chairman, Mr. F. Cole was elected to the chair for the evening. Mr. Silver upon rising said he had departed somewhat from the programme. He had not prepared a paper to read before them, but instead he had brought with him a number of plates of British birds, both in black and white and colours, which he proposed handing round for their inspection, and he hoped that while looking at the plates, they would raise any topic or ask any question they might suggest to them, and he would be pleased to answer them. Mr. Silver was kept very busy indeed, many most interesting topics being raised, and much useful knowledge gained. Mr. Cranfield proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Silver and Mr. J. W. Norris warmly supported this vote, which was carried unanimously. A vote of thanks to Mr. Cole for his services in the chair closed the meeting.—W. HODSON, Hon. Sec.

A Lecture on the Norwich Plainhead.

On April 22nd members assembled at headquarters to hear Mr. G. Gardner deliver a special lecture on the Norwich Plainhead. Mr. G. F. Woolhouse, who presided, referred to the lecturer's great experience as a breeder, exhibitor, and judge of this particular variety. The lecture, which was somewhat on original lines, was listened to with keenest interest by those present. He based his remarks on three points, viz., breeding for colour, shape and size; green blood; and antecedents. Mr. Gardner said he disagreed entirely with the efforts being made by some writers in the Fancy Press to put the clear bird in the top position amongst the Norwich Plainheads. He thought it was a great mistake, for he agreed with some of the writers who held that if they put the clear into the top position, it would cause breeders to breed for clears, and thus very greatly destroy the efforts of the Fancy to breed for colour.

He was, he said, a strong supporter of the use of green blood to establish colour in a strain and keeping it there. He thought, too, a good way of producing colour and shape was by the use of the Buff Green hen to Yellow cocks, if for shape; or of Buff Green cocks to Yellow hens, for Buff Greens usually possessed shape and meal and quality. Of course, he meant Buff Greens, and not mouse-coloured birds. He did not agree that all the colour came from the cock and the shape from the hen. If they bred the colour well into the strain they could keep it up quite as well by breeding from Green, or heavily variegated Green hens as from similar cocks, and Buff Green bred from plenty of Yellow blood in the strain would produce colour even if used on the hen's side as if used on the cock's.

Mr. Gardner dwelt at some length on the question of antecedents, as he said he considered that a most important point. For instance, a breeder had a short, thick-set hen, and he selected for her a cock possessing just a little too much length; which he did, on the ground that the hen controlling the shape would counteract in the young the cock bird's little extra length. There a fancier often made a mistake. Let him just sit down and think what was the cock bred from. Was he bred from birds of similar shape to himself? If so, what would be the result? And what was the hen bred from; from parents one or other of which had similar characteristics to the cock it was proposed to pair her to? If so, was it wise to mate the rather long male bird to her? Would not some of the similar faults in her antecedents reproduce themselves? Mr. Gardner advocated a thorough enquiry into and knowledge of antecedents in building up a strain as the only sure way to success. It was not altogether what a breeder could see in two birds, but what he knew also of their antecedents that made for success in the progeny. The same remarks applied to colour in this connection as to shape. His object was to create thoughtful breeders, and not encourage the idea that fanciers had only to buy winners at the different shows, and mate them together from outward appearances, and then expect splendid results. For such a policy often produced bitter disappointment. Money could do a great deal, but it was no use in bird-breeding, even though it might be in bird showing without brains. On this question of antecedents he wanted fanciers to think, watch, and store up results, for he believed that if they did so, they would be able almost to see at a glance what bird it was desirable (or the reverse) to introduce as a change for strength into their stock. Even then they should never do so without enquiry as to antecedents. No doubt there were isolated instances in which show specimens bought haphazard did "hit off" well together and produce good young, but the instances were rare, and, besides, a great amount of pleasure, profit, and instruction were lost by such a course.

Asked with regard to the question of marks and clears, Mr. Gardner said he thought the position feasible and wise, which supported Mr. G. E. Weston's view, that a bird with a tick not to be seen by the naked eye should be passed by the judge as a clear. The lecturer said he was opposed to the judge having to catch and overhaul the birds to find a tick, and thought the new decision of the Norwich Plainhead Club a sensible one. Asked again what he would do with a variegated Buff of fair size, shape, and quality, bred from two Yellows, he said he would pair it to a tight, thick-set ticked Buff hen. He laid great stress upon the presence of undercolour in a Buff bird; and, in reply to a question as to what he meant by undercolour, said: The yellow stratum below the meal, which made it appear as if the mealing sat upon a beautiful, rich ground, allowing the foundation to be seen through the mealing. Questioned as to the introduction of Cinnamon blood, Mr. Gardner replied that this depended upon the kind of feather the Cinnamon carried. But why need novices be making experiments best suited to large breeders when he could get the manufactured article ready to hand? A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Gardner for his interesting lecture, and a similar vote to the chair closed the meeting.—C. F. WOOLHOUSE.

EDINBURGH NORWICH & M.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at rooms, 142, High-st., on 6th May, when there was a large attendance. The following well-known judges have consented to act at our annual show on 20th November: for Norwich and Crests, Mr. A. G. Cameron (Kelso); for Border Fancies, Mr. W. McAdam; for British and Foreign birds, Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh). Mr. Dewar has also consented to judge our Young Bird Show on 10th July. The Secretary was asked to make enquiries respecting a ramble on a Saturday afternoon, and to invite friends to same. The meeting then adjourned.—WM. HOLTON, Sec.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting, held at headquarters, Spencer Hall, Spencer Road, Dartmouth Park Hill, N., on April 29th, Mr. G. Gardner presiding. The table show of British birds brought forth a crowded house, both of members and visitors. Our late secretary, Mr. W. Reynolds, paid us a welcome visit from Nottingham. A vote of thanks to Mr. A. Silver, who judged, brought the meeting to a close. Next meeting, at headquarters, May 27th, at 8.30 p.m., when Mr. Geo. Gardner will lecture on "Crests of the Olden Time, and Crests of To-day." A hearty welcome extended to all.—Geo. H. NEAL, Hon. Sec.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY NATIONAL DERBY ASSOCIATION.

Membership, 1909, continued: Messrs. J. Fairley (Coatbridge), L. Jackson (Kirkmuirhill), W. Beattie (Dundee), W. Lees, J. Orr, John Orr, and J. Shannon (Glasgow), J. Pollock (Cambuslang), G. C. T. Hope and J. Dalgleish (Edinburgh), R. Carmyllie (Broughty Ferry), J. Carson (Dalkeith), F. Strathearn (Alloa), J. D. Maxwell and D. Maxwell (Falkirk), R. Findlay (Darvel), J. Burnside (Lesmahagow), J. Moyes and A. Leslie (Thornton), C. Wright (Lesmahagow), Mr. McFarlane and Mr. Nairn (Glasgow), A. Lang (Rutherglen), R. Willison (Barrow-in-Furness), W. McArthur (Paisley), W. Muirhead (Bonnybridge), W. Gibb (Wishaw), M. Smith (Falkirk), A. Galston and J. Fleming (Glasgow), W. Hutchison (Slamannan), C. F. Dunlop (Uddingston), J. Chaplin and J. McMahon (Glasgow), M. Frew (Neilston), J. Noble (Bonnyrigg), N. O'Donnell, W. Lambie, J. Struthers (Paisley), J McLennan (Edinburgh), T. Jackson (Kirkmuirhill), M. Muirhead (Alloa). New members, it will be observed, have come well forward. We will only be too glad to have more, and, of course, shall expect former friends to continue with us.—THOS. SMITH, Sec.

LLANELLY AND COUNTY F.A.

Meeting held at headquarters on May 11th, when there was an excellent attendance. The cage bird classification for the forthcoming show to be held on December 7th, was discussed and practically decided upon. There will be eleven classes for cage birds, which will be judged by Mr. C. A. House.—S. H. GASCOIGNE, Hon. Sec.

EDINBURGH SOUTHERN O.S.

Monthly meeting held in Buchanan's Hotel, High Street, May 12th. The following gentlemen have consented to judge our annual show on October 30th: Mr. J. Cook (Cowdenheath) for Scotch Fancies, and Mr. C. Miller (Leith) for Norwich and other varieties. The principle business was a discussion anent prize cards, and it was agreed to leave that part of the business over till next meeting. The Secretary read out a subscription list which had been got up by the Musselburgh O.S. in aid of a brother fancier, who is unable to follow his employment through bad health. I hope fanciers will kindly respond.—S. HEWITT, Secretary.

WOOD GREEN AND DIS. F.F.A.

Usual monthly meeting, held on May 11th, a lecture by Mr. C. A. House attracting a record attendance. Those present were well repaid for their trouble. The lecturer gave a very interesting and instructive address on "How to Become a Successful Breeder and Exhibitor," after which questions were asked and answered, and the lecturer was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. Many new members were made, and we are pleased to say the society is growing very fast. Visitors are welcome to our meetings on the second Tuesday in each month, at 165, High-road, Wood Green.—T. CALLEGARI, Sec.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at usual place on May 6th, when Mr. Currah presided. There were fully 70 members present. The schedule of annual show, with one or two slight alterations, was approved of. There will be 115 classes, including members' classes. Messrs. Thos. Robson and J. Maddison have again been chosen to judge at our First Feather Show, on July 11th. The following were elected to membership, viz.:—Messrs. Thirwell (Benwell), Dixon (Choppington), Woolett (Barrington), T. Thompson (Gateshead), T. Jones (Gosforth), and A. Thompson (Heaton). Other business was quickly got through, as the members were anxious to hear Mr. Gilhespy's paper on "The Norwich Plainhead."—CURRY and HUTCHINSON.

SOWERBY BRIDGE AND DIS. C.B.S.

On May 8th, at the Bull's Head Hotel, Mr. Cruise gave a lecture. There was a good attendance, amongst whom we noticed friends from Bradford and Halifax, etc. Mr. Cruise stated that he had been a fancier for 22 years, and gave an excellent and interesting lecture, naming the various methods he adopted with success himself. He also gave plenty of valuable information. There was a lively discussion afterwards. Mr. Cruise was heartily thanked for his kindness in coming at great inconvenience to himself. The lecturer suitably replied, and one and all expressed their feelings at having spent a most profitable evening.—A. E. MORTON, Hon. Sec.

EDINBURGH NORWICH & M.B.S.

Through the kindness of Mr. T. Speedie, the members held a ramble over the estate of Colonel Gilmour, at Neither Liberton, on May 6th. There was a large attendance of members and friends, the weather being all that could be desired. In our walk over the estate a great number and variety of birds were seen. Nests, too, were very plentiful, especially those of the Thrushes and Blackbirds, many of them containing young. A very noticeable feature was the number of young birds ready for the wing. A pleasant afternoon was spent. After a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. T. Speedie, the company returned home.—W. HOLTON, Secretary.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at Ye Olde Boar's Head, Manchester, on May 1st, and a good number of fanciers attended. A communication from the Toronto C.B.S., making an offer to exchange medals with the L. and L.F.A., and so give an added interest in the coming show season 1909-10, was read. We unanimously decided to exchange two silver medals with them, the same to be selected later on. Applications for patronage were left over until our next meeting, which will be held at Oldham in connection with Oldham First Feather Show. Two new members were made, Mr. J. Green (Leigh), one of the promoters of the L. and L.F.A., rejoining us after a long absence. Mr. W. Bason (Rawtenstall), a new recruit, was the other new member. Others are promised for next meeting. A hearty vote of thanks brought the meeting to a close. Will all Societies desiring L. and L.F.A. patronage kindly send on their applications as early as possible, so that we can discuss them at next meeting.—JOHN RUKIN, Hon. Sec.

SWINDON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

A Discussion on Breeding and Feeding.

Monthly meeting held in the Mechanics' Institute on May 8th. It was decided to give two medals, for Canaries and British respectively, for points gained at members' monthly shows. At next meeting the first show for British will be held. It is hoped Mr. Poole will be able to judge. The chairman, Mr. W. Greenwood, then proceeded to open a discussion on "Breeding and Feeding." He said that although we all had our fads, he did not think there was any royal road to success. The first essential for all sorts of Canaries was a good roomy cage, and especially was this true in the case of Crests. In spite of the objections urged against the platforms on the ground of their gathering the dirt and harbouring red mite, he considered they had compensating advantages, and always used them himself. He also strongly advocated using nest pans of different sizes, giving the hen a small size to sit in, and when the young were about ten days old transferring them to a larger one. In transferring the young he never moved them singly, but always lifted the whole brood out in one handful, believing that thereby less disturbance was caused. In spite of occasional lean years occurring amongst the most successful of breeders, cleanliness and good food could be relied upon to produce strong, healthy youngsters in the majority of instances. Men who were away from home all day, he considered, were at a great disadvantage, unless fortunate enough to possess wives, as who were as deeply interested in the birds as they?

He thought egg-food killed more birds than anything else; that was, when the egg-food was allowed to turn sour, it was responsible for a large proportion of the deaths among the young stock. See how ravenous they are, he said, and if they are fed with sour food what must the result be? He thought that with fresh eggs and bread crumbs finer and stronger birds could be bred than with anything else. However, he thought that in the very hot weather, the food kept better if two thin lunch biscuits were substituted for some of the bread. Sometimes in thunder-storms the egg-food went sour very rapidly, and then if breeders were not careful many young birds would be lost. For the old birds, the plainer the food the better. Canary seed should be the staple food and the best was the cheapest. Birds which grew a great amount of feather could be allowed a more liberal allowance of hemp seed. With regard to rape seed, the older it was the better. Old seed might look distasteful to the eye, but when boiled it was greatly relished by the birds. If half a teaspoonful of inga seed was given to each pair of birds he thought there would be fewer egg-bound hens. Maw seed might with advantage be sprinkled on the egg food when the young were a few days old. When young are first separated from the old birds, no water should be given for two or three days, and then for some time only boiled water. At three or four weeks some birds were very ravenous, and then diarrhœa followed. The best remedy, he thought, was to mix powdered chalk and cuttlefish with the egg-food; in fact powdered cuttlefish might with advantage be added to the egg-food later on through the moulting season.

A keen discussion then followed. In answer to Mr. Bywater, Mr. Greenwood said he generally used watercress as greenfood, but had been afraid to use much in the present season as the nights had been so frosty. He did not object to mixed seeds if given only occasionally as a change. With regard to changing the nests, Mr. Sprules said he gave a clean nest pan to a brood nine days old, whereupon the hen refused to feed or notice them and all were dead next morning. It was his first, and he thought it would be his last experience of changing nest pans. Mr. Hopkins thought it best to change the nests before the young had their eyes open. He dusted the nest with pyrethrum powder when the hen began to sit, and again after about eight days. Two or three times while the hen was sitting he gave her a bath with the chill taken off. Mr. Smith thought that the boiling of rape must remove some of its nourishing properties, and render it liable to soon turn sour. He was obliged to prepare his egg-food at night for the following day. He stood it in a basin of cold water, and it always kept sweet for at least twenty-four hours. He added a teaspoonful of sugar and a pinch of salt to each egg, believing that the salt produced thirst in the hen, causing her to leave the nest more frequently and thus preventing sweating.

WALLASEY AND DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, May 6th, Mr. Woodman in the chair. The secretary announced he had made final arrangements respecting the removal of headquarters; so will members kindly note that on and after July the monthly meeting will be held in the Fairhaven Institute, Sea View-road, Liscard. The season's specials were then discussed, the secretary reporting having received a splendid nickel-plated coffee-pot and teapot from the president, W. H. Lever, Esq., M.P. The fixing of specials will be left over till the June meeting. Mr. S. Hadwin then opened a most interesting and instructive discussion on the rearing of young birds, dealing very fully from the time the hen commences to sit until the young are ou to seed. Questions from right and left were "fired" at Mr. Hadwin, and were answered in a most satisfactory manner. A very hearty vote of thanks was accorded him, and the meeting adjourned.—WM. MALLINSON, Sec.

HARTLEPOOLS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held on May 5th, at which the resignation of our esteemed Secretary (Mr. Williams) was accepted with regret. We are sure that all fanciers will wish him a speedy recovery to his usual good health. It was decided to make arrangements for our annual outing to Wynyard Park. The members present, as a whole, had good reports to give concerning the breeding season. In the Norwich section, Mr. Papple had 7 young and 4 hens sitting, whilst Mr. Robinson had 14 young and 3 on eggs. Mr. Smith was also fortunate, he having 6 young and 3 hens ready to batch. Mr. Booth and Mr. Whittet were each well on the way to success, and Mr. Ward—a new member—and the Rev. Mr. Bennett (who was also proposed and accepted a member) are both doing very well. Myself—well, I don't think I have ever done better, as I have between 20 and 30 young Yorks, and have several hens on the point of hatching. So that, all being well, I shall again have a good season. Mr. Ronald is putting up late, and Mr. Hillier is, as usual, going in for Hybrid breeding on a rather extensive scale.—ERNEST WOODHEAD.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF SCOTLAND.

Meeting held on May 4th, a good turn-out of members being present. The classification for First Feather Show was fixed as follows:—1, Cl. or tkd. yell.; 2, ditto buff; 3, variegated or Cinn yell.; 4, ditto buff. The allocation of specials was then decided on, these being: gold medal (presented by Dr. C. Syson), for best young bird; silver medal (presented by Mr. W. B. Cobb), for best bird shown by a novice; two specials (presented by Mr. Alex. Leitch), for best second and best third birds; two specials (presented by the president, Mr. R. B. Gibb), for best fourth and best fifth birds; 1s. special (presented by Mr. Andrew Robertson), for each commended bird; special (presented by Mr. J. Smith), for best pink-eyed clear or marked Cinnamon; 3s. for most points and 2s. for second most points given by the club. Entry fee 4d. per bird. The secretary was instructed to engage a hall for show as soon as possible. As we are still undecided on meeting place, a special committee was elected to look for a suitable hall, and report to secretary, to enable him to fix the hall they decide on for our next meeting. Mr. T. Penman then kindly gave us a lecture on "The Ideal Breeding and Training Cage," and the cage Mr. Penman exhibited proved a revelation to everyone. At the close Mr. Penman was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. I should be pleased if Open Show secretaries would apply for the club's patronage as soon as possible, the closing date for same is June 24th.—FRED. BOWMAN, Hon. Sec.

We hear that Camborne (Cornwall) Show is fixed for November 4th, and that Mr. W. G. Poole, will judge.

Our show will be held on January 6th, writes Mr. J. Walters, hon. secretary of the Waunarlwydd P.P. and C.B.S.

Mr. J. W. Bancroft (Sale) will judge at our First Feather Show on June 26th, writes Mr. J. Irlam, secretary Sale Open O.S.

We hear that Mr. W. P. Barnes (Grantham) is one of the judges elected for the St. Helen's show, to held Novemher 19th and 20th next.

I have removed from Barningham Street, writes Mr. J. Forster (P.C.), and my present address is 42, Kingston Street, Darlington.

We have engaged Mr. A. Wellings to judge at our annual show on Novemher 5th, writes Mr. J. W. Marsden, hon. secretary of the Blackhurn and Dis. C.B.S.

Thanks for the original sketch of my King Parrakeet, writes Miss Flora Brammer (Fulham). I am very pleased with same. It looks very nice on the cover of CAGE BIRDS.

All fanciers interested in that "wee gem," the Border Fancy Canary, should hear Mr. Rohson's lecture at the Dulwich O.S. headquarters, May 27th. (See club notices).—(ADVT.)

Our first feather show will be held at the Saracen's Head Hotel on June 10th, writes Mr. J. Houghton, secretary of the Gloucester and District C.B.S. Mr. J. H. Payne will judge.

Five small Robins are taking their first lessons in aviation in a hedroom at Mayfield Road, Sanderstead, Surrey, the mother hird having reared them in a nest on the top of a cupboard.

We are having a country ramhle on Sunday, May 23rd, writes Mr. A. Waud, hon. sec. ot the Yorks C.B.S. All membhers and their friends wishing to join us kindly meet at the station at 9.30 a.m.

Will secretaries kindly note my change of address from Kilhurn to 30, Wellesley Road, Harrow-on-the-Hill, writes Mr. J. A. Simpson. On and after June 1st all correspondence should he addressed to me there.

Our First Feather Show will be held in the Engineers' Arms, Ormond Street, Jarrow, on July 10th, writes Mr. Robt. Blore, hon. secretary of the Jarrow, Hebhurn and Dis. C.B.S., and our annual show on Novemher 27th.

We are having our annual ramhle on Sunday, May 23rd, to Hodder Wood, writes Mr. J. W. Marsden, hon. secretary of the Blackburn and Dis. C.B.S. Members and friends will meet at Blackburn station at 9.45 a.m. All bird lovers are invited.

Readers should remember that they have but two more days in which to generously send in their new-laid eggs for distribution among the London hospitals under "The Poultry World" Hospital Egg Week scheme. All contributions of eggs heartily welcomed; see page 484 last week for full details.

At our last monthly meeting, writes Mr. Wm. Massey, hon. secretary, Bolton and Dis. Roller C.S., we altered our open show date from Decemher 17th and 18th to December 31st and January 1st, on account of the former date clashing with Bury.

We have engaged Mr. Bond (Southport) to judge the cage hirds on May 29th (Whit Saturday), writes Mr. W. Aitken, hon. secretary of the Bangor and Dis. F.S. I hope he will get good support from fanciers in the surrounding district, as it our first venture.

At our meeting held on May 11th, writes Mr. F. Steeple, secretary, Oldham and Dis. C.B.S., it was decided to hold our First Feather Show at headquarters, the Textile Dining Rooms, on July 3rd. Mr. W. Hardy will judge.

The three-guinea cup presented by Mr. W. Turton to the Leeds C.B.S., to be won outright by a member this year, writes Mr. J. Chambers, the hon. secretary, is now on view at Mr. Turton's North Street Stores, so that fanciers in the district can go and see this valuable special.

At a well-attended meeting of the Barton-on-Humber C. and B.B.C., held at the Red Lion Inn on May 13th, writes Mr. E. C. Dunn, hon. secretary, it was decided to hold a First Feather Show on June 19th. Any fancier in the district wishing to join, I shall be very pleased to hear from.

Kindly note my change of address from Portland Street to 104, Cemetery Road, Southport, writes Mr. Benj. Bullough, secretary of the Southport and Dis. C.B.S., where all communications must he sent in future. Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington) is engaged to judge at our annual show on Decemher 11th.

The Kent County C.B.A., writes Mr. Geo. Sanderson, the hon. secretary, have arranged for a ramble to take place, weather permitting, on Saturday, May 29th. Will those who desire to join us please meet on Buckland Bridge, Dover, 1.45 p.m. prompt? Fanciers welcomed.

I shall be pleased to receive applications from secretaries of northern societies desirous of having the patronage of the Northern Crest Club for the annual shows, writes Mr. J. G. Hutchinson, the hon. secretary of the N.C.C. To obtain our patronage there must be six classes for Crests, viz., four for old and two for young birds. I shall also he glad to hear from anyone desirous of becoming a member.

The British Roller C.C. have in hand the new rule hook with the names and addresses of the members, writes Mr. J. W. Norris, the hon. secretary. Roller fanciers who have an idea of joining the club (and they cannot do better) will greatly ohlige by sending their names in at once, so that they can be included in this year's rule book. Any further information may be had on application to me at 31, Scylla Road, Peckham Rye, London, S.E.

We are holding our first young bird show on June 10th, at our headquarters, "The Crown Hotel," Lavender Hill, S.W., writes Mr. Ernest Box, hon. secretary of the Metropolitan C.B.A.

Fanciers should note that the Millom and District C.B.A. is now open to all comers. writes Mr. J. Thomas, the hon. secretary, and that the annual subscription is 2s. 6d. up to July 1st, after which date it will rise sixpence per month up to the end of the year. All intending membhers should communicate with me at 83, Lonsdale Road, Millom.

At our last meeting, writes Mr. R. H. Turner, hon. secretary of the Morley and Dis. C.B.S., we decided to have our first annual ramble on Whit Monday. We leave Morley at ahout 6 o'clock, and go hy tram from Churwell to Leeds, and then on to Rodley, where we make a start for Ilkley across the moor. It is hoped a good number of both members and friends will make up the party.

Valuahle special prizes have heen accepted by the following clubs for competition amongst those members who colour-feed solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers during tho coming season:—The Norwich Plainhead Club, Southern Norwich Plainhead Club, Yorkshire Open Norwich Canary Club, Yorkshire Canary Club, Southern Yorkshire Club, Yorkshire Union, Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire Club. Ramsden's special prize scheme has caught on, and promises to be a huge success. To colour-feed properly use Ramsden's Pure Peppers, the hest the world produces, and the accepted standard of perfection.—(ADVT.)

Mr. B. BARDSLEY (Oldham).

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. F. Steeple, secretary of the Oldham and Dis. C.B.S., I write to inform you of the death of one of our most respected Lancashire and Lizard fanciers, Mr. Ben Bardsley, in his 69th year. He died very suddenly in his chair on May 9th. He was interred at Greenacres cemetery, on May 13th, and the society was represented hy Messrs. J. W. Cocker and F. Steeple. He had been a memher of our society for a great number of years. He was an ardent lover of the Lancashire and the Lizard Canary, and had been a hreeder and exhibitor of those varieties for upwards of forty years. I am sure all fanciers will join me in conveying our deepest sympathy and condolence to his family in their bereavement.

We regret to hear that death bas suddenly removed from a large circle of friends Mrs. B. Turner, the widow of the late Mr. Ben. Turner, of Rochdale, who achieved great fame as an exhibitor of Lancashire Canaries, especially yellow Plainheads. Mrs. Turner was one of the most devoted and respected workers in connection with the ladies' stall, which has become such an acceptahle feature of the Rochdale O.S. Annual Show.

The Glasgow and Western Counties ramble to Thorntonhall takes place on Saturday, May 22nd, writes Mr. T. Drysdale, the secretary.

The next meeting of the Llanelly and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. Daniel John, the secretary, is an important one. If members do not attend I shall have no option but to resign the secretaryship.

The enterprising proprietors of the now well-known "Fox's Egg and Biscuit Food" have just placed upon the market another article which promises to become as famous and as widely-used as is the above commodity. It is, we venture to think, an article which a great number of cage-hird fanciers will be very glad to give a trial to, for it is designed to save them a lot of time, trouble, and expense in the colour-feeding of their hirds. The new food is to be known as "Fox's Egg, Biscuit and Colour-food," and, as its name implies, it is a combination of their celebrated egg and hiscuit preparation with one of the finest quality bird-peppers it is possible to ohtain. This particular tasteless pepper has been secured only after great research and trouble hy Messrs. Fox Bros., who are convinced they have one of the richest-coloured peppers ever put before fanciers. All the bird-keeper has to do is to add a few drops of water to the required quantity of "Egg, Biscuit and Colour Food," to have ready a feed which will hring out his birds hot enough in colour for the keenest competition. It is packed at full strength, and how this can be modified (as may be required) is explained in the directions on the tins. A sample tin of this new food has heen sent to us, and from its rich appearance and wholesome taste we feel convinced it will hear out all that Messrs Fox. Bros. claim for it. Our readers should certainly order a tin from their local seedsman; or send 8d. or 1s. 4d. direct to Messrs. Fox. Bros., Granville House, Arundel Street, Strand, London, W.C., when a tin will reach them, post free.

Green Marked Yorkshire C.C.

A meeting for the formation of the above will be held at the Market Tavern, Bradford, on Saturday, May 22nd, at 7.30 p.m. All intending members urgently requested to attend. Business: election of officers and committee for 1909, etc.—F. ARMSTRONG, secretary pro tem, 78, Pear Street, Halifax.

Southern Norwich P.C.

Will clubs within our radius make application for patronage at once, as we are allotting same to ten clubs instead of six this forthcoming show season? Will clubs also mention if other specials are being given to our members at their shows, so that we may advertise same in our printing matter? Corrected addresses of members I shall bo pleased to receive, and subscriptions for the year.—F. S. MATTHES, hon. treasurer and sec.

RESULT OF THE "MOST POPULAR BIRD" COMPETITION

This competition, it will he remembered, arose out of a letter sent us hy a correspondent, in which he asked us to place 17 species of hirds in their relative order of popularity. Not feeling exactly equal to this task (though we were pleased to give him our opinion for so much as it was worth), we left the matter in the hands of our readers, to settle it by vote. The analysing of the voting coupons sent in bas taken up considerahle time, hut we are at last in a position to give the result.

The list of hirds was as follows:—Yorkshire Canary; Redpoll; Linnet; Hawfinch; Bramhlefinch; Bullfinch; Parrot; Chaffinch; Greenfinch; Norwich Canary; Blackhird; Goldfinch; Thrush; Woodlark; Skylark; Starling; Siskin. Their relative popularity is revealed by the voting to he:

|---|---|
| First | Norwich Canary |
| Second | Yorkshire Canary. |
| Third | Goldfinch. |
| Fourth | Linnet. |
| Fifth | Bullfinch. |
| Sixth | Skylark. |
| Seventh | Thrush. |
| Eighth | Greenfinch |
| Ninth | Siskin. |
| Tenth | Chaffinch. |
| Eleventh | Blackhird. |
| Twelfth | Redpoll. |
| Thirteenth | Parrot. |
| Fourteenth | Bramblefinch. |
| Fifteenth | Hawfinch. |
| Sixteenth | Woodlark. |
| Seventeenth | Starling. |

Mr. J. W. JEFFERY,
5 and 6, Gwynne Street,
Ealing Road,
Newmarket.

This gentleman had ten of the birds down in their correct (as shown by the analysis) order of popularity. No other competitor succeeded in placing more than nine accurately. Failing any appeal for a scrutiny on or before Friday, May 28th next, the prize will be forwarded to Mr. Jeffery.

Canary men will be interested to learn that the Norwich beat the Yorkshire for first place hy 266 votes to 96, which we venture to think an unlooked-for large majority. In the voting for second position, the Yorkshire easily outdistanced all other competitors. Coming to the British birds, the Goldfinch proved the most popular, with a clear third majority over the Linnet, the latter bird, in its turn, coming in an easy fourth. The Bullfinch, too, was a long way ahead of the Skylark for fifth place. Thence downwards every place was closely contested, it being almost a tie for many of the positions—at least, until the two hottom-most places were reached, for which the Woodlark and Starling were clear candidates.

The Parrot was the most difficult bird to apportion a position; some voters had him first, while others had him last. It may be of interest to say that the hirds which secured votes for premier place were the Norwich, Yorkshire, Goldfinch, Linnet, Parrot, Blackhird, Thrush, Skylark, and Greenfinch—though the last-mentioned four got but six "hands" between them. We noticed that in certain parts of the country certain hirds met with more support than in others—thus in the lists received from metropolitan readers the Chaffinch invariahly occupied a high place.

I hope you are having milder weather down south than we are up north, writes Mr. John G. Hutchinson (Newcastle-on-Tync). The old saying, "Don't change a clout till May's out," seems to hold good, for the frost is still pretty severe at nights; and in the early mornings the hoar-frost is visihle upon the ground and herbage. Bird fanciers are complaining of young ones dying in the nests with plenty of food in their little crops; in fact, it has been so cold this last week or so that hens are leaving their nests altogether. But all genuine fanciers are living in hopes of getting a few young ones later on.

The dates of our next annual show have now been fixed for December 31st, 1909, and January 1st, 1910, writes Mr. J. Winter, hon. secretary of the Scottish National C.B.S. The judges appointed are as follows: for Norwich, Messrs. W. Booth (Hyde) and A. Watson (Kilmarnock); for Crests and Crestbreds, Mr. T. Taylor (Gateshead); for Scotch Fancies and Belgians, Messrs. R. Wright (Greenock) and J. Elder (Tweedmouth); for Border Fancies, Messrs. J. Patterson (Chirnside) and J. W. Bruce (Coldstream); for Cinnamons, Yorkshires, Greens, and Lizards, Mr. J. Robson; for Mules, British and foreign hirds, Messrs. J. Dixon (Wigton), J. Goodfellow (Edinburgh), and C. T. Maxwell (London).

The committee of the South Manchester C.B.S. have arranged with Messrs. Washbourne and Son to have a cage-making demonstration at their next meeting to be held at headquarters, on May 24th, writes Mr. J. C. Spilshury, the hon. secretary. At the same meeting Mr. J. Stirrup will show us how to make cage fronts. These two lectures will be full of items of interest, and I hope as many members as can will make it convenient to be present. Our meetings this year have been very badly attended, and it does not give the committee much encouragement to work, if the rest of the members do not show their willingness to put their shoulders to the wheel and make the society go ahead.

Breeding & Feeding for Colour.

In the early days of colour-feeding nothing but the hottest cayenne was used. Later came the use of dyes, logwood, madder, turmeric, cochineal, and such-like stuffs, which were no doubt more or less harmful when used for the purpose under discussion. More recently, however, has come into prominence the now almost universally used pimento, an innocent, harmless vegetable, largely cultivated in Spain, and used in that country chiefly for soups, gravies, etc. Pimento of the proper kind is exceedingly rich in colouring properties, being known to the bird trade as aveper, sweet, tasteless, or cold pepper. By the use of this pepper alone, it is possible to colour-feed Canaries almost any shade desired; but to colour-feed the birds (especially yellows) to the acme of perfection, a certain amount of hot Natal is required. Natal pepper puts a brightness, a finish, a richer tone on the bird's plumage than can be acquired by the use of tasteless or cold pepper alone, doing away with the dull brickiness usually in evidence when none but cold pepper has been used. The hot Natal also puts a warmth in the bird's system, which helps them to cast off their old plumage easier and quicker. And the sooner a bird gets through the moult, the more even and satisfactory his colour will be. Again, the hot cayenne helps to check the tendency to looseness of the bowels, which a free use of cold pepper alone usually causes. Hot Natal pepper has been the chief butt for those people who look upon any kind of colour-feeding with disfavour. These we are apt to call the "colour-feed faddists," and to what lengths have some of these (shall I say misguided?) people gone? According to their statements, the number of cage birds which have been cruelly done to death by the various and pernicious habits of colour-feeding must be legion. No doubt in many cases it has been done in all good faith, the parties being convinced in their own minds that it was a cruel practice. They have been informed by others that it was so, and have accepted these erroneous statements as facts, instead of testing them personally by practical experience.

Harmless and Beneficial.

But there are others again (and these I have no sympathy with), who have attempted it in a careless, half-hearted, happy-go-lucky way—not having the patience to attend to their birds properly during the moult, and being too tight-fisted and stingy, looking at the matter from an £ s. d. point of view; these, I say, not having succeeded in getting such good results as their more intelligent and persevering brother fanciers, have given up in disgust, and, joining the ranks of the faddists, have condemned tooth and nail a practice which they in their sublime ignorance practically know little or nothing about.

Colour-feeding as we understand it to-day is perfectly harmless. I will go further and say it is beneficial. I don't for a single moment believe that colour-feeding, as practised at the present time, has ever killed a healthy bird, and it would be foolish indeed on the part of anyone to attempt to colour-feed an unhealthy bird.

Someone may ask "Why colour-feed at all?" The answer is obvious—because colour-fed birds are the fashion, in certain varieties. And to be out of the fashion in this respect, is to be out of the exhibition world altogether. Genuine hot Natal pepper does not do half the harm which many would have us believe, as I have on many occasions proved. Just an instance, by way of illustration: some years ago I had a capital exhibition Siskin, a second year bird at least, when I purchased him. He was a splendid Muler, and would pair up to almost anything with feathers on. In fact, I used to say in joke, that if I put a Cochin China hen in to him, "Joey" would have a try to Mule with her. I colour-fed this Siskin for five seasons, with hot Natal alone, also breeding from him each season. He died suddenly shortly after coming, while in my possession, through the fifth moult. Now, according to the doctrine of the colour-feed faddists, this bird's liver must have been eaten away through the bird's being compelled to eat (or rather being allowed to eat, for he was a perfect glutton for feed) so much of this abominable pepper. Not so, however, for I dissected the body, and found every organ in a perfectly healthy condition, and as to his liver, I only wish my own was in anything like the same order.

Not Like Human Beings.

One thing that the faddists neglect to take into consideration when running down the pepper-feeding, is the fact that amongst other things, hot pepper does not affect a cage-bird in the same manner or degree as human beings. Because hot pepper placed on the tongue of a human being tastes hot and fiery, this does not follow that such is the case when a Canary eats it. This cannot be so; otherwise the birds would not devour it so eagerly, or with such apparent relish.

The same holds good in the case of a fine make of insect powder. Get only a small quantity of this up one's nostril, and it will quickly bring on an attack of sneezing. Yet dust this same powder over a nest of eggs when setting a Canary hen, or even over a brood of nestlings which have not opened their eyes, and not the slightest inconvenience will be apparent, either to the sitting hen or to the nestlings. Not, by the way, that I am much of a believer in insect powder as a red mite exterminator; for from what I have observed of its effects in this direction, they are about on a par with the old saying that "Love laughs at locksmiths." For with me the mites have laughed at the powder, and not only that, but have lived and multiplied exceedingly well upon it. In fact, I always seemed to have more mites about when using the powder, and this has caused me to altogether abandon its use.

A Refutation of Grave Charges.

Colour-feeding, say the faddists, is cruel, harmful and dishonest. I will endeavour to the best of my ability to refute these grave charges. It is cruel, they say, to force the birds to eat that which they have an aversion to, withholding from them their rightful diet, such as Canary seed, etc. This is absurd on the face of it. For, given good, properly-prepared colour-food during their first or nest feather moult, very few indeed will be the Canaries or Mules which will not willingly partake of it; and this, mind you, without withholding from them their customary seed diet.

During the past 15 years I have moulted and colour-fed some hundreds of Canaries, Mules and British birds, and I can safely say that not more than one in fifty have refused to eat the feed quite readily and eagerly, without the slightest compulsion.

It is harmful, say the faddists, as it shortens the lives of the birds, eats away their liver, and causes them to suffer tortures innumerable. If colour-feeding be harmful, how do the faddists account for those varieties which are, and have to be, colour-fed (to stand any chance of success on the show bench) being the longest lived? Show me the Belgian, Scotch Fancy, Crest, or Lancashire, for instance, which lives to as great an age as the average colour-fed Norwich or Mule. The latter live the longer by far than any variety of Canary; yet they consume the greatest amount of hot pepper. Just one more illustration. About twelve years ago I had a capital stud of Norwich Canaries and Muling Finches, and upon my removing into a house where the previous tenant had the misfortune to have to bury a child which died of scarlet fever, Canary plague or septic fever broke out amongst my stock. So severe was the outbreak that I lost between 50 and 60 birds in about a fortnight. What seemed to me a most singular thing was the fact that all the deaths took place amongst the Britishers and those Canaries which had never tasted the colour-feed. I did not save a single Finch, nor yet an unfed Canary. The sole survivors were those Canaries which were on colour-feed—not a single one of these died. This convinced me that there must be some advantage in colour-feeding at any rate.

House's Canary Manual - - - - Post free 1/2

By C. A. House.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price

The Training of Skylarks for Contest Singing.

By ALEX. DONNELLY.

As everyone knows, the Skylark is the most popular British singing bird we have. It is very hardy, and if treated properly will live and sing for years. The Larks build their nests in the fields on the ground in holes, mostly holes made by the cows and horses. They lay mostly four eggs of a very pale blue, heavily marked with brown spots. They sit for 14 days. The young ones are very greedy and very lively. I have known them to run out of the nest when they have been disturbed at 14 days old.

Taking and Feeding Young.

Anyone about to take a nest of young Larks should do so when they are about seven days old, and feed them with a stick or peg. The best food to feed nestlings with is boiled potato and hard boiled egg (as much potato again as egg). Boiled potato and milk is also good, also bread and milk, or ordinary Lard food softened with milk. Do not make any of the food too sloppy, or it will give the birds diarrhœa. As soon as they start picking for themselves they want caging off and putting on to the solid meal.

Get a pennyworth of beef dripping, melt it in the oven, then get half a pound of pea meal, quarter of a pound of bean meal, quarter pound of ground rice, and put the meal and rice in a tin to be cooked in the oven. Mix well together the beef dripping, meal and rice, and cook in a nice warm oven for 20 minutes. Beat up three eggs. When the beef dripping, meal, etc., have cooked, mix the three beaten eggs and a handful of sugar and rub all the lot together in your hands. Put it back in the oven for another fifteen minutes, and do not forget to keep stirring it up. Do not let it burn or it will be spoiled. When it is cold put in an airtight tin or can, and it will keep for months.

Caging off Young Birds.

A nest of young ones that are nicely grown will want caging off by themselves. The ordinary shop cage is suitable, or a "running-cage," one about three feet long, string at the top, will do for a time until you can pick the cocks out. Of course, these young will want a schoolmaster, or good singer, to teach them to sing. It is always best to keep a caught bird before taking a nest, so that he will be singing while the young ones are being brought up. I have known such a bird bring nestlings up himself.

To choose a wild caught bird watch the birds in a shop. You will sometimes have to watch for an hour or two. Always pick out the bird that is the steadiest. Do not, if possible, have the bird that is always flying to the top of the cage; but if you happen to fancy the bird that does, take it home, place it in a position where the family are frequently passing, place a board on the top of the cage to keep it dark, and give him a mealworm, or offer him one every time you go to it. It will usually "cool down" in about a fortnight, and start looking for you to come with the mealworms.

Now, these are the birds I like to train for contest singing. To train them for contest singing, frequent the public bars, taprooms, etc., and get it used to company, and to being knocked about. Give it every chance to sing in a strange place, and you will not have much trouble to train him. You will want some extra food, or what I term "singing meat." To two tablespoonfuls of the above-named meat add and mix the following: Two baby rusks, yolk of a hard-boiled egg, two tablespoonfuls of crushed hemp seed, a spoonful of syrups of violets, and a pinch of maw seed steeped in brandy for four days. You want to start with the "singing meat" at least four days before a contest. Make some dark cover of cloth or box with a lid on, but always have the lid or door where the meat box and drinking glass are. In making a cloth cover, do it so as to cover on the top and three sides of the cage. Leave one side loose so that it can be lifted up when you like. Keep this cover on the cage. Keep the bird dark.

When taking the bird to a contest wrap it well up with some warm covering, besides the one in ordinary use. Go at least two hours before you have to sing your bird. Have about a dozen mealworms that have been steeped in the best Scotch whisky for twelve hours. Give your bird two of these about every ten minutes. When you hear him singing under your cover he is ready. If he is ready too soon, keep offering him a mealworm to keep him on the work, but do not let him have it. This is only to pass the time away until it is your turn. When your turn comes you have only three minutes to get him started. If he is singing in your hand handle the cage gently, and keep tapping with your fingers until the last half-minute. Hang him gently, and he will do his best if you have not neglected to take the meat box off. Remember, he has not seen his meat, except in the dark, for four days.

Cleanliness Before All.

It is always understood that cleanliness is before anything in the case of all kinds of birds. On the night before the contest run your bird into another cage. Clean him out and put some fresh sand in that has been warmed a little. Let the bird have half an hour in this. Do not have any gritty sand for contest singing, as the birds are sure to be picking at it instead of singing. Get the ordinary red sand, and see there is not a speck of white in it, as the bird will be sure to pick at it instead of singing. Anyone who intends going in for contest singing should visit a contest or two before starting. He will then see the workings of it; he will also have an idea as to what is wanted. Some birds will sing very loudly, some very softly. The soft singing ones can stick it the longest, as the loud singers seem to get dry and want to drink often. But I have heard loud singers put some very good time in. Every one likes to hear a loud singer; but if the birds are singing ever so softly, it counts on the watch, as at these contests there is a timekeeper and a judge. The timekeeper has his watch running counting the minutes one by one. The judge has also a watch, and every time the bird stops, if only for a second, the judge stops his second finger on the watch. The judge must have a good ear, also a few fine watches, as I have known many watches spoiled with stopping and starting the watch with the birds. If anyone seeks further information I will be pleased to give it as freely as I give this.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL.

Published in two parts.

PART 1: "HARDBILLS," and PART 2: "SOFTBILLS."

Either Part, PRICE, 1/1 POST FREE. Or 2/3 complete, cloth bound.

Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations of birds and cages. Written and illustrated by that practical fancier, Mr. H. Norman, these books contain full and up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; and all Fanciers, whether Novices or Old Hands, will find in them extremely valuable hints and instructions.

Some of the Common Foreign — Birds. —

By WESLEY T. PAGE.

A lecture delivered before the City and Suburban A.C.B. on May 3rd.

I have to thank your chairman for his kind introduction; his lavish words have almost robbed me of my self possession. Again, others have dignified what remarks I may be about to make by calling them a lecture. To me what I have to say is simply a homely talk about our, I take it, one common interest in birds. We shall deal with the Commoner or more freely imported species of Foreign birds. One hesitates to apply the designation "common" to any of the Creator's handiwork, yet I cannot find another word to meet the case; so please interpret this word "common" as merely indicating that the birds are numerous, or may be cheaply purchased.

Foreign bird-keeping is a very fascinating hobby, and a lifelong study; it never grows stale. As we watch the feathered occupants of our aviaries or cages, some new feature, or some new fact, is revealed to our delighted and interested gaze. It has its disappointments, I grant you, and sometimes these are many; but those successes which come our way and the continued source of pleasure and interest which, say, an aviary containing a selection of Waxbills gives, more than compensate for one's failure to rear the young of any given species, or the unexpected and unaccountable loss of some apparently well-established bird. Again, the breeding of Foreign birds is not the same as the breeding of, say, domesticated Canaries; the element of uncertainty is very great and must always remain. This, however, but gives zeal to the fascinating pursuit of Foreign bird-keeping.

Concerning the Aviaries.

The first points to touch upon must be the housing, treatment, and acquiring of our avian pets. Aviaries.—These need not be costly. If you have only a back-yard, providing the sun shines therein for a portion of the day, that is all that is needed. The aviary itself should consist of a shed (which must be well lighted), and covered and open flights, allowing such accommodation which you would give fowls. But the shed must be draught and weather proof. Materials.—Slater's battens, ½in. mesh wire netting, and ¾in. or 1in. tongued and grooved match-boarding, with the necessary nails, are all that is required. Architecture.—Well! that is all according to your own fancy. My own opinion is, the plainer the better—plain, but neat and sound should be one's maxim. (Photos of several successful aviaries were at this stage passed round the meeting). Furnishings.—Branches. Never use formal perches; a bundle or two of pea or bean sticks will last you a year and will prove both picturesque and practical. Food hoppers.—These are legion; most of them are good, providing cleanliness be practised. Nesting receptacles.—Closed boxes with suitable entrances, open boxes and husks, will about meet the case; all these should be screened with heather sprays or twiggy branches, as Foreign species do not care for their domestic arrangements to be open to the vulgar gaze. Cages.—Here again I advise plainness. Put your money into the jointing and into sound workmanship. I pin my faith to the box-type cage, both as a breeder and also as a stock cage. I believe in size, and I use as a minimum one 2½ft. long by 1½ft. deep and 1½ft. high. I supply twiggy branches as perches and a nest-box or husk at either end. In such a cage many species will breed, and they will certainly keep in health and vigour with ordinary care and cleanliness.

The Newly Imported Species.

Acquiring and treating newly-imported birds we will next deal with. By far the better way is, if possible, to procure your birds from a place that is near your own locality; you can then see them before purchasing them. Such will be the cheaper way in the end, even though the initial outlay on them be a little greater.

Do not introduce new purchases into your bird-room straight away. If you cannot spare a room for quarantine purposes, keep new purchases in one of your living-rooms for, say, three weeks before putting them into your bird-room. No matter how healthy the birds appear, never introduce the quarantine cages into the bird-room; let all these cages be kept strictly outside. When not in use these are better stored in the open somewhere, but should be protected from rain. The cage which has been occupied by some newly-imported bird which has died, should be well sterilised before being used again; that is, all crevices, and, in fact, the whole cage, should be painted over with either carbolic acid or paraffin, then thoroughly scalded, and finally well swilled with cold water. Then when it is dry the cage will be quite safe to use again.

Methods of Feeding.

Foods for seed-eaters.—Canary seed, white, French, and spray millet; paddy rice, oats, and hemp. Green-foods.—Pre-eminent for Foreign Finches is grass in flower (i.e., seeding grass), or grass in the ear; next comes French lettuce (succulent and fresh); then flowering and seeding chickweed, but not rank, growing from wet land. All seed-eaters, including the Canary and most Foreign and British species, will take a little fruit. I find seed-eaters, too, favour apple or orange more than any other kind.

The soft-food mixtures.—Their name is legion, and many of them are really good if a little common sense is used when mixing them. The following will keep almost anything. Stock items.—Ants' cocoons (eggs), dried flies, cod liver oil cage bird food, and game meal (without shell). You can mix these in bulk. In a dry place this mixture will keep indefinitely. Use the various items in equal parts and on such a mixture you can, as I said, keep almost any bird. Take the daily portion and moisten it with boiling water; then add about quarter bulk of crumbled sponge cake. Also add to the mixture ripe fruit ad lib.

For insectivorous and frugivorous species milk-sop is an important item of the daily bill of fare. Insects.—Mealworms, spiders, smooth caterpillars, beetles, cockroaches, wasp grub, gentles, and, above all, living ants' eocoons when procurable.

Some of the Birds Considered.

Budgerigars.—These now cheaply-to-be-procured birds are very handsome in their plumage of yellow, green and black, and are almost universal favourites. Their treatment is very simple, and the main points to keep in view are as follows:—In procuring stock, get each separate pair of birds from a different source, thus securing unrelated progeny. Breeding takes place all the year round, but inbreeding to any extent should not be permitted. New blood must be continually introduced or your stock will deteriorate. Surely a class for these birds should ultimately pay. It would need advertising though. It should be for Green and Yellow varieties combined, the two varieties to meet on equal or common ground; and purity of colour, size and general condition alone should regulate the awards.

The Java Sparrow: grey and white.—These are handsome and interesting birds, even though of robust and heavy build; but there is one difficulty in connection with them, and that is, that the wild-caught grey birds do not nest freely in captivity. This difficulty can be got over thus:—Pair up a male Grey to a female White Java, and then pair their progeny up with imported Grey birds; the result will then be a free-breeding strain which will throw 95 per cent. of pure Greys among their progeny. And very probably, if carried on to any extent, new varieties, as in the case of the domestic Canary, would ultimately be produced. Again, with this species, a class should ultimately be provided for them at exhibitions, and should pay and secure a large entry if it were made clear that the two varieties, White and Grey, would meet on equal terms, and that merit alone would score. In other words, a White would not score over a Grey because it was White and a little more uncommon than the Grey.

Lecture on the Linnet and Hybrid Breeding.

At the monthly meeting, held April 19th, at headquarters, All Saints' Church Rooms, North Street, Mr. A. Richardson occupied the chair, supported by the Committee. A very large audience of members and friends gathered to hear a paper on the Linnet, and Hybrid Breeding, by James Nicholson.

As this is the first paper I have ever given on birds (said the lecturer), I hope you will all listen patiently to me, and not run away before I finish, as doubtless some of you will be tempted to do. My discourse will be confined chiefly to one of the most popular and desirable of British cage birds, both for exhibition and song purposes, viz., the Linnet. I shall also comment a little on Hybrid breeding. The Linnet has been my favourite bird ever since I was a school lad, and I have never had less than half-a-dozen, but of course, during the catching season, I have had up to as many as a hundred at a time. My few remarks are intended for novices more than the old hands, and to make them clearer I have brought with me three actual specimens for comparison. Well, to begin with, the Linnet is well known for its singing abilities, and I should suggest next to the Nightingale for song. It builds its nest chiefly in whin bushes, and sometimes in a thorn hedge, and the nest is easy to find because the male bird is generally singing quite close to it. The young Linnets are dark brown in colour when in the nest, and gradually get lighter up to leaving it. They generally leave the nest when about 26 days old, but the best time to take them if you wish to hand-rear them, is when they are about 12 days old; but personally I prefer those that are wild-caught to hand-reared ones, as they seem to be better developed, and to have a greater amount of vitality. I have always kept my Linnets in good health by feeding them on the ordinary Linnet mixture, with plenty of wild seeds and green stuff when in season, but the things I lay most stress on are cleanliness, and the fresh supply of water daily, which should be given first thing in the morning. I am also a staunch supporter of the daily bath, but they must have it in the morning.

When on the look out for a show specimen, if you haven't the time to go catching yourself, you must be there when the catcher comes in with his box; then you have a good chance of getting your pick, and securing a likely bird. But if you cannot be there the next best thing is to get in touch with a good catcher, and get him to send you a couple of dozen on and then select those which you think are likely to turn out show specimens. In choosing a Linnet for exhibition purposes, choose as large and as chubby a bird as possible, with plenty of white in the wings and tail, a good broad head and a bold eye. It must have a good nutty brown body colour, with plenty of pencilling nicely broken up. Now a word as to this body colour. No doubt every fancier present has read the discussion that has been going on in our ever welcome paper, CAGE BIRDS, lately, owing to the action of a fancier who it was said had faked or put this body colour on. The sooner this faking is done away with the better it will be for the societies and the Fancy in general. Among the three specimens which I have brought here to-night, I have the Linnet which beat the Crystal Palace winner at Doncaster on December 26th, 1908. I have also one which I have purposely faked to show how the deception is carried on, and I have also a newly-caught one, which I think is a likely one for a show bench. Now, you can all have a good look at the one on which I have used the artist's brush, and it will be a good help to you to single them out on the show bench, if ever you come across any. The most critical time for the Linnet is the moulting season, but you need have no fear if you will give him plenty of shepherd's purse, plantain, hardheads, and large thistle heads, together with his ordinary seed. With this diet, I think you stand a good chance of getting on your birds a good natural body colour; besides, nothing tames a Linnet so much as giving him wild seeds, because after the first or second time you have given him a thistle head or stalk of plantain, he will naturally think every time you come near him you are bringing him a tit-bit, and will be there to take it from your hand.

My next few remarks will be in reference to Hybrid breeding, between two British birds. I expect you consider me an authority on the subject because I have succeeded in breeding a Goldfinch-Bullfinch. Ever since I saw one on the show bench I made up my mind to try and breed one like it, so I kept pairing up every season, but was doomed to disappointment times without number, until last year I succeeded in getting one. Mind you, I never had any difficulty in getting the birds to pair; the difficulty lay in getting the eggs fertilized. The first step is getting the pairs you want to breed with. My plan is to get them at the back end of the year and let them run together all the winter, and by so doing they know each other thoroughly by the time the breeding season commences. Some fanciers do not put them together until the breeding season; I have tried this plan, too, but have always found plenty of feathers at the bottom of the cage. Last year I tried a Linnet and hen Bullfinch in this way, but behold, next day I found the Linnet in the bottom of the cage with all his wing feathers pulled out; so that closed his career for the season. I find these birds require a quiet place away from everything. I feed them on the ordinary Finch mixture, and plenty of crushed sunflower and hemp seeds, and I generally give the hen Bullfinch a little insectivorous food. During the winter I give a little sweet apple or boiled carrot, and during the spring plenty of hawthorn buds and dandelion. I am a great believer in dandelion heads for all Finches.

As soon as the hen has laid the eggs I put them under a hen Canary to sit, and by so doing I stand a better chance of getting the young ones up, as it is very rare a British bird will sit its full time in captivity. I let mine sit as long as they will, but it is on Canary eggs. If you do succeed in getting any young ones and you have plenty of good feeding hen Canaries, you have arrived at the goal you have aimed at. My advice is, persevere and be up in the morning and look well after your birds, and you are bound to succeed. Just a little wrinkle before I close, and it is this: Always keep a piece of old lime out of a wall in the bottom of your cages during the breeding season; a lump about the size of a large tea cup, as I find it acts for three purposes: It helps the hen to shell her eggs: it wears the sharp points of the claws, which sometimes penetrate the eggs in the nest when they are jumping off and on; it keeps the bill in order, as the upper part has a tendency to grow much longer and sharper than the under part. In conclusion, I wish to say that I will give 5s. as a special prize to the novice of the York C.B.S. who breeds the best Hybrid this season; the Hybrid must be between two British birds, and by a novice I mean one who has never won a first prize in an open competition. I wish you all a most successful breeding season, and I hope you have derived a little bit of information from this paper.

At the close an interesting discussion ensued, the following gentlemen taking part:—Messrs. Hunter, Boyle, Thompson, Balmforth, Cardwell, Wright, Sissons, and Campling. Mr. A. Richardson moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Nicholson for his kindness in giving us such an able lecture; this was seconded by Mr. Hunter, and carried unanimously. Mr. Nicholson replied, and this brought another very successful meeting to an end.—A. WARD, Hon. Sec.

Lecture on "Breeding and Rearing," by Mr. H. J. Chittenden.

An address of much practical usefulness on the subject of "Breeding, and Rearing," was given by Mr. H. J. Chittenden, of Bradford, at a gathering at the Royal Hotel, on May 8th, over which Mr. W. Pickering presided. Drawing from a vast store of experience, Mr. Chittenden dealt with the subject in a very thorough manner. He began by advocating the use of double-holed cages for every pair of birds, and went on to describe a preparation for dealing with "red mite." This consisted of two-pennyworth of rock camphor and ordinary paraffin added to two pounds of tallow whilst the latter was boiling in a three-pound jar, the cage being thoroughly painted with the mixture, which, when set, was of about the consistency of paste. Mr. Chittenden then described the four pairs of birds which he recommended would-be breeders to acquire. First, he said, he would obtain a clear yellow cock 6¾ to 7 inches long, perfectly straight, good round head and wing carriage, and plenty of leg; and as a mate for that he recommended a medium sized good feathered hen, of the best possible quality. Next he recommended a three-quarter bred Lancashire Coppy cock, as big as possible, mated to a good yellow breeding hen. Then he would have a self green or foul marked yellow cock, and a good feathered buff hen, and lastly a good yellow cinnamon marked cock, mated to a slightly eye-ticked marked hen if possible. If a young fancier started with four pairs like that he would have no need to go outside of his own room for some years, for he could intercross as he wished and still retain size and quality and breed from any variety on the show bench.

The lecturer next had something to say about in-breeding, of which, if judicially carried out, he strongly approved. He expressed himself a strong believer in pedigree, and said that he would sooner breed from a pair of inferior birds with a pedigree he knew than from the best birds he knew nothing about. The two latter might be as far off "hitting," as the two ends of the earth. Some of the big lecturers—their southern friends particularly—said they always liked to select their birds and go on "face value," but he did not believe in it. Out of the thousands of birds bred within thirty miles of Bradford, how few were really first-class birds; and that proved indiscriminate breeding did not produce what was required.

Some valuable hints for getting the birds into condition were next given, and the lecturer emphasised the necessity of making a good nest. He also laid it down very strongly that the hens must be interfered with as little as possible, whilst breeding, remarking that he would sooner lose a nest than bother a young hen. He showed how important this was, and how undue interference produced undesirable results. Next he advocated regular and systematic feeding, just with egg food—not too rich—and then, at the end of three days, dandelion or watercress, and later still, lettuce. He recommended that the young nest should be taken away at the end of three weeks. Lastly he referred to the common complaint of inflammation of the stomach, caused by hard corn. This could be prevented by using ground seed and boiled water. Alum water was a splendid remedy for the disease, and three parts of olive oil, to one of turpentine was good as an outward application.

A number of questions were asked, and these Mr. Chittenden answered very minutely, being very heartily thanked for his services at the close of the proceedings.

Some Breeding Season . . . . Troubles Considered.

When the youngsters are nine days old the bad feeding trouble, if present, is always minimised, as by this time if the cock is present, he is ever on the watch for a little neck craning up between the nest and the careless mother, and so soon as he sees it, he has the beak stuffed full in a trice. And so the little family-game goes on. Try all the ways you can think of, and give a variety of fresh food. You can, of course, only lose them by inaction on your part, while a little home-made wit often finds some way by which to successfully get out of the difficulty.

The Sweating of Young.

Then if you have succeeded in conquering in any of the foregoing cases, there are yet a few more troubles that occasionally arise, one of the most trying of which is that of the hen sweating her young. In all cases this trouble is due to the hen bird not being in a hard condition at the outset, or to her being of a naturally weak constitution, so that being possessed of but a small amount of vitality, she soon becomes lowered in general tone by the severe tests that maternity entails, and she breaks out into cold sweat somewhat analogous to those from which the advanced consumptive person suffers. As this is my experience and belief, such a hen has no place in my stock the season after; that is, of course, if this bird is not a naturally strong one suffering from temporary weakness, as does sometimes happen. The majority of cases though are not so bad but that they are more or less capable of successful treatment.

When I have a case of this sort the first thing I do is to vary the diet a bit and limit the supply of greens, giving each day my old and tried friend the salt water bath. This bath never fails to raise and invigorate her in a marked degree, besides keeping her off the nest pluming herself a bit; and I don't care how young the chicks are, I have never known them to take cold even when she goes straight on to them in a dripping state, as she sometimes does, though with plain water this would be the result. I had to deal with a particularly bad case of this sort last year. The trouble began when the young ones were four days old, and I did as I have just indicated. I added twenty-four hours' soaked German rape to her dietary, and a little maw seed mixed with the soft food, and I varied her small supply of green-stuff. Although she continued to sweat, it was in a less degree each day; the saline bath did the rest, and a nest of strong birds was reared.

Some may ask: "Will the hen always use such a bath?" My experience has almost invariably shown me that she will. I may say that I have never done much good by using mechanical means, such as putting wood or nails upright in or across the top of the nest pot. Finally, I may add that this trouble is more prevalent in the second or third nests than in the first, and I think this fact throws great light on the cause of it.

Over-anxiety to Nest.

Next in the natural (or unnatural) order of things, comes the more vexing than disastrous trouble, of the hen wanting to go to nest before she has done her full duty to the (shall we say?) 15-days-old chicks; and in such cases she very often takes a fancy to line her nest with soft feathers from the backs or breasts of her half-fledged brood.

When the young ones are still in the nest I have found good to accrue by spraying them with an infusion of quassia, which makes the feathers taste bitter to her ladyship's palate. This must be done with great care, so as not to flush the birds out of the nest before their time—a thing which is easily done. If the case is a bad one, and I know my hen, or rather the pair, I remove her to another cage, leaving the cock to manage the brood single-handed; this he seldom fails to do.

If when such a case occurs the young are old enough to be removed, I put them in an old show cage, which I hang on the front of their old home, leaving the door of the breeding cage open and the show cage in such a position that the parents are able to feed the young through the wires or water hole. I also lower the perch in the show cage to help place the chicks out of easy reach of the hen when she tries to pluck, as she generally will. Further, I place a supply of food in with the young. If she still succeeds in plundering them, as is sometimes the case with an insistent and resourceful hen, I put the chicks in another breeder along with the cock bird, and run him in to her for a short time daily; and I continue this till she is sitting again, or till the youngsters are able to pick for themselves.

When the Young "Go Light."

Even though your birds are presumably now able to do for themselves, I must warn you that you are not yet quite out of the wood. They are eating and sleeping (they sleep a lot at this stage), and bathing, all as lively as can be (and here I may add that the sooner you introduce the bath after this the better, as they take to it better than if it is withheld till later; and it has a very bracing effect); but when they are from six to eight weeks old you will be drawn to observe that one (perhaps more) of them has begun to look very listless and puffy, and that its tail goes droop, droop, droop; the bird being too often down at the seed-box. This is a sign of what is known as the "going light" trouble—a form of consumption to which all young birds between the ages of five and nine weeks are liable.

In this ailment prevention is far easier and better than cure, so taking time by the forelock, I always put my youngsters on a special diet when they are five weeks old. Twice a week they get nothing but milk-sop to eat, and on two other days nothing but cod-liver oil food, the other three days ordinary egg-food. To make the milk-sop I cut a thick slice of bread, put it in a shallow dish and pour as much boiling milk over it as I find it will absorb. I then sprinkle a little sugar on the top, also a pinch of maw seed, and give the sop when it is cool, having just squeezed out as much milk as I can with the flat of a knife and putting it in the pots as unbroken as possible.

When I find a case of a youngster that, in spite of all my efforts, has gone too far for my liking on the downward path that leads but to death, I give it one drop of olive oil in the beak for two days and put it on the two aforementioned foods only, till it either gets well or dies. I save quite a large percentage even when they are thus far advanced. This malady, distemper, or consumption—call it what you will—cannot be taken lightly unless you are prepared to lose a large proportion of your hard-won birds. I can think of cases in point, where the breed has not been a particularly strong one, when a fancier has lost one half or more of his young birds, but if you take time by the forelock as I have just said, you need not lose more than two or three per cent.; but some slight loss you will probably experience after you have done everything possible.

An Appeal to Fanciers.

SIR,—In issue of May 8 my name was inadvertently put as Watson, instead of Nason, as treasurer to the Barwell Benefit Fund. I might also say that I have not yet had a single response to my appeal. Surely this is not representative of the Cage Bird Fancy, which is usually so ready to help one in distress.

Six Youngsters in Four Eggs.

SIR,—I have read Mr. J. W. Boocock's letter about six youngsters in four eggs, and may say I have had a similar experience. I paired up all my birds at the end of March (by the way, they are all pink-eyed sib's), and this particular pair, a yellow Cinnamon marked cock, and a Clear Buff hen. The cock is a 1906 bred, the hen a 1907. The hen laid her first egg on April 5th, and laid every morning, laying her fourth egg on April 8th. Two of the eggs were very large and two ordinary size. She sat and hatched out two youngsters on April 21st. Seeing the other two eggs did not hatch, I tried them in lukewarm water, and as they showed no signs of life, I opened them on April 22nd, and found two fully developed youngsters in each egg, thus being six youngsters in four eggs. I also let two other fanciers here see them, and they never heard of it before. I may add the two youngsters that hatched out are both doing well under their own mother.

Among the Birds of Perthshire.

A Holiday Jaunt.

SIR,—Two of my fellow chums and I were eagerly and joyfully anticipating a feast from Nature's store some weeks ago. The weather of the few days previously had been glorious, making the possibility of disappointment with the elements seem an absurdity, and we were busy on the Thursday evening making preparations for our outing, which was to take the form of a fishing expedition. The country from my window next morning looked like a new and beautiful world, and all Nature was rejoicing as if brought into newness of life. No need, in the heart of Perthshire, to journey by train, or to mount a cycle to spend a few hours in meditation by wood and stream; and in less than an hour we were surrounded by happy, rippling, shining streams, hills and dales—a perfect land of dreams. We had no idea that our fishing would be successful so early in the season, with the sma' bree yet smelling in the water and giving it a cold raw colouring; still the sun showered down his glorious rays of heat and inspiration and filled us with quite a child-like gladness, and we were quite regardless of our sporting reputations. Why? Well, it is only necessary to add that my friends were both keen on the "wing," due, in a measure at any rate, to my influence. Our ears were often strained listening to the same sounds, and our eyes were lifted in the same direction, heavenwards. We got our rods set up and soon had the flies doing their duty. Casting, and anxiously waiting for a rise, we plied away for some time without the slightest sign of recognition on the part of the fish. Perhaps an hour passed in this desultory fashion, and one could see that my pals were beginning to think such indulgence a waste of energy. Accordingly we retired to a grassy bank to investigate the contents of our fishing basket. Being an enthusiast myself I continued to throw my line, and surely instinct directed me, for at that moment I heard a shrill but soft note, and if the call was not quite familiar to me, I was not kept long in suspense as to the bird which uttered it, and all of a sudden I saw a ball of green fire dart past up stream, and for the first time in my life, although I often fancied I had a glimpse of the same spirit before, I beheld a gorgeous cock Kingfisher. What a dazzling sight! It stood out in contrast to anything I had ever seen before, I think. The glorious reflections of his lovely colours in the water eclipsed the rays of the sun itself which created them. It is beyond description, and therefore I won't tax my admittedly brilliant and poetic mind to convey an idea of its magnificence or my delight on beholding such a picture; not even to those who have never seen one as I did in its free, wild, and, to my mind, only proper sphere. The fishing had no charm for me after that. My pals regretted having missed the sight, but I felt they were not capable of appreciating my description; and certainly such sights must be witnessed to be appreciated or even to appear credible. The rods were lying useless at our feet, and I interested myself in the correspondence columns of CAGE BIRDS, and smiled in conclusion at the futility and irrationality of some of the arguments put forward lately against the practice of colour-feeding. Old Sol was at his height, and we dragged ourselves and the now neglected rods along the river side for the matter of half a mile to a cottage which we knew, where we had lunch, thereafter intending to try fishing again in earnest. There is a stretch of water, about half a mile long (at this time) just at this cottage, and we determined to have a row in the "Lass o' Gowrie," a small, flat-bottomed boat that lay near the garden gate. It was delightful lying in the stern watching the clumsy diving flight of the Lapwing and the nervous anxiety of the hen near her nest on a bit of marshland just opposite us. Here, too, a pair of Oyster Catchers had already found a home, and were cautiously strutting about on the shingle a few hundred yards ahead of us. But we must get ashore, or the Editor will be obliged to sink the ship. It so happened that our hosts at this little refuge had a son whose name was Charles, and who, by the way, was nearly as ardent a lover of birds as myself, having about 15 Britishers in cages arrayed on supports here and there round the cottage. He it was who told me of his observations of the few pairs of Kingfishers that frequent this district, and of an experiment he tried with a nest of young. He found the nest and determined to try his hand at rearing the young. One morning he went to the sand bank, and after some laborious digging managed to secure six young Kingfishers, took them home, and waited to see them gradually taking the inevitable turn for the worse. Then when he was certain that his efforts had failed, he returned them to the nest, and to his great relief and joy found them flown next day. I advised him to try again this year, giving him the necessary instructions, and I hope, for my own selfish motives, he will succeed. His stock consisted of the commoner kinds, mostly Finches, all in the pink of condition and making the neighbourhood of their domicile resound again and again. "Jecky," the Jackdaw, amused me very much, and he follows Charles at call. "Old Charles" informed me that the bird would take a sixpence from the hand and hide it. I told him, however, that I could not afford the risk of putting his words to the test. He summed up "Jecky's" exemplary character and aptitudes in a trite phrase, "He's an anshent (ancient) beastie," and we all heartily agreed. They were a jolly "threesome," to be sure, and when the hour of our departure had come I casually offered Charlie my copy of "C.B.," thinking perhaps it would be a treat he had never dreamt of in such an outlandish spot, but my friend had just received his own copy off the van, and we parted like friends that had been reared together. On our way home we were indignant to see that the fishes had just begun to rise, and were now enjoying a dainty meal off the surface of the rippling stream unmolested. Flocks of Fieldfares pleased our vision better as the birds uttered their Scandinavian warning and retired on our approach to the topmost boughs of the now budding trees, that seemed to resent their rather unusual visitations and seemed to politely request them to remove to their own homes and make way for the more welcome visitors now daily expected. All the way were signs and expressions of the approaching genial season, and my friends as much as I myself were delighted with the outing, that had proved so instructive and even exciting. Our minds were easy and our burdens light, thanks be to the fishes.

A Suggestion for a Model.

SIR,—I was almost expecting to see some correspondence arise anent your last special issue. Doubtless you have received the usual rush of congratulations upon a splendid turn out, to which you may, although rather late, add the writer's. But my real object in writing is to draw more particular attention to your full-page plate on "A Study in Types." In these days of varying types and discussions thereon, I think it would be an excellent thing for the good of the Plainhead Fancy if one mutually agreeable type could be fixed upon by all the Specialist N.P. clubs and outsiders generally, and to fill such a position I do not think a better model could possibly be evolved than the cap and wing marked bird standing on the side of the bath on the plate in question. Could not Norwich fanciers universally agree to accept such a model? Certain it is that there is not one who would not be overjoyed at breeding such a bird. No wonder CAGE BIRDS is the birdy man's guide, philosopher and friend, in making its illustrations, like its text, practically edifying. It is not here one finds caricatures of Canaries with saddle-hackles that might grace a Yokohama rooster shown as typical specimens.

A LOVER OF TYPE.

An Interesting Experience.

SIR,—Possibly the following may be of interest to readers of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. I put a pair of Norwich Canaries together about the last week in March. The hen laid her first egg on the 8th of April; she laid four in all—one I had the misfortune to break. I transferred the other three eggs to a Buff Norwich hen which was paired to a Goldfinch, and which had laid five eggs, all being clear. One hatched on the 24th of April, one got broke, and the other proved clear. I took the next box away from the pair of Norwich for a time, and seeing she was determined to nest again, I put the box back again, and she laid the first egg in the second nest on April 21st. This was soft-shelled. She laid again the next day a big soft shelled egg, with another small, thin shelled egg inside it. The next day she laid an ordinary-sized good egg. The next was a big one nearly the size of a Thrush's egg. The last was another ordinary-sized one. I set the hen on April 25th on the three eggs May the 8th two eggs hatched. Thinking the big egg would not hatch, I broke it on Sunday, May 9th, and found in the shell two perfectly-formed chicks, but dead. By the look of them they must have died about a day before the others hatched. The hen, I may say, was a two-year-old bird. She did not go to nest last year as she was moulting all the summer long. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

The Song of the Linnet.

The English "Mocking Bird."

SIR,—Kindly allow me a little space in your valuable paper to enlighten and interest a few fanciers on the Linnet song. I have been asked by many what the Linnet song consists of. It is very difficult to explain the song of the bird on paper, but before trying to do so I wish it to be understood that I am perfectly well aware that in different parts of England fanciers have different names for their notes, and different ways of singing; therefore, I don't expect every one to agree with my version of the song. Tho Linnet is (as most fanciers know), a mocking bird, but to get along with the song is my subject. It consists of the following notes: Chattering, chowing, reeing, peeing, whinnying and scraping. All Linnets sing two or three of these notes, and also turn them. Some are longer, some are deeper, and some will get more turns together than others. The lightest note is tittering, taken from the Tit-Lark, viz., tit-tit-tit (run and turned heavier or deeper), whinny titter and jingle titter. There are various ways of chattering, viz., running chatter, rolling chatter, cater chatter, stammering chatter, chattering reo and locking chatter. Reeing is a kind of tremulous note, and consists of the following: fine reeing, rolling ree, trumpet reeing (very seldom heard), hollow reeing, curling ree, and blubbering ree. Next comes peeing, taken from the Bullfinch pee pee, fear fear, pi pi, po po. To be correct, I must give the names of the various ways of peeing. Plain peeing, whistling pee, feeing pee, pieing pee, bell peeing, and pooing pee. Whinnying is a nice note, and very hard to sing. It is taken from the Cuckoo, Nightingale, Waterhen, Snipe and Blackbird. The names of the different ways are filly whinnying, Blackbird whinny, huffing whinny, and laughing whinny—he he, ha ha, ho ho—all right from the stomach. Scraping is taken from Corncrakes, Skylarks, Rooks and Ducks—wiff wiff, wyke wyke, car car, cow cow, quack quack. It is impossible to make every one understand from a written description the correct sounds of the notes, but here are the different ways of scraping: Sharp, broad, kind, cowing, barking, draker and quaking scrape. Next I come to chowing, the worst of the classical notes. This note is taken from several kinds of birds, and has various forms of expression, viz., chict chict, chey chey, chi chi, chow chow, the last being the best. The Linnet has yet some more classical notes, but not so often sung as some of the above-mentioned notes. First we come to bell pether, taken from the Canary indoors, Cuckoo pether, Woodlark woodle, and Nightingale jugging. All the above are notes for quality singing. It is not necessary to learn the above for time singing. I sincerely hope the above will be well read, not only by those who have asked me to write the Linnet song, but by all novices intending to follow Linnet singing. I have retired from Linnet judging for a good many months, but I shall always be pleased to read singing results. In conclusion, I beg to wish CAGE BIRDS (the finest bird paper published) as much success in the future as it has had in the past.

Wild Bird Life in Bradford and District.

SIR,—I will try and give you a few notes on the birds I have noticed around here at Bradford. On April 18th I and two of my friends went for a walk to take note of the bird life. We went to Clayton through the fields, looking at the birds as we went along. The Skylarks in scores were singing their love songs, and Blackbirds, Thrushes, Chaffinches, and Greenfinches were "tuning up" all the way where there were any trees, etc. We then went on into what is called "Sunwood." Here we noted a flock of Twites feeding in a ploughed field. And here let me point out the mistake made by Dr. Bradburn in his book on British birds, where he states that the Twite does not breed in this country. I may say (and your readers may be interested to know) that it breeds within a few miles of Bradford, and I can go with certainty and find a fair number of their nests every summer. They are late breeders, and it is about Whitsuntide when they commence laying. But I will get back to our ramble. We went along the back way of the wood and found a few ren's nests and a Hedge Sparrow's, Missel and Song Thrushes, Blackbirds—all building. Only the Hedge Sparrow's had eggs in it. We then wended our way back home, and, coming along the side of the wood toward Deep Lane we noted the Swallow, and a pair of lovely Whoatears. I have also noted the Willow Warbler. We arrived home at about half-past five to tea, having spent a very enjoyable afternoon.

ENTRIES CLOSE.

May 22—Bangor—W. Aitken, 1, Belmont Street.

May 26—St. Columb (Royal Cornwall)—S. H. Tamblyn, Pentreve, St. Columb.

We have received a sample of the "C.B." (crushed biscuit) being advertised in our columns, by Mr. E. J. Grain, bird seed merchant, Nottingham, and can thoroughly recommend it as an excellent article of feed, ground to just the right degree of fineness to suit the fancier.

Although so long after the advertisement of my book was inserted in CAGE BIRDS, the applications are daily coming in now, writes Mr. S. W. Birchley, and I am sorry to say I have run out of prospectuses, but hope to have some more off the Press shortly. I should therefore be greatly obliged if you would kindly allow me to say that those who have not yet received them will do so in the course of a few days. There are 2,000 already out.

The judges elected for the open show of the Glasgow and West of Scotland N.M.B. and F.B.C. on November 12th and 13th next are: Norwich, Mr. J. Calderwood (Kilmarnock); Crests and Yorks, Mr. C. Campbell (Glasgow), Borders, Mr. J. Smillie (Riccarton); Mules, British and Foreign, Mr. L. J. Arrighi (Edinburgh). One other judge for this latter section has still to be fixed. As there is usually so much dissatisfaction over the shilling charged for prize cards, the club has decided to give 30s. per class prize money, with no charge for prize cards, and we hope fanciers will show their appreciation of this by sending on a large entry.—FRED BOWMAN, show sec.

Illustrated Ideas

Under this heading we shall illustrate weekly some ideas useful to the bird-keeper. Readers are invited to send us particulars of any novel and practical appliance of use in our hobby, either in cage, bird room or aviary, with a rough sketch of same where possible. Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

A Device for Hand Feeding.
Sent by W. Smalldridge, 204, Clive Street, Grange, Cardiff.

The implement I use for hand-rearing Mules or Finches is made with the spout of a penny oil-feeder (tin), and the thumb off a large kid glove. The spout should be filed off level, and the hole be sufficiently large to allow the food to pass through. I find it better than a syringe, as it is easier to fill, and you can steady the birds with one hand. —W. SMALLDRIDGE.

A Ledge for Nest Boxes.
Sent by A. Riley, 26, Boulton Road, West Bromwich.

The enclosed sketch shows a ledge to prevent young birds from falling from the nest. Obtain a piece of wood 1½in. in width, and cut in pieces to the same size as your nest-box. Nail together to form a square, which will fit on the outside of the nest-box. Then nail on the outside of this four more pieces of wood to enclose it. If this is fitted on after the nest is made, you will find it will prevent the young birds from ever falling out of the nest.—ARTHUR RILEY.

Mr. J. Walsh, the well-known bird and food specialist, of Penny Street, Blackburn, has just issued a revised price-list of his seeds, foods, medicines, etc., and will send a copy post free to all readers who apply for it. The prices are exceedingly low, considering the guaranteed quality of the goods.

The committee of the Fife and Kinross Norwich P.C., writes Mr. A. Dickson, the hon. secretary, invite applications from societies (in Fife and Kinross), that are desirous of the club's patronage for the coming season. All applicants must state number of classes to be provided and the judge's names. The applications must be sent not later than July 30th.

I shall be glad, writes Mr. John Rukin (Rawtenstall), if you will convey the thanks of myself and wife to the host of fanciers and friends who have written me letters of sympathy in our recent bereavement. Many are people I have never met, which shows the kindly thought given by fanciers to all in sorrow and distress. I hope that my many friends will accept my thanks in this way, as our house is still very much upset, our only child, a lad of 13, being taken with the same complaint as the other one on Friday, May 7th. But I am pleased to say he is now doing well, and likely to pull through.

"Country Queries and Notes," the monthly journal published by the proprietors of "The Countryside," has this month (May) changed its title to "Science Gossip and Country Queries and Notes," the published price being fourpence. It is certainly a very useful little magazine for all interested in natural science, and highly entertaining withal, the articles being brightly written, with none of the dryness proverbially associated with scientific topics. Birds have a large amount of space devoted to them, and our readers interested in wild-bird life should order a trial copy of "Science Gossip and Country Queries and Notes" from their newsagent.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

Club Notices.

One notice of any forthcoming Society meeting inserted free. It should reach us not later than Tuesday morning's post. Specially printed Club Notice Postcards may be had free on application to our Manager. Secretaries should always use them.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

For Rules see last week's "Cage Birds."

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Effects of Egg Substitutes.

T.J.P.—Your query as to whether the use of egg substitutes has any detrimental effect on the breeding of Canaries is too general and far-reaching to be given a definite reply. Certainly you must recognise the plain fact that there may be all degrees of good and bad substitutes. Providing one has a wholesome biscuit food, whether it contains egg or not, it is not so much a question as to whether it will prove detrimental as whether the birds will eat it with the same zest and relish as they do ordinary egg food, and if they will not, there is a very great probability they will not feed young freely with it, and young birds cannot thrive on the best substitute ever invented if the parents do not convey it to them.

Not Singing.

"Cilwra."—It is impossible to tell from such meagre particulars why the cock has not yet commenced to sing. As you have no doubt whatever about its sex, it may be he has discovered sufficient interest in life by chasing about the hen with which you say you have mated him. There are some cocks of this stolid nature which give up singing when mated. I presume you gave them a nest-pan when mating them; if not, do so at once, and next day give a small quantity of nesting material and note results. If they begin to carry it in the nest-pan, give them sufficient to make a nest. The pair will probably have settled down more amicably by now, but if the cock should continue bullying the hen after she has laid, remove him a day or so after she has laid her last egg, and let her hatch and rear the young by herself.

Feeding for Song.

Teddy W.H.S.—There must be something wrong with any cock Canary that does not sing at this time of year without any special feeding. Your dieting does not seem of the best. Give a mixture of three parts Canary to one of summer rape as a staple, and, in addition, give separately half a teaspoonful of hemp twice a week, and on two other days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry mixed in it, and sprinkled with a few grains of gold of pleasure seed. Give a spray of chickweed, groundsel, or dandelion leaf daily. Keep in comfortable place, quite free from draughts, and keep cage nicely strewn with clean gritty sand. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three days. After that give two drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day for a week or so. Discontinue all drugs and extra feeding as soon as the bird begins to sing freely.

Waiting and Moulting.

G. F. Grocott.—(1) The Crest hen has probably been mismanaged through the winter months not to have bred at all in the last two years. Discontinue mixed seeds, and feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape mixed together; every second day give the pair a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, linseed, and inga, and on the alternate days the same quantity of egg-food with four drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed. Give a liberal supply of dandelion and chickweed daily. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week. She may set to work in the course of a month when the weather gets warmer, and perhaps rear one brood this year. (2) The Green hen will not be fit to mate before the first week in June. If you mate her too soon, it will simply mean a clutch of clear eggs, and then the season may be too far advanced to rectify the error; so do not be too impatient.

A Wild Customer.

"Perplexed."—Your bird must be an uncommonly wild or nervous specimen. Keep it in a moderate sized cage, and hang it about on a level with the face, where someone will be constantly moving about. It will probably be very wild for a few days, but take little notice of it beyond feeding and tending it methodically each day, and it will doubtless soon steady down and behave more like a domesticated creature. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple; twice a week give a few grains of hemp, and on two other days a small quantity of crushed sponge cake, with a few grains of inga and gold of pleasure sprinkled over it. Give a supply of green food daily and stick it in the wires so that the bird is compelled to come up from the bottom to get it. In the drinking water give twelve drops of glycerine, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash every second day for a week or so.

Abnormal Eggs, &c.

E.H.M.—Although you give no clue as to the age of your hens, I am inclined to think they have at any rate passed the first flush of youth, and are also, perhaps, a trifle worn out. Separate both hens for two or three weeks, and, of course, take away the nest and pan from the one that has had two clear eggs. When separated, first give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for three or four days, and after this six drops of dandelion juice, and two each of tincture of gentian and tincture of steel every second day for the remainder of the fortnight, and on the alternate days twenty drops of chemical food. As a staple, give a mixture of two parts Canary to one part summer rape, and give separately twice a week half a teaspoonful of hemp, on two other days a pinch of inga, and every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod-liver oil emulsion mixed in, and a pinch of gold of pleasure seed sprinkled over it. Give a liberal supply of groundsel or chickweed, and one small leaf of dandelion daily. At the end of the fortnight, if the hens are fresh, mate again with lusty young cocks.

Overfed Hen.

Goldie.—Your hen is evidently one of those specimens which flourish and grow fat even on frugal fare. In the condition you describe she is quite useless for breeding, and the probability is that unless you could turn her out into a large aviary she will never do any good at breeding, for the simple reason you cannot put any practical limitations to her diet. When young are about, if indeed she succeeded so far, egg food or some equivalent substitute must of necessity be supplied, and then the hen gets her chance and lays on fat until she is quite useless. The best method to reduce her is to keep her in a large flight cage alone, give a small teaspoonful only of plain canary daily, and twice a week omit this altogether and give instead rather a less quantity of summer rape. Give no other seed or extra food whatever, but keep her well supplied with groundsel, chickweed, or lettuce. Give these green foods in unlimited quantities. Keep cage floor quite clean and strewn with gritty sand, so that you are sure she only gets her bare allowance of seeds each day. Of course this method requires rigid daily attention, as forgetfulness for one day might mean irreparable disaster. If the green food is not sufficient to keep the bowels very free, give a pinch of Epsom Salts in the water three times a week.

Bad Eyes.

R.H.T.—They seem to be suffering from ophthalmia, and have, I suspect, been exposed to draught or a chill. Your feeding also is very bad, and doubtless renders them more susceptible to disease. Try following, and I think the trouble will soon cease. As a staple diet give plain Canary in unlimited quantities. In addition give separately a teaspoonful of summer rape each day, and a similar quantity of egg food or crushed sponge cake to each pair every second day. Twice a week when not feeding young give also a small teaspoonful of hemp. When young are being reared, feed as advised in numerous replies the last few weeks. Give green food daily, and add chickweed and groundsel. Add also to the soft food of the birds that are ill, two drops of port wine and two of cod liver oil emulsion each time until well. Keep them caged separately; in a rather warm and regular temperature; keep cages and particularly the perches scrupulously clean; and add to drinking water six drops of dandelion juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and on the alternate days twenty drops of chemical food. Bathe eyes once daily in a warm decoction of camomile flowers in a teacupful of which mix ten drops of laudanum. Dry carefully, and drop on each eye one drop of rose water in each ounce of which you have got your chemist to dissolve one grain of sulphate of zinc.

Great Expectations.

"A New 'Un."—In sober earnest, your attempt to breed with such birds as you describe is, in all probability, foredoomed to dismal failure. To have any success at breeding one wants, above all else, healthy robust stock; but yours are worse than worthless. I am sorry to put this damper on your hopes, but it will be better than leaving you in a fool's paradise. First of all see your cages are perfectly clean and free from red mite, as I imagine bird No. 2 is troubled with this pest. Next see they are comfortably "housed" and situated, quite beyond reach of draughts, and where the heat is fairly even night and day. This does not mean that you should use any artificial heat. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple, and give separately half a teaspoonful of hemp three times a week. Every second day give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with two drops each of sherry and cod-liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled over with gold of pleasure seed. Give a liberal supply of chickweed and dandelion daily. Feed both on these lines until they are well. Allow them to bathe freely in fine weather provided only they do not show signs of chill after doing so. In the drinking water give both six drops of dandelion juice and as much Epsom salts every second day for a week as will cover a sixpence, and on the alternate days give No. 1 twenty drops whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, and No. 2 the whiskey and glycerine as above, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. After the first week, give both birds twenty drops chemical food every second day for a week or two, and on the alternate days, for a week, two drops each tincture of steel and tincture of gentian. Do not mate them up until they are quite vigorous.

Looseness Whilst Feeding.

C. K. Eaton.—You omit to say how you prepare egg food, as well as how you feed generally, and the former in particular may contain the solution which would explain why your hens get relaxed after feeding young for few days. As I read your letter, you evidently give the parents egg food in unlimited quantities right away from time the young are hatched, which, if you gave pure yolk for the first day or so would certainly tend to cause looseness. But your practice would still be wrong from the beginning. When the young are hatched, half-a-teaspoonful of egg morning and evening on the first day is quite sufficient to give; on the second day the same quantity of egg and half its bulk of bread crumbs or powdered biscuit; the third day about two teaspoonfuls should be sufficient, and equal parts of egg and biscuit is quite rich enough. On the fourth day begin to give a little green food. If looseness still exists when feeding in this way, add a small arrowroot biscuit to one Osborne biscuit and use these pounded together for mixing with the egg instead of bread crumbs. Or you might use maizena wafers instead of Osborne biscuits. Of course, you must know that there is naturally a looser habit whilst feeding young than during incubation. You might give a wee bit of egg food twice a week during incubation, but not oftener; and even this should not be necessary if you carry out the above instructions.

Too Prolific.

The Rhondda Lad.—The reason is probably that your diet is too stimulating at the beginning; that is, from the time the young are hatched. What green food do you use? and when do you begin to give hemp? What do you call "plain" seed? As you say you give plain seed in one vessel, and a mixture of Canary, rape, and hemp in another. Look up reply to "Downcast" in last week's issue for details on feeding from the time of hatching, and see if you cannot discover something wrong in your method. Adopt the method given there, and withhold hemp until the young are at least eight days old. Then, if you have been using dandelion as green food, stop it at once, as it forces such hens too rapidly into condition. Substitute instead either groundsel, lettuce, or chickweed, in the order named.

Hens Dying.

W.E.S.—Am strongly inclined to think you may have septic fever of a certain type among your stock, and consequently in order to ascertain beyond doubt if this is so, I advise you to send the body of the next that dies to our specialist for a post-mortem. Meantime, keep cages and all appliances scrupulously clean; boil all food and water vessels that may be so treated daily; so that all egg food is pure and perfectly fresh at least twice a day; and do not import any fresh birds, or mix up any apparently healthy specimens with these that become ill. When young are hatched, boil all water before use, and add six drops of aromatic sulphuric acid to each drinker, and if the looseness makes its appearance, add also four drops of tincture of opium for a day or two. In case the trouble proves to be of septic origin, get Dr. Clarke's handbook on the subject (7d. from our Publishing Manager) and read up the contents. The subject is too extensive to attempt to deal with it here.

After Effects.

"Thank You."—Glad to hear that by following advice in CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL you cured the bird of the immediate effect of its severe cold. As you say that its diet consists of bread and milk, am I to understand this is its only food? If so, it is quite wrong. As a staple diet, you should give two parts Canary to one part summer rape, mixed together, and give separately twice a week a pinch of hemp, and half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake on one or two other days each week. A small piece of bread and milk may be occasionally substituted for the sponge cake, but should never form the chief article of a healthy Canary's diet. Give a little green food daily. As regards swollen eye, bathe it daily in a warm solution of camomile flowers, to each teacupful of which add ten drops of laudanum. Dry carefully, and drop in the eye one drop of rose water in an ounce of which you have got the chemist to mix one grain of sulphate of zinc. Keep its perches scrupulously clean. Add a few grains of Epsom salts to its drinking water for a day or two.

Feathers Breaking Off.

Perplexed.—As you have now discovered, your feeding has been quite wrong, and was mainly responsible, although I also think the bird is a naturally weak and debilitated specimen, for which you will probably do but very little good. Feed on plain Canary only as a staple. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days for two or three weeks a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with two drops each of port wine and cod-liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and twice each week omit these drops and add instead as much as will cover a sixpence of a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash. Twice a week give a few grains only of linseed. Give a little chickweed or groundsel daily. See its cage is clean, free from red mite, and keep supplied with clean gritty sand. Encourage it to bathe freely in fine weather. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash every second day for a week. On the alternate days give twenty drops of chemical food. Then omit medicines for a week, and give them again for another week. You will probably have to wait for the moult before the bird gets in fine feather.

Norwich Cocks Moulting.

Amateur.—Although you say the birds are quite free from draughts, I am inclined to think this is partly the cause of the moult, and is aggravated by great variations of temperature. I make these deductions from the fact that the birds are kept in a kitchen, six feet from the fire and close to a window. In such a position it must be practically impossible to avoid great fluctuations, and also exceedingly difficult to get rid of draughts. If you could move the cages to a position further away from both fire and window, where they would be secure from draughts, the temperature would be much more equable day and night, and the birds would do better. Your feeding is also faulty. Give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops each of sherry and cod-liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and on the alternate days a few grains of hemp. Give a little green food daily. For the first two days give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water, and afterwards dissolve a pennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine in two tablespoonfuls of port wine, and give twenty drops of this in the water two days in every three until moulting has stopped. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand, and see they are quite free from red mite. Do not mate the birds two or three weeks after moult has stopped.

Bald and Scurfy.

"Physic."—The loss of feathers is due to an unhealthy condition of skin, probably caused or aggravated by an improper diet, though you say nothing on this point. Keep these birds by themselves and thoroughly disinfect any cages they have occupied, and also keep those in which they are isolated scrupulously clean, especially the perches and all food and water vessels. Keep a separate bath for them and encourage them to bathe freely, adding a few crystals of permanganate of potash to bathing water two or three times a week. Feed on a staple of plain Canary, and give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of egg food or crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod-liver oil emulsion mixed in it. Twice each week also mix in the soft food as much as will cover a sixpence of a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur and one part chlorate of potash. On two other days each week, when you are not giving sulphur, give a few grains of linseed. Give a little chickweed or groundsel daily. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, the same quantity of chlorate of potash, and six drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and on the alternate days twenty drops of Chemical Food. Then drop this for a week, and give it again following week, continuing it in alternate weeks as long as necessary. Slightly anoint bare skin twice a week with sulphur ointment.

Brevities.

Sitting Without Laying (South Devon).—Look up reply to "W. H. K." in last week's issue, and treat your hen as therein advised, with the exception of giving a pinch of a mixture of equal parts of inga, linseed, and gold of pleasure, instead of inga alone. Then if she commences sitting without laying when mated again, and appears to sit closely and steadily, give her a clutch of common eggs to hatch out and rear, which she will probably do, and may make a good foster parent. It would have been worth while trying her with a clutch this time had she not been sitting quite so long, but as she will have sat almost a fortnight before this reply appears, I would not advise you to try it unless you had a clutch almost ready to hatch, the parents of which had deserted them.

Clear Eggs and Baldness (G. K.).—Anything that tends to lower condition and weaken her must help to contribute to unfertility, but there is nothing to show the slightest connection between your hen's becoming bare over the beak and laying unfertile eggs. Indeed, as the hen produced two normal clutches of eggs she had clearly done her share; and the fact that all the eggs but one were unfertile shows the cock to be the failing one. He wants feeding and toning up a little. As regards bareness, you should first find out whether it is due to any mechanical cause, such as friction against wires, red mite, or the cock pulling them out, etc. If no such cause exists, wait until the bird has finished breeding, and then give her a course of treatment as advised to "J. S., Castletown," in last issue just before moulting, when she should moult out in good plumage.

Removing Eggs (H. Cook).—Yes, it is advisable to help the simultaneous hatching of the eggs to remove first three as laid, and substitute dummies, or at least one dummy for the first egg removed, and keep them in a small box in bran, turning the box over each morning and evening, and replacing the eggs in the nest on the evening of the third day, removing the dummy or dummies at same time. You must also take this opportunity to re-arrange or make a proper shaped nest if the hen has not managed to construct a serviceable nest herself.

Quantity of Colour Food (Paprika).—The quantity varies not only with the individual, but with the duration of the moult. Some birds require much less than others to bring them out the same depth of tone; and, again, some birds moult much quicker than others, and do not require feeding for so long a time. You will thus see it is impossible to lay down a hard and fast rule with any single bird, but under average conditions I should say about three ounces would be sufficient. The quantity you name would probably be sufficient for from six to eight birds.

A Brood of Seven (Wally).—A really good feeding and healthy hen will certainly manage a brood of seven. But it is very unwise from more than one point of view to put such a tax upon her. It would have been best to leave the cock with her to assist in the task of rearing young. If you should have another brood of three or four hatched within a day or so of this brood, transfer two of the seven to the smaller brood, otherwise return the cock when they are a week old if he is at liberty. Of course, there is the possibility that all the seven will not hatch, which is, perhaps, the least desired way out of the difficulty.

Laying Small Egg (G. K., Darwen).—See replies to "A. E., Wigston," and "Downcast" in last issue, and treat your hen as advised in those replies. Candidly, I am afraid you will do no good at all, and if you could replace her with a healthy young hen ready to nest I should certainly advise you to do so, and thus prevent the season being a total failure.

A Question of Mating (Brownlow).—You made a mistake in removing the hen the second time, because the cock chased her about. Most cock birds that are in condition are more or less violent wooers, and what you took to be a scrimmage was probably only love-making. Your feeding is rather faulty. Give a mixture of two parts Canary to one summer rape as a staple; twice a week give a few grains of hemp, and every other day until mated give each half a teaspoonful of egg food with a pinch of inga and gold of pleasure added. Give him two or three dandelion leaves daily, and the hen one and a little of some other green food. Give the cock a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for two days, and afterwards twenty drops of whiskey and four of tincture of gentian for a few days.

Young Dying (German Roller).—You have met precisely the same trouble, and evidently in exactly the same way, as "The Rhondda Lad," to whom a detailed reply is given in this issue. Please refer to this reply for information. The presence of the cock in the same room would make little or no difference if you hung him in such a position that they could not see each other. After the young are a week old, you might also add by slow degrees one part of crushed sponge cake or moist bread crumbs to two parts of the egg food.

Becoming Bare (S. Tanner).—It is suffering from red mite attacks. Provided you are not expert at hand-washing, I would advise you to get a competent person to hand-wash it for you, and add a teaspoonful of creolin to a pint of the water used in the first basin. Then put the bird in a perfectly clean cage, and see all fittings and the place where it is to hang are perfectly free from insect pest. If you have more than one cage in use, do them at same time, so there can be no risk of re-infecting. After, give the bird a bath daily, in which mix a few drops of essence of quassia twice a week, and also brush over joints of the door, ends of perches, etc., with a small brush dipped in the strong essence. You may give twenty drops of Chemical Food in its water daily for a fortnight to keep up strength.

Two in One (G.E.F.).—(1) I should imagine it quite useless for breeding. Drop the hemp, inga, and linseed out of the staple diet, retaining only the Canary and rape in the same proportions. Mix the last three in equal parts, and give half a teaspoonful twice a week separately. Every second day for a week give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod-liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it. Give a little dandelion of chickweed daily. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three or four days, and afterwards twenty drops of whiskey and two each of tincture of gentain and tincture of steel every second day for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary; (2) I do not care to use white of the egg for first four or five days after young are hatched, although many fanciers use it from the first with success. Then, the "white" is the portion that should be rejected,

Seed Sample (Novice).—It is quite impracticable to express any definite opinion of the bulk of seed from a mere pinch of it. The sample is a very small seed and seems to contain a fairly large proportion that is also thin. It is very sweet, and appears clean and bright, though the latter cannot properly be judged from so small a sample. If nice and clean in bulk, its only drawback is its small size, which is all against economy.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Linnet Not Singing.

M.E.T.—A house-moulted cock Linnet which is "in the best of health and very lively," yet does not sing, is a puzzle I am afraid I cannot solve. Are you really sure of the sex? Even a healthy hen will sing at this time of the year. I suggest you hang the bird outside on sunny days, and give it as many seeding dandelion heads daily as it will eat. Your method of feeding seems to be good enough; at any rate, it will not account for the absence of song. What green food is it you are giving? Seeding shepherd's purse and chickweed are plentiful now, in ripe condition, and these are the Linnets' favourites. Give him a little sunshine, but don't let him roast until he gasps for breath, should his cage afford no shade at the top.

Changelings.

X.Y.Z.—1, The eggs you have put under this hen are Linnets, without a doubt. If she will sit the extra seven days necessary (presumably) to hatch them out—there is no reason why she shouldn't, for I have known it happen—then she will rear the young on the same food as you would give her were they young Canaries. It is advisable, however, to give as much seeding chickweed and shepherd's purse daily as she will use; many of my own hens feed very largely on these two "green foods," and each is very plentiful now. Probably the hen will behave properly with her own second nest. 2, You speak rather disgustedly of this hen's refusal to use egg-food, but really this matters nothing at all, so long as she feeds freely on seed and seeding greenfoods; the young will be reared all right then. I certainly think it is worth while letting her try her "band" on the Chaffinch's eggs; feed as advised for hen No. 1.

Four Interesting Ones.

Nemo.—1, No; Goldfinches moulted in an outdoor aviary (flying loose) do not come as white in the legs as birds moulted in cages indoors. Some of the latter, however, take more than one moult before becoming really "white-legged." 2, I don't know anything about the legal aspect of the matter, but morally you would not be justified in selling birds as "house" moulted which have in reality been moulted in an outdoor aviary when flying loose. If moulted in cages, and very tame, then the case would be different, for in my opinion much of the virtue of the "house-moulted" bird lies in the fact that it is domesticated—that, indeed, is what fanciers read into the term. A Goldie moulted in an aviary has yet to be got steady, if it has never previously made the acquaintance of a cage. 3, Your aviary would hold between three and four dozen birds comfortably. 4, Cheveral and Pea-throated Goldfinches are considered by many to be the best birds for light Mule breeding; on the ground that the break of light plumage predisposes to the throwing of light young birds, I suppose. But it doesn't necessarily work out so in practice, as I have fully proved on several occasions. If one fancies a Cheveral or Pea-throat, there is certainly no harm in using it; I only want to point out the folly of paying long prices for such birds under the belief that they make light Mules a certainty.

Hand-feeding Finches.

Andrew (Leeds).—Quite right; follow the directions given "R.N.S.T." last week when hand-feeding your Greenfinches. It is not difficult, providing one's patience stands the test; no one ought to undertake the task unless able to carry it through properly. No one can expect to be successful with every bird he tries to hand-rear, but a large proportion should certainly survive. Finches should have a little soaked (just sprouting) summer rape seed mixed among their soft food from the day they are taken (nine or ten days old). It gets "mashed" by the fork in the process of mixing. It can be increased from day to day until a good proportion is present. I have known many Finches reared on this and soaked bread alone. Of course, being more or less moist, the more soaked rape one uses the less the food wants moistening with milk (or water). As the birds get older it should not be given so "sloppy" as at first. Don't forget to mix in every two days or so a small quantity (say, a tiny salt-spoonful) of crushed cuttlefish, or very small particles of grit. I always think the young birds seem to feel the cold, during inclement weather, when they commence to roost outside the nest, and at this period they should be kept very cosy (especially at night), their cage covered with a warm cloth, and stood in a warmed room when possible. It is the large birds which seem most susceptible to attacks of cramp. It is a very good plan, however, to lightly colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food—I generally use Fellow's Syrup of Hypophosphites myself, but this is an expensive preparation, and not to be bought in small quantities. It is certainly, however, a fine tonic and strengthening medicine for birds. When they commence to pick about for themselves, offer (in addition to soft food and soaked rape) maw seed, lightly cracked Canary and hemp seeds, groats, or coarse oatmeal, shelled and broken up sunflower seed; also seeding heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse, and groundsel, and thistles in season. Don't, at the same time, forget grit and cuttlefish, likewise old, crushed mortar.

Rearing Canary Mules.

Peter.—All Canary Mules reared by Canary hens are brought up in very much the same way as young Canaries—that is, on similar food and treatment generally. That you gave your own birds the correct treatment—or correct enough, at any rate—is proved by your rearing them successfully. Now they are commencing to feed themselves offer (in addition to soft food and soaked rape) maw seed, lightly cracked Canary and hemp seeds, groats, or coarse oatmeal, shelled and broken up sunflower seed; also seeding heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse and groundsel; and thistles in season. Don't, at the same time, forget grit and cuttlefish, likewise old, crushed mortar. Steep the summer rape seed in cold water, which thoroughly change every day. It will soon begin to germinate (burst), and is then ready for use, dabbing it as dry as possible in a towel before offering it to the birds. All crushed seed should be prepared fresh daily. I should wean them off egg food as soon as possible, substituting for it home-made egg cake moistened, if necessary, with a spot or two of milk or of water, or a little stale sponge cake, or crushed sweet biscuit (maizena wafer, tea or Oshorne) also moistened with milk. Egg-cake made and baked at home really does not need damping. Don't make the mistake, when dropping egg, of leaving off soft food entirely. The best cages for general use are the box pattern ones known as Finch stock cages (any of the large cage makers advertising in our columns will supply them). They are about 16 by 10 by 8 inches, wired in front only, doors at front and side, seed box inside, running from front to back, two perches about on a level with top of seed trough, water vessel outside. You could moult the Mules, of course, in small flight cages, about 3 feet or 4 feet long—say double breeders with centre partition removed. They are apt to be mischievous, and pluck one another.

Muling Troubles.

Cockie.—1, Two eggs make up a disappointing clutch, it is true, but as you knew there was a chance of their being fertile, you should have let the hen sit, if so disposed. The only thing to do now is to put in the nest-pan and fresh nesting material, and let her have another try. She should have had a "rest" for not less than a week. If she refuses to "call" to the Linnet, you must resort again to the dodge of having the cock Canary in front of her cage two or three times. You could hang him on in a cage; it is easily contrived. By the way, what is it you mean when you say she "is now quite off"? It is best to be explicit; "quite off" can mean a lot of things. 2, It is no use parting the Goldies and hen Canaries now if you want to do any good. Obviously it is not the fault of the Finches, for if the hen Canaries were ready to go to nest, they would commence to build. Feed them up with a little egg-food daily, and a small teaspoonful of niger seed; and don't forget young leaves and seeding heads of dandelion.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hard-bills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Brevities.

Hand-rearing Linnets (New Reader).—Linnets should be hand-reared in exactly the same way as recommended for Chaffinches in the reply given "R.N.S.T." last week. Take them when about ten days old (10 to 12 days).

Linnets Breeding (A.D.G.).—I am afraid your Linnets must be comparatively recently-caught birds (if they show red on the breast, you may be sure of this), which accounts for their being so very unsteady. I am afraid the chances of such birds breeding this year are somewhat remote. The best method would be to put the breeding cages in a very quiet corner of some room, where the birds would be disturbed as little as possible. Domesticated (steady) birds are always to be desired for breeding with in cages.

In an Aviary (F. Satchwell).—In an outdoor aviary eight feet by six feet by four feet, you should have an excellent chance of breeding Mules from two cock Goldfinches, and five hen Canaries. The allowance of room is something more than merely liberal.

Another Aviary (J. E. Foster).—Your plans seem to be very well laid, and I hope will meet with success. You want to arrange for plenty of ventilation during the summer, and freedom from damp and draughts, as far as is possible, in the cold weather. Damp is a great enemy. The place will hold with comfort about two dozen birds the size of a Chaffinch; overcrowding is not desirable.

Greenfinch Signs (Goldie).—Song and lively actions point to a Greenfinch being in breeding condition—they bounce about, flapping their wings, like a hen Canary does when she feels "fit." A Greenie, once he takes to a hen, is fussy and affectionate, and can be seen feeding her frequently. I must say, however, that they vary a lot in disposition; some are very savage with the hens one puts to them.

Identity of Bird (C. Griffin).—The Spotted Flycatcher has no black about it. I can't place the bird you describe at all; it puzzles me. It might very well be the Pied Flycatcher, which is a "black and white" bird, and is, further, not at all shy; but its legs are black, not light, in colour, and it is black on the crown of the head (white just on the forehead), and not all white. This latter species is the only bird I know in any way answering your description; possibly you were mistaken in putting down the whole of the head as white. I am assuming, of course, you were not looking at a "freak."

Red-breasted Linnets (B. Webb). — Red-breasted Linnets are not the kind to mate with hen Canaries; and no one ought to have sold you them for that purpose. The red breast is a sign, usually, that the birds were caught on the verge of their natural breeding season, and they are then invariably extremely difficult to steady down. I do not suppose that your birds will become really steady until they have done a house moult.

Stumps (W.R.S.).—If you feel carefully at the root of the tail, among the small feathers, you will find the stumps of the tail feathers there, bidden by the aforesaid small feathers. These stumps must be carefully pulled out before a new tail can grow. It may be done with the finger and thumb, taking care not to pull out any of the feathers surrounding the stumps, and not to accidentally "squeeze" the bird. It is easy to anyone used to handling birds. With regard to the hand-rearing of Linnets, note the reply given "New Reader," this week.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Answered by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S.

Budgerigars Not Using Husks.

Perplexed.—Your birds are possibly young ones, and will probably settle down and make proper use of husks soon, when they have got more used to their quarters. I presume you are not over-run with mice; if such is the case, it would largely account for the trouble. But I am of opinion their next clutch will be laid in the husk and satisfactorily incubated. I should give them a few oats and also flowering (seeding) grass, in addition to present diet. Also keep a piece or two of cuttlefish hanging in aviary. There are two books dealing with this species advertised in this column, which you would find of great use.

Moustache Parrakeets.

"Dan Leno."—I have never been able to satisfactorily settle the point as to the actual outward sexual distinctions. The only female I have handled was not fully mature when an accident took it off. In the bird in question the moustachial streaks were practically non-existent, but I cannot be sure that this feature is constant; however, I will take an early opportunity of settling this point, and insert the result in this column. There are several new species or races sold as Moustache Parrakeets, which probably accounts for there being practically no published account of the outward sexual distinctions of this species.

Mating a Quaker Parrakeet.

T. W. M.—I am not quite sure of the exact age at which Quakers breed, but should not think they would do so before they were a clear 2 years old. Once the young bird was fully adult, I should most decidedly say a young cock would be most likely to give better results than an old one. Most decidedly your bird is not too old for breeding. I presume you know the Quaker is one of the few nestbuilding species of Parrakeets; you must either fix up for them a strong wicker platform or good-sized barrel with one end entirely open, and supply them with a twiggy branch, about the same length and substance as birch brooms are made from. If you get one of the young cocks (18 months), I do not anticipate they will breed this year, though a nest may be built. You will find their nesting arrangements very interesting.

Birds for Small Aviary.

W. H. S.—Am afraid sooner or later you will have trouble with the Chaffinches and Bramblefinches, these being most unsafe for a mixed series. Goldfinches, Siskins, and Twites and Redpolls would be better. As it is your initial venture with Foreign birds and you wish for seedeaters only, I would advise you to get one pair each of Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, and Java Sparrows (white for preference). If you put up a few nest boxes and husks they will probably breed, especially the first-named. Supply Canary, white and spray millet seeds, lettuce and grass in flower (seeding grass), with water ad lib. for drinking and bathing, though bit is customary to supply a little soft food when they are feeding young, and it is better to do so, as it makes the parent birds' task much easier. All the three species named have frequently reared young on seed alone.

The Amiability of Budgerigars.

R. H.—Much regret you had to kill the bird. It is a common statement of fact that, providing they are not overcrowded, Budgerigars will agree together in almost any numbers (according to the accommodation), and are naturally gregarious. It is, however, equally a matter of fact that no species are immune from pugnacious and murderous individuals occasionally. I have had cannibals occur among Budgerigars. The only thing to do in such cases is to catch up the culprit, and either kill it or give it total freedom, and leave it to take its chance with our inhospitable climate. I prefer the latter, but in such case it is better to take it some little distance (where there is plenty of growing grass) before setting it at liberty, or it may annoy you and continue its mischief from outside the aviary.

Mannikins and Java Sparrows.

"Tea-Cup."—None of the Mannikins have any power of song, some of the species being practically silent to human ears, though they appear to make prodigious efforts to sing. The Java Sparrow has a not unmusical, in fact, a rather pleasing warble. The sexes as to plumage are practically alike, but with most of the species the beak of the female is narrower at the base and more pointed than that of the male. This is most distinct when viewed in profile, and should enable you to pick out a true pair from a cage full, or decide whether a given two birds are cock and hen. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet seeds; paddy rice (rice in the husk, oats, green food, grit, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing. They must not be subjected to draught or they will soon shuffle off, though in a roomy garden aviary they will live out-of-doors all the year round.

Finches and Budgerigars.

"Nemo."—The small birds you name are suffering from the effects of the voyage. For one day only make the drinking water just saline with Epsom salts, and if the voidings are not watery, repeat this after an interval of three days. Try them with a little crumbled sponge cake moistened with boiled milk. The chemical food can do no harm and should do good if they will drink it. A mealworm per day, per bird, will also help such as will take them. Keep them out of the reach of draught and in a roomy cage, but not in a vitiated atmosphere, and as soon as the winds are a little warmer put them out of doors. The Bengalese must take their chance with the same treatment as the rest, but I fear they are ricketty and of no use, that is, so far as I can judge. Budgerigars or any other species of Parrakeets would ruin the growing trees and bushes of the largest aviary that could be contrived for them in captivity in a few months. The firm you name are still to be found at the same address. Let your Finches have a piece of ripe apple to peck at, also leaf of fresh lettuce and plenty of grass in flower (seeding grass). I, of course, take it you are supplying grit; if not, do so, but introduce it in small quantities at first. I fear you will lose some of them. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful. See advert in this column.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Rosellas for Outdoor Aviary.

W.S.—The manner to obtain a pair of adult aviary-bred Rosellas is to advertise in our columns, and purchase them from a private individual. The birds should be at least 2 years old, as you require them for immediate breeding. However, if you secured a pair of imported birds in full colour, this would insure their being adult, and as a rule such settle down to breeding just as soon as they have become accustomed to their quarters; this latter condition applies equally to aviary-bred or imported birds. The aviary you describe would accommodate them in addition to its present inmates. I have never known Red Rosellas to interfere with any description of small birds in their enclosure; however, I cannot advise you to remove the division between the two aviaries unless you can put the Zebra Finches elsewhere, as Budgerigars are most unsafe company for Finches of any species. Apart from the question of mixing Parrakeets and Finches, your prospects of successful breeding with the former would be greater with the division removed.

Treating a Young Grey.

A. Nichols.—Am afraid it is rather a complication than a cold. As it is quite a young bird you must give boiled maize for a time. Prepare this as follows: Boil till soft, then drain away all surplus moisture. Only prepare sufficient for the day's use, as it soon turns sour; also keep a tin of the seed mixture—two parts each Canary and oats and one part each hemp, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds—continually in cage; when it is eating heartily of the seed mixture, gradually discontinue the maize. Such ripe fruit as it will eat, plain biscuit, and nuts, should also be given regularly. A piece of clean cuttlefish should be continually in the cage, and a little grit should be mingled with the seed mixture. Do not give any slops, table scraps, or animal food, but if the bird has been used to such, the biscuit can be just moistened with tepid water (not saturated); it will soon become accustomed to the proper diet. For one day only after draining the moisture away from the boiled maize, soak into it one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia, repeating this at intervals as may be necessary to keep in check any tendency to constipation. On other days in similar manner soak into the daily portion of maize half a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food, continuing this for a month at least. Get from your chemist the following mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine. For use, take one teaspoonful of the mixture to one ounce of water, and let this form the bird's drinking water till cold yields. Only mix one ounce at a time, and do not leave it continually in cage, but permit the bird to satisfy its thirst three or four times a day. If there should be any running at nostrils, spray or cleanse with diluted glyco-thymoline. Use a fresh portion of the solution and well cleanse your camel-hair clearing brush for each occasion. Hope the bird will soon improve.

A Sick Amazon.

W.D.C.—Do not give any more castor oil, but give three drops of tincture of opium direct to the beak daily for three days. For the present you had better not give any aperient, but if such should be necessary, give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in one ounce of water in lieu of the castor oil. Put bird on a course of Parrish's Chemical Food, making the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with same. Stop tea sops at once, the long continued use of which is the main source of the trouble. Diet as follows: Seed mixture, Canary, hemp, oats, wheat, maize, and sunflower seeds in about equal parts. Keep a supply continuously in cage. If it will take it, a little boiled maize should be given two or three times a week, or it might be given daily at present; boil it till it is soft, drain off all moisture, and add from 15 to 20 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food. Note, the boiled maize only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be kept strictly clean. If it calls out for a bit of sop, dip a piece of biscuit in the chemical food water, but on no account give tea, coffee, or milk slops, or yet any kind of animal food. Keep the bird warm, but not in a vitiated atmosphere. Ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, boiled potato (unseasoned and without fat of any kind) are all wholesome. Treat as above for a fortnight, and then report progress. While it is not strong a few sips of very weak tepid brandy and water, will make a good stimulant.

Brevities.

Parrakeets Killing Young (M.A.F.W.).—Unless you supply me with full details of your aviary accommodation arrangements and its inmates, I can neither suggest cause of failure last year nor a remedy for the present breeding season. It is also important I should know what species of Parrakeets you refer to.

Grey Parrot Moping (J. H. Wilson).—Please send me full particulars as to how you have been treating this bird (that is, diet and general treatment), and I shall then be in a position to assist you. Give the bird three drops of sweet oil, and if the vent is at all swollen, anoint the vent with the oil; if the first dose does not cause the bowels to move freely, repeat dose on following day. On receipt of full details shall be pleased to advise further.

Is it a Cutthroat? (Node).—Your bird is the Cutthroat or Ribbon Finch, the hen of which lacks the crimson throat band. Their requirements are very simple, Canary, white and spray millet seeds, with greenfood, grit, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing being all they require to keep them fit and healthy. Providing they are kept out of draught they are a hardy and long-lived species. If you give them a roomy box cage, say, not less than a double breeder, with the division removed, with a nest box at each end, they should breed. Do not meddle with the nest boxes after they build till the young have left the nest; a little soft food should be supplied daily while they are rearing young. Lettuce and grain in flower (seeding grass) form the best green food.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for a reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Crested Canary (Mrs. Cotton).—This bird, although it might have been in breeding condition, was very thin; its liver was in a softened condition, and there was general inflammation of the internal organs, indicative of feverishness.

Canary (Lady Mary).—"Chill," or inflammation of lungs and liver during period of egg-laying.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Competition Result (Mr. Burton, jun.).—The result of the matched pairs competition is not yet known.

Illustrated Ideas A. Bridges).—Have already published this. (A. McMillan)—Have given a very similar idea. (W. Pothecary).—Note reply to A. McMillan.

Hatching Eggs (A. Gordon).—Thanks for your letter and sketch, which we shall hope to publish next week.

A Selected Thrush (Edward Williams).—If you will conform to Rule 8 we shall be pleased to take the matter up for you.

A Net Trap (W. Leeson).—Thank you for writing us. We will make enquiries into the matter.

An Address (G. Cooms).—The London address of the firm which supplies Carbolineum Avenarius is C. A. Peters, Ltd., 116, Newgate-street, E.C.

Our Next "Special" (J. G. Hutchinson).—You can depend upon the bird you mention receiving every consideration.

Stocking an Aviary (F. M. Pinnock).—We should think that a collection of small Foreign birds would be most suitable for your aviary, and we have sent your query along to our Foreign Bird specialist. Look in his column for a reply. You might have a Canary and British bird or two along with them.

Two Matters (A.A.H.).—(1) We do not remember receiving your suggestion for catching birds out of aviaries. Do you mind repeating it? (2) You could use this chicken meal in conjunction with a packet Lark or Thrush food; it would answer quite well then.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Explanation from Plymouth.

SIR,—Respecting the required explanation from Plymouth, I hasten to say Mr. Dart is certainly quite right. I should have said (and what I really thought I had written until I saw the error in CAGE BIRDS) was: "Having had a splendid Buff stolen from a leading show in Wales, and five grand birds killed on the return journey from Plymouth show, etc." I may say I should certainly have corrected the error had not Mr. Dart's letter appeared. C. E. BROWN.

A Question for Mealworm Breeders.

SIR,—I should like to ask those of your readers who breed mealworms if it is a fact that the beetles have wings, and fly away; also that the worms eat the eggs laid by the beetles? In my own experience I have found it not so; but next week I will give you the experience of a friend of mine, who is a corn chandler, and who found he could not breed any worms after three years' trying.

F. VINCENT.

The Proposed Green-Marked Yorkshire C.C.

SIR,—At the urgent request of the promoters of the new Green Marked Yorkshire C.C., I have been asked to accept the position of secretary pro tem. for the same. I might say we have already over 40 names on our list as intending members. We think the club will be better able to advance the claims of the marked bird, which has been very much neglected at shows, especially in the past, although so valuable to the breeder. We (the promoters) should esteem it a great favour if you would kindly in "Twitterings" insert the notice of the meeting for the formation of the club. All fanciers interested will be welcomed thereat.

F. ARMSTRONG, Sec. pro tem.

Releasing Young Birds from The Egg Shells.

SIR,—I noticed a small paragraph at the end of an instalment of the "Novices Notebook" in CAGE BIRDS, advising novices to let the eggs alone with the exception of emersing them in warm water. I paired up a Crested cock and Crest-bred hen which had four eggs. I removed the cock when the third was laid. On the fourteenth day I expected the eggs to hatch. They failed to do so, and I let her sit another three days. On taking them out I very carefully chipped off the large end of first egg, when I found it empty; the second egg I did the same to, but on doing so I was very surprised to find one young fully-formed chick. I did the same again with the next egg, with the same result, also with the last, but this proved unfertile. I have the two birds, which are getting on splendidly now. I most certainly would have lost them if I had not released them. This was done after dipping them twice. I would like to know if any other fancier has done likewise. However, I would advise doing it after the 15th day at the latest. OVERDUE.

What is a Clear?

SIR,—What is a Clear? A bird free from dark underflue, pure and simple, without finger moult. I once purchased a Buff cock bird, a clear; but six weeks after, when I washed it, I found it was a ticked bird; new feathers were growing. Yield not to temptation or you will expose yourself to the general ridicule. What good is a clear class if ticks are allowed? There is a class for Ticked, Marked, or Variegated; why not have one class for the ticked, and one for the marked or variegated? The trouble would then end in that respect. Include the even-marked birds, too, and judge the birds for type and not for colour. What is type, then? Why the most typical bird selected for the club standard of last year. For a Norwich, don't be deceived by the words "not to exceed 6½ inches," but take the standard of type, something after this style: Let your cock birds be large, with good rounded heads, eye well set at side, full necks, deep chests, well-set leg and pipe tail, wings well braced, not quite close at tips, and the birds standing well across the perch. Let your hens be after the same stamp, full of quality, and of medium size. So it is still type first. Here are a few remarks heard after the judging of the class: "Just look here; did you ever see the like? Look at it! What does he want?" "Why, colour; can't you see?" "Well, there is no type in that thing; he has gone for colour." Now, in my opinion, it's not the judge who is to blame at all; it's the exhibitors, for putting the birds on the show bench—not a good, typical bird in the class, so the judge has to do his best under the circumstances. A stranger called on me a few weeks ago and asked if I had ever seen a better or more typical bird than Mr. Irons' buff, or a yellow which Mr. Davis showed at the Palace. I had to say "No." But a gentleman showed a yellow cock in the £3 Limit Class at a Royal Aquarium show, which was soon claimed, a bird that could run away with any that I saw last show season. I rather think this said bird came from Kingston-on-Thames, and it stood first. But the bird of to-day seems to be larger, though I contend that it is so only by appearance, owing to the bird carrying longer feathers. Take the bird in your hand, and you will be convinced. A short, tight-feathered bird then seems to be the larger of the two. It's not feather we want on a Norwich Plainhead, but flesh and muscle, a good solid handful. I remember a yellow cock that Mr. Silk, sen., used to show, with a wonderful head and full neck, deep in chest, short in tail, well-braced pair of wings, well-set legs, bold in eye, and the eyes set in the side, not just behind its beak, as in a lot of the so-called good ones to-day. I am in hopes of seeing a good one yet. I trust that the judges will take type as their first point, and that exhibitors will send along type for them to deal with. Then there will be no argument about the ability of the judge to deal with his class, and he will not get colour blinded, for it will be a type standard. I hope your columns will be open to further sound gospel to assist the learned and unlearned in the bird pastime.

A Question for Budgerigar Breeders.

SIR,—In reply to A. J. Holloway, permit me to say that I have found it hopeless to hand-rear Budgerigars. I have tried about three birds at different times, birds which the parents refused to feed. Budgerigars have a small tongue, like a little hard pea, which prevents one getting at their throats, and then, as their parents feed in quite a different way to other birds, they don't "gape" like ordinary nestlings, for the old ones seem to put their beaks right into the young one's mouths. However, if it is for the purpose of taming, this can be accomplished by removing the young as soon as they come out of the cocoanut, and giving them two or three lessons every day. But don't attempt to touch them before they leave the nest, as it annoys the "parents," and will probably have a disastrous effect. I say remove them just for their lesson, and not take them away altogether, because, as a rule, they can't feed themselves for about a fortnight, or sometimes longer, after they leave the "husk."

Terrible Slaughter by a Dulwich Suffragette.

Two Killed and One Laid Bare.

SIR,—Thinking it might be of interest to your many readers, I am sending you a true account of a fighting hen. She is a 1908 Norwich, and is owned by Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, of Dulwich, who are anything but pleased with her killing powers. The first cock that was put with her was found on the cage bottom in a dying condition, and passed away to the "happy hunting ground" in a few minutes, taking with him a large lump on the back of his neck. Cock No. 2 was then introduced to her ladyship, and a sharp watch kept; but alas! she was too quick, catching him in the right place first go. He also lay dead (with another lump). After a few days I took around a good big cock Greenie, thinking he was quite capable of teaching her better manners; but she soon got the best of him, and we had to take him out to save his life. He was minus half his feathers, and with a lump on his neck quite as big as the other two. She tackles every bird in the same way, nipping them at the back of the neck, and shaking them like a rat. Now, what can be done with a bird like her? Canaries she kills, British she has no respect for, so there is only one thing left—try her with a foreigner. I suggest a Parrot.

A Fifteen-year-old Chaffinch.

SIR,—I have a cock Chaffinch who is 15 years old. Although he has lost recently the sight of one eye, he is now in full song. He was taken from a nest by a friend of mine, so that I am sure of his age. He is very tame and will feed from my hand, and even knows my footstep. I think this may interest some of your readers, and I shall be glad to know if it is a record of longevity for this class of bird. I am a constant reader of your periodical, and have found it most useful in the treatment and keeping of birds, which is my hobby.

New Society for Mansfield.

SIR,—I have eight names to enrol as members of our society. Seeing that it only requires a fortnight to Whitsuntide, I cannot make it convenient to call a meeting before the holiday week, but will make it my business to do so the week after the holidays, and I will send notice of same to CAGE BIRDS; so that those who intend to join will please attend. I hope they will come up in good numbers, and let the world know that we have some good fanciers in Mansfield and district, and that we intend to have a club that will hold its own against any in the Midlands. In the meantime, I will do what I can in trying to get some vice-presidents for the society.

A Chat About Yorkshires.

SIR,—The many very interesting discussions on all sorts of subjects which have taken place in London, and been reported in the Fancy Press, have, I think, been entirely eclipsed by the above. What with flat-headed Yorkshires, caused by the head of the young pressing against the shell, and cured by the frequent use of the bath, and the suggestion that a race of five-toed birds could be established, one would think the highest point had been reached. But all this is as nothing compared to the statement by Mr. Mundell that there are dark-eyed Cinnamon marks. This is a staggerer, and no mistake. I should like very much to see one. I have seen hundreds of Cinnamons and Cinnamon marked birds, but I have never seen or even heard of one being dark-eyed. Even a Cinnamon Sport from the Greens is always pink-eyed. Mr. Mundell seems to have had a very lively time of it, and some of the questions asked were teazers, so perhaps he was trying to get a bit of his own back, by seeing if the company would stand the suggestion that there are dark-eyed Cinnamon marks; or perhaps this is a reporter's error. However, I shall wait anxiously for further information.

A Remedy Wanted.

SIR,—I welcomed this item in your last issue from a correspondent who unfortunately did not give his address, as I should have liked to have written him. He is right on the practical side in his letter; it is intensely interesting to read his description of the progress of the symptoms of the peculiar disorder mentioned. I can endorse it thoroughly in every detail. "A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind," and personally, I feel grateful to the unknown for introducing such a practical subject for discussion, and I hope some of the noted "Linnet kings" will for once bring out their store of experience and knowledge for the benefit of the numerous readers who must have gone through the distressing and anxious experiences referred to. I am at a loss myself how to advise him, as I have had just the same trouble this season, and at the present time have two good Scotch Linnets downstairs for special treatment whilst writing, and their breasts are for all the world like those of Pouter Pigeons. I find the abdomen in all cases to be red, and much inflamed, with distended skin, as tight as a drum. I have set it down as inflammation of the bowels, and thought it must be due to constipation and acted accordingly, with the result that they have died just the same. No matter what the state of their droppings, in most cases my experience goes to prove they finish with diarrhœa. It seems peculiar to British birds; it is seldom Canaries get so. Yet I have known odd cases, but you can generally get them round by dieting with bread and milk. Britishers simply ignore this, and won't even touch it; at least, I have found them dead, and they have not had anything else, but preferred death to eating it. Yet the Canaries eat it readily. It is not just the new-caught ones that get it, as I have lost house-moulted Finches, Goldies, Linnets, Siskins, and Redpolls with it. Linnets and Siskins seem to be peculiarly liable to it, although I never had Twites get so. I have fed them as described in detail by noted fanciers, have also had special mixtures with twelve or more different sorts of seeds specially selected for Linnets; but the results have been the same. Like him, I have invariably found it fatal. I have occasionally congratulated myself on having effected a cure and put them back in the flight, yet they seem to relapse again, and a second attack proves speedily fatal. I have kept them solely on cole seed, which some swear by for bringing their "Little Mary's" down, but it relaxes their bowels too much. Maw seed seems acceptable (they eat it readily), but if it is caused by constipation, maw seed will intensify the evil. Linseed seems wrong, for generally they are too fat when they get thick. Niger seed, also, is fattening. If it were not annoying, it would be a most amusing puzzle, although rather too expensive (I can vouch for it that my experience does not prove it a paying hobby). They have nothing in their crops at the finish; they simply tuck their heads away and get in the corner, evidently determined to depart from this "vale of tears." Yet some keep all right and sing lustily on the same diet, perhaps weeks, or months, till their turn comes, and I can bet on the results when I detect the first sign of thick appearance, and the dullness of action plain to see. I hope some capable fancier will elucidate the mystery. I forgot to mention that tincture of aconite in the water has proved futile as a remedy in my case. I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of your valuable paper, which I look for eagerly.

NIL DESPERANDUM.

The Affairs of the United Kingdom Lizard C.B.S.

SIR,—Having read with interest Mr. Thompson's letter in CAGE BIRDS, re the above, and after waiting patiently, and not seeing any reply from the present secretary, I, as the one who proposed the above society, think it is quite time we ended this muddle by having a general meeting to elect officers who would be capable of carrying out the society's interests instead of letting it go to the wall, as there are sufficient fanciers of the Lizard Canary to keep up one good strong society equal to the Norwich Plainhead Club (judging by the number of birds that have left the district), without the inclusion of any other variety of the Canary. Will all members of the U.K.L. Society please attend a meeting at the Howard Arms, High Street, West Glossop, at 6 o'clock on May 30th, 1909, with a view to re-forming the above society? All fanciers invited.

A Small Mixed Lot of Interesting Pets.

SIR,—A short par about my little bird room may interest some of your readers. I am lucky enough to be in a quiet street, with a good big window to the front, and so the birds get lots of sun and light, and by putting up some small-mesh netting I can open the window and give them plenty of fresh air without fear of losing any of them. I keep them in big, roomy, if not showy cages, adapted to each particular bird's requirements. They thus have a happy comfortable time. The first bird I ever kept was a Ring Dove, and as he got to be very tame and fond of me, I got him a wife, and recently they hatched out their first egg. Easily kept, cheap, and good breeders they are, I find, very interesting. My own particular pet is a Starling. He sings continuously from "early morn till dewy eve" (and in gaslight, too); with imitations of my Jay, snatches of songs, a few words, etc., interspersed; and he will bathe as often as he gets near water, even sitting on my hand while I hold him under the kitchen tap! His one fault is that he hates going back to his cage. My only "aliens" are a pair of happy, tricky, sweetly-warbling Budgerigars, the cock of which is quite tame, sitting on my hand, coming out his cage, and running about. Strangely enough, his mate is the very opposite, going into quite feminine hysterics whenever I approach. I got them both at the same time, too. I hope to see them start housekeeping soon. They dearly love a thick branch to peel the bark off, and they saw away quite busily. My biggest bird is a finely-feathered Jay, who is sadly wild yet, but whose confidence I am gradually winning by patience. He makes no mistake about one thing—his food, calling loudly until I attend to his frequent wants. My last arrival is a wee Robin He is singing grandly as I write, and he cost me but a humble "tanner." I lost his mate through the usual delays of the railway. He is a hungry little chap, and goes for his mealworms lustily. To hear his tiny treble mingling with the full, loud notes of the Starling is delightful, and altogether my birds have been a source of much pleasure, both to myself and friends this past winter.

A New Society for Beamish and District.

SIR,—A meeting was held on May 14th, when it was decided to form a cage bird society for Beamish and District, to be called the "Beamish and District Cage Bird Society." Our headquarters are to be at the Bird Inn, High Hold, open only to novices. All novice fanciers will, therefore, be made welcome at the next meeting, to be held at the Bird Inn, on May 22nd, at 7 o'clock. The contributions will be 6d. per month. The following officers were elected at the last meeting—Mr. W. Knowles, Chairman; Mr. Jos. Carr, treasurer; and myself as Hon. Sec.

Does It Constitute a Record?

SIR,—I would be glad to learn, through the medium of your paper, which I take in regularly, whether the following does not establish a record. For some few years now I have taken an interest in Canaries, and in a small way have also done some breeding. I have a Roller hen, two years old, which I mated up with a Schoolmaster, and placed them in a double breeding cage to themselves. She brought off a nest of three birds, and when they were nineteen days old she again commenced to lay. She laid the first two days, missed the third, then laid for eight consecutive days, making a total of ten eggs in eleven days. I am away from home from six in the morning until six in the evening, but as far as I could see she commenced sitting in real earnest when I placed the four eggs in the nest. My difficulty was to know which were the eggs she laid after. I managed to tell two of them, and removed them, leaving her eventually with eight, which she is covering beautifully. I should be glad to know if any of your readers have had a similar experience, and how they have managed at hatching time. A. HORSLEY.

Type of Present-day Winning Norwich Plainheads.

SIR,—Be good enough to allow me space in your valuable paper to answer Mr. Floyd's questions. He says he is not a "disappointed exhibtor"; that may be so, but I have never heard tell of him winning any prizes in open competition worth mentioning during the last eight years. Oh, yes! I know who you are quite well, Mr. F. You ask me whether I "bought 'Queenie' or bred her." I bred "Queenie" myself, and she was born in my bath room on July 8th, 1904, and won for me that year 1st and special best Unflighted at Hawick; 2nd South Shields, 2nd Morpeth, 1st and special in open Yellow hen class at Gateshead, also gold medal best Unflighted belonging to member of B.C.N. and C.C., and in 1905 1st, special and B.C.N. and C.C. medal at Hexham, 1st and special best Yellow, also cup for best bird at Kirkcaldy, Morpeth 1st special and medal, Gateshead 1st special and bowl for best in show, after which I sold her to Mr Eckersley for £20. Now, I consider it a very mean thing to try and take the honour of breeding this bird from me. Fortunately, I have plenty of witnesses to prove I bred her; Mr. Dixon, of Bedlington, Mr. Sealey of Choppington, Mr. Pegg of Morpeth, and Mr. Myers of Morpeth, saw this bird frequently while she was young and before she was exhibited. It is yet another insult to say that I have "bought" my success. I have won at the leading shows with Unflighted birds every year, from my start in the Fancy, and I have never bought an Unflighted winning Norwich in my life. It may be news to you, Mr. Floyd, to hear that I made in my second year £50 7s. 6d. from my birds; so where does the "buying" of my success come in? Since then I have bought an occasional stock bird at the end of the show season, as any sensible fancier will do to improve his stock. Almost every stock will develop faults, and it behoves every fancier to see that they are corrected at once by the introduction of a suitable stock bird; and no thinking man would term this "buying" success. I am pleased to say that I do not now require any outside help, as my last year's performance of 29 firsts with Norwich, the Scottish National Cup, also Sandiford's Cup, and the N.N.P.C. solid silver bowl, which I have won outright, all with birds I have bred myself, proves the quality of my strain at the present time. Next Mr. Floyd asks me how long is the typical hen and most of my winning cocks. Well, if he means my Unflighted Yellow hen, that was first and special best Unflighted at the Scottish National (the hen that beat both the Unflighted yellow and buff winning cocks), this hen, I should say, is 6in. to 6¼in. long. I don't know how long Messrs. Turner and Martin's birds are. I should think "Queenie" was 6ins. or 6¼ins. long. What has your father being in the Fancy before I was born got to do with "The Type of the Present-day Winning Norwich," Mr. F? You talk of your progress being the result of a plodding, uphill fight. I have never heard of any progress you have made. I know of nothing you have done that could be termed progress this last eight years. Your progress reminds me of the time I was at school, when a boy came late one frosty morning, and was questioned by the master as to the reason. He said that in climbing a steep hill on the road to the school for every step he took forward he slipped two backward. "Oh," said the master, "then kindly explain how you managed to get here?" Boy: "Well, sir, I turned round and walked backwards." I am inclined to think that you are like this boy; you must have been progressing backward. If, as you say, you know what you are "writing and sketching about," that last letter of yours does not show this knowledge; in fact, I fail to see what it has got to do with the typo of the present-day winning Norwich at all. In no part of that letter do you bring any argument to prove that 5½ins. is a suitable length for a Norwich, nor do you mention any noted winning Norwich that was that length. I was requested by the Editor of CAGE BIRDS to give my opinion on the "Winning Norwich," and I venture to think that I backed up my ideal Norwich 6in. to 6¼in. with sound sense, and gave good reasons for same. I mentioned no names, and only criticised your standard in a gentlemanly way. If you are able to write as you say, you ought to be able to bring forward sound sense in support of your "ideal" standard, instead of what you wrote last week, which, in my opinion, had nothing to do with the subject. I consider your 5½in. in Border Fancy or "Wee Gem" standard no standard for a Norwich at all, for then a judge would have to place some birds in the money that would only be 5ins. long; nice little "wasters" these would be!

ALFRED GREY.

Natural Colour Classes at Forthcoming Shows.

SIR,—In reference to Mr. F. G. Smith's letter in May 15 issue of your valuable paper, should like to say that the Gloucester C.B.S. has always catered for the natural-colour Canary. Last year we gave two classes for Norwich Plainheads natural colour—one for Yellow Clear or Marked, and one for Buff, ditto, entry fee 1s. 6d., with prize money as follows:—First, £1; second, 10s.; third, 7s. 6d.; fourth, 2s. 6d. Special prize £1 cash for best natural-colour Plainhead in show. And we are again catering for them at our next open show on October 27th.

Some Strange Nesting Sites.

SIR,—Allow me, through the medium of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, to state that one day, while taking a walk through some fields near Sunderland, I saw a basket lying right in the centre of a field. I went over to it and found inside two nests—a Hedge Sparrow's and a Thrush's. The Sparrow's nest contained five eggs, and the Thrush's three. Is not this rather remarkable, seeing that these two birds usually build in hedges or the like? A few yards further on is a scare-crow. Inside the pocket of the coat is a Robin's nest, newly-built, and containing two freshly-laid eggs. Another time, while on a bird-nesting expedition, I found a Linnet, quite dead, sitting upon five eggs. The bird was quite cold and stiff, and looked as if it had been dead quite twenty-four hours. The eggs were quite warm.

The Breeding of Winning Norwich Plainheads.

SIR,—I feel sure all lovers of the Norwich Plainhead must have been very interested in the last two or three issues of CAGE BIRDS, and some have, no doubt, learned something to their advantage when reading the views of such well-known breeders and exhibitors, under the heading "Our Round Table." Speaking for myself, and being a lover of that cobby bird, the Norwich Plainhead, I was very much interested. I have bred a decent bird or two in my time, and some of the best have been bred from the least expected quarter, namely, what I considered the worst pair of birds. But while reading through the views of the writers I could not help noticing the difference of opinion of some of the writers when it comes to mating the pairs together to breed winners. Mr. Dent likes one bird to have good size and the other to have plenty of style and quality; Mr. Cameron likes both birds to be of medium size; Mr. Baker likes the birds of good, medium size, the cock bird to be the larger of the two; Mr. Grey (who has bred some good birds) prefers a large male bird, the hen to be short in flight and tail (I suppose that means small or medium-sized hens); Mr. Hodder, another breeder, prefers the cocks to be large, and the hen very typical (and he ought to know, having bred some good birds in his time); Mr. Brown prefers to pair his best birds together, as he detests big, browy stock birds. Now, I almost fancy I can hear a novice saying, after reading the above, "Now I am done; how shall I pair my birds up to produce winners?" And what advice can one give, but to say, sift your birds out a bit, and pair up different pairs according to the views of the writers? For my part, I like a good, big, bold cock bird with plenty of colour, big head and neck, but, as with friend Hodder, it must have a sweet, typical hen to go with. Years ago I remember going into a fancier's room (I was a very raw novice then), and looking at his stock of birds I saw a good one, as I thought. The fancier told me it had won at several shows, and was second at the Palace, so I asked what the parents were like, and I can assure you I was never more astonished in my life than when he pointed to a big browy-looking bird, a giant in size. I had just read an article in a Fancy paper (not CAGE BIRDS) on the Norwich Plainhead, where it advised breeders to discard all such birds. But when he showed me the sweet, typical bird that he had paired to the rough-looking article, the cock bird, I was not so surprised that that bird put size into his stock—good heads and necks as well. About two years after that I bought a similar bird off the same man, which bred me a Buff which turned out a winner of over twenty first prizes, a cup, and several medals. Now, I don't want fanciers to think I advocate the keeping of all browy, big stock birds; but if I breed a big bird a bit browy I would sooner keep that if I were wanting size in my stock than run about looking for another which I didn't know anything about as to how it was bred. Mr. Dent doesn't mind if the hen is the larger one of the pair, so long as one has the size. Generally speaking, most fanciers prefer the hen to be the smaller when breeding with a large and small bird, but the novice need not despair about that, for Mr. Dent knows a thing or two, having bred a few good birds in his time, and so must know what he is talking about. So that novices need not part with all their big hens. Mr. Cameron likes the birds of medium size, as also does Mr. Baker. Well, friend Baker, you ought to know, as you have bred them, and should know a good deal about it (if you don't pick them up, Edward). As to buying, you are not the only one who buys a good bird, and we sometimes want the likes of you to come along when the pocket is low; but I was wondering how you were able to keep up size in your stock if you only bred with medium-sized birds to breed winners; or are those medium-sized birds bred from big stock birds? Or is it the smell of those lovely cakes and pastries that does the trick? My experience in breeding with the medium-sized birds is that I get my birds down in size a lot; but I know one thing, I can breed some good, typical hens with such pairs. So does Mr. Baker, by the look of some he turns out at times. I feel sure there are a lot of fanciers like Mr. Baker who are amused at some of the letters received from applicants for birds, such as requests for a Palace winner for about 12s. 6d. I recently had a letter from a man wanting a yellow Norwich Plainhead cock bird. He writes: "The bird must be a young and very large one; good, big, bold head, which must be free from browing, but must be round, and the bird short in wings and tail, tight in feather, and extra good colour; must be well across the perch, price 12s. 6d." I thought the fellow must be "up the stick" (or perch) himself. After giving about £5 or £6 for the parent birds, one is asked for a bird like the above for 12s. 6d.! I thank all the fanciers for their views on the Plainhead, and wish them a successful breeding season.

The Clashing of Show Dates in Scotland.

SIR,—I was much surprised and disappointed to observe in last week's CAGE BIRDS that Forfar and District C.B.I.S. had decided to hold an open show on October 23rd next. Already two societies in Scotland (Kelty and Perth) have fixed on the above date for their open show, and as all the three towns above-mentioned are within comparatively easy reach of each other, the decision of the Forfar society is all the more surprising. Kelty and Perth dates have been advertised for some time in your paper, and I take it that the Forfar members are quite well aware of the fact. How then can they expect their show to be a success, clashing as it does? They will endanger the success not only of their own show, but also of Perth and Kelty. I notice the Forfar members request the Fancy to rally round them, but if that society gets its desserts its show will be a failure. I trust the Fancy will encourage those first in the field. It would surely have been an easy matter for the Forfar society to have selected a more convenient date (i.e., the 16th October, on which there is no show billed). Are our Forfar friends too selfish to consider others? And are they too stupid to see that by their action they will also be sufferers? When societies advertise in the show dates column, it makes this result seem all the more absurd. We in Scotland hear many complaints about the Cage Bird Union, but it seems to me that we could well do with such a union. There is still time for the Forfar society to alter its date, but the two other societies have, of course, appointed judges, and cannot now make any alteration.

Wonderful Experiences.

SIR,—It is only reasonable to expect that some more or less novel experience should have fallen to the lot of a breeder of nearly twenty years' standing, as Mr. Bryant claims to be in your last issue. Twin Canaries, though certainly rare, are now to be found recorded yearly, and two eggs containing twins in one clutch have also been recorded in your columns. But for a Canary to lay an egg as large as a pigeon's, and be none the worse for it, is, I fear, putting almost too great a strain upon the credulity of the average fancier. I will not, of course, go the length of saying that such a thing did not occur, but I would like to suggest that when Mr. Bryant has the misfortune to lose another Canary by death, he should pluck the body entirely bare of feathers, then procure a pigeon's egg, and compare the two side by side INCREDULOUS.

The Border Fancy Canary in the South.

SIR,—I notice a mistake somehow crept into my letter appearing in the last issue of CAGE BIRDS, which please rectify at once, in case "Wee McGregor" is at me. Do not the rules say "not to exceed five inches in length," should have read five and a-half inches, and my remarks are applicable to a bird over the last-mentioned length.

J. PATTERSON.

SIR,—Seeing I have already taken up so much of your valuable space on the above subject, I will answer the letter of "Wee McGregor" as briefly as possible with justice to myself. I will leave out the personal element, and allow readers to judge for themselves which of us has the interest of the fancy most at heart. This correspondent, by his inconsistency of argument and dogmatic expressions, does not give one thought as to how he hurts others, who have dared to whisper the slightest opposition to his way of thinking. I don't belittle any special judges (himself included). Let each act worthy of his office, and the honour extended to him. Now, with regard to some of Scotland's best birds have either of the two beauties depicted on CAGE BIRDS' last coloured plate, ever been so far South? The yellow cock is, without any doubt, the finest yet seen—has been described as the "marvel of the breeder's art"—and if he is not the perfect model aimed at by the B.F.C.C., then many eyes have been greatly deceived. I could mention more, but hope readers will rest content with this instance. Again, I emphatically deny that I have "libelled" either any person in Scotland or England, or their birds, and even although "Wee McGregor" has limited his argument to a certain radius, I have never done so. His sneer about my shifting my ground and shuffling out only recoils on his own head. He has lashed himself into a fury against your humble servant, but without cause. Have I not already stated that the reason Scotland's exhibitors sent birds to the shows he mentioned was because the judge ought to know a Border? Again, I say, that as far as Scotland is concerned, this type of bird (thick-necked) is fast disappearing. I take a wide outlook. If London and district is the South, there is indeed a very large North left wherein this variety is bred, and where your paper, CAGE BIRDS, is eo widely read and admired. As to misguiding the novices by telling them to discard all thick-necked birds, when I must have had such birds in my room which I had disposed of to someone (presumably to be used to breed Borders from); now if he had followed this correspondence closely he would have noticed that I advised the novice to return all bull-necked birds as useless This proves very clearly that I have the courage of my convictions. I have conducted this correspondence purely for the love of the bird we admire, not from the motive this "Wee McGregor" would like to place on my actions. Now, sir, I have answered all the questions asked by this correspondent truthfully and honestly, without any spite, and as one gentleman might expect from another, I expect him to let me know the name and date of show he mentions where the complaints were loud and long against my awards. If not, in future, I will not take the slightest notice of any letter appearing under his cowardly nom de plume. J. PATTERSON.

Canary Breeding for Beginners - - Post Free. 7d.

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to-date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SIR,—Mr. Robert Ellwood having made free use of my name in your columns, and in your last issue having practically made a charge of dishonesty of action against me, must be my excuse for asking permission to reply to that gentleman. It is quite true my brother did show at a show where I was judging, which show was the Dulwich and Peckham Cage Bird Society's annual open show. Why did Mr. Ellwood omit to mention the name of the show? At that show there were two specials given, one for the best novice bird in the show, the other for the second best novice. While judging, of course, I had nothing to indicate which were novice birds or which were champion, both champion and novices competing in the same classes. Consequently when awarding these specials my steward, Mr. Cunningham, had to tell me, as I picked out the birds, whether they were eligible to compete for these specials or not. The special for best novice bird went to the second prize Yellow Self Cinnamon (not Cinnamon marked, as Mr. Ellwood says; neither was the special for best novice bird ever awarded to the first prize evenly marked bird as stated by him). In awarding the special for second best novice bird my steward allowed me in error to give it to a champion bird. This, as I have already said, was no fault of mine, I not knowing which were champions and which were novices, being guided entirely by my steward, and I am sure it was purely an error on his part. In the evening of the first day of the show Mr. Ellwood visited the show and pointed this out to one of the stewards. I had not left the show and the official came to me about the error. I said I was quite willing to re-award the special, it then going to the 1st prize evenly marked bird, which was No. 3 in Class 24, Mr. Ellwood's 3rd prize bird being No. 2 in the same class. By some means (I don't know how) the special card, I am informed, got put on to Mr. Ellwood's bird in error; but surely no one with the slightest reason in them at all would expect to take a special with a 3rd prize bird over the 1st prize bird in the same class, which was equally eligible to compete for that special. It will be observed that Mr. Ellwood does not complain of the special being transferred from the champion bird; but complains of the 1st prize bird in the class he was competing in taking the special over his 3rd prize. I am prepared to swear that this 1st prize bird was never awarded the special for best novice at any time, as stated by Mr. Ellwood, but the special for second best. I was informed by the secretary, Mr. Hodson, in whom I have every confidence, and whose integrity is beyond dispute, that all this was explained to Mr. Ellwood, yet he wrote to him that the last had not been heard of it. He writes in your columns as if some injury had been done him by me. If Mr. Ellwood was not satisfied with the explanation of the officials of the society, he could have had it confirmed by me, or otherwise, if he had written me. I am prepared to swear on oath that such are the facts of the case, and to call the officials and committee to prove such. I am also prepared to swear on oath that I did not know my brother (who lives some 300 miles from London) was showing at that show, nor had I ever seen his birds before. I am also prepared to swear that on seeing my brother's name in the catalogue of the said show, I wrote to him forbidding him ever to show a bird under me again, as I am one who believes in not allowing the slightest suspicions to follow my actions. My character is the dearest thing on earth to me, and I would not sacrifice it at any cost. But I am not responsible for my brother's foolishness in sending birds to a show where I was judging, though I am sure he did it with a pure mind, not thinking it left an open door to suspicion. I did all that any one could do—that was, forbade him ever to do it again. I further make an emphatic denial to all Mr. Ellwood's statements anent myself, nor am I ashamed to sign my name to what I write. Mr. Ellwood's attack on me is a malicious one, with a view to damaging my reputation. He writes to you as if he had some secrets to divulge to the Fancy, that I had been doing something I should not, and quotes the Dulwich show incident, over which I had no control, and am in no way responsible for. All my doings are fair and just, and I will not be twisted either to the right or left even by Mr. Ellwood. I fear no man on earth in regard to my actions and doings. If Mr. Ellwood accredits me with dishonesty of action in any shape or form, or collusion with my brother, he has only to say so, and we will prove it in a place other than the Fancy Press. If my name is further referred to as having acted dishonourably in any shape or form, proceedings will be at once instituted.

JOHN ROBSON.

Under the White Rose.

THE Y.C.C. held its annual general meeting on Saturday last at headquarters, a fairly large and representative body of fanciers being present. The balance-sheet for the past season must be considered most satisfactory. The result of the ballot for officers was made known (see secretary's report), Mr. F. Armstrong (Halifax) being returned as president for the ensuing year. Hearty votes of thanks were given the retiring officers, Mr. Shackleton, the late president, responding. The arrangements for next season's competitions were next considered, the premier trophy being presented by Mr. J. Bailey, a seven-guinea prize to be won twice before becoming the property of any exhibitor. A change is to be made in the outside Yorkshire prizes. The Y.C.C. will now offer to societies desiring its patronage, a number of silver medals with an enamelled Yorkshire bird in centre, to be competed for by members of the club at such shows, one medal to be won at each show, and only one to be won by any exhibitor during a season. Two substantial prizes were given for the amateur and novice sections, Mr. F. Armstrong presenting a shaving cabinet for members who have not previously won a Y.C.C. competition prize, and Mr. A. Gill an easy chair, value two guineas, to the novices. In future all competitors must "star" the birds they wish to compete for the specials, three being the highest number of birds an exhibitor is to be allowed to compete with at each show.

YORKSHIRE Union holds a delegates' meeting to-day (Saturday), when one or two items of great interest are to be brought forward. At the close of this, the "Green Marked Y.C.C." will probably be put into working order. A meeting is being called to take place at 7.30, when Mr. W. H. Shackleton, the promoter, hopes to see many besides the forty odd names he has already down. He and others are pleased to hear that the idea of this club is well liked outside the Bradford district, and no doubt Mr. Crawhall's plea (see last week's CAGE BIRDS) for the even-marked birds will receive due consideration; in fact, there is every probability that they will be included. The Cinnamon Marked Club now allow them to compete; and this is only just. What can appear more ridiculous than for a club to promote the breeding of marked birds, and then, when a fancier breeds one to the highest point of variegation, viz., an even-marked specimen, to debar him from exhibiting it under the club's patronage? By all means let them be included.

I MIGHT mention an occurrence at one of the Yorkshire Union shows last season, not in Yorkshire classes (therefore it must be in Norwich!), where the schedule read: "Ticked or variegated Yellow, etc." In the A.V. class were two evenly-marked birds of the same variety, that should by all means have been shown in the former class as variegated, as they were birds that showed the highest form of varicgation. But nobody mentioned the matter, and it would probably not be noticed by many.

EVERY evening one can see fanciers out in search of green food, dandelion being usually selected for the first round; but even now some complain that it is getting too rank and strong for feeding young birds, so fanciers will do well to prepare for a new crop. During the next few weeks this plant will be in full seed, and this is the time to gather it and put it straight into the ground. Method, dig up pretty deep and loose, then sow fairly thickly, and cover to the depth of from a quarter to half an inch—just sufficient to keep it from the sight of the cheeky Sparrow. In a few weeks you will have a nice thick bed of juicy and succulent green food. Sowing it thickly prevents its growing rank too quickly. Another method is to cut off the old roots just below the crown, when a good thick crop of new leaves will repay you for your labours. One thing often done is to keep the seed over to the following spring. But this is a waste of time and material as it will not grow; it must be sown as soon as ripe. A friend of mine put in four ounces this spring (cost 1s. 6d.) but is still waiting for the first bit of green! "STRAIGHT-'UN."

PORTMADOC.

A cage bird section was added to this good old fixture, held May 14th, in the Park, protection being provided for the birds.—Entries did not come up to the average. It could not be expected that many Canaries would turn up, as the breeding season is well advanced; still, some of our best graced the show-bench once more. Hybrids, British and Foreign birds mustered fairly well. There were very few Norwich, but those exhibited were of good type. Yorkshires were a little more numerous, and some beautiful typical birds were shown. Messrs. Williams and Williams won the special for best cage bird, with a fine, all-round, wing-marked dark Crest; best Mule or Hybrid, Mr. Richards, with a Goldfinch variegated Mule, pretty, evenly marked; best British Goldfinch, Mr. P. H. Harris (London); best Softbill, Mr. A. C. Brotherhood, with an excellent Waxwing. Altogether the birds were shown in good condition. An excellent committee of ardent fanciers manage the affairs of the society, headed by the chairman, Mr. J. Humphreys, treasurer Mr. J. R. Pritchard, and Mr. R. G. Humphreys the indefatigable secretary, as usual, had everything in good order. Messrs. D. B. Williams, W. G. Williams, J. Thomas, and O. J. Roberts are a very fine staff of hard-working stewards, who did their best for exhibitors, and had everything over in good time. Mr. A. De Winton judged.

NOR. TICK., ETC.: 1, 3, Winnard, both typical birds, in good form, winner fine size, variegated, rare stamp, nice head points, latter four-pointed, even-marked, grand shape, colour and quality; 2, E. J. Jones, another good buff, lightly mkd., with immense size, in excellent form; hc, L. Jones. CREST: 1, Williams and Williams, capital bodied, wing-marked D.C., well centred and framed crest, in good order; 2, E. J. Jones, another grand bodied Crest, good one. YORKS.: 1, Owens Bros., cl. buff, long and stylish, in excellent form; 2, Strong, nice all-round buff; 3, Williams and Williams, very smooth, upstanding, stylish hird, neat head, wings and tail. TKD. OR VARIEG.: 1, J O. Williams, well-known wing-mkd. buff, full of style and quality, in good condition; 2, E. J. Jones, another ticked, fine length, straight as a pencil, well up on leg. A.O.V.: 1, 3, Winnard, Nor., cl. yell., winning, ideal, well over perch, good, round head, and a blaze of colour, 3rd fine buff Ner., splendid contour and condition; 2, H. S. Davies, Scotch Fancy, not looking his best; hc, G. Edwards, Davics; c, J. O. Williams. MULE OR HYB.: 1, Richards, Goldfinch, variegated Mule, in pink of condition; 2, Winnard, Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hyb., rare stamp, nice deep colour and condition; 3, E. Jones, lovely dark Goldfinch Mule; hc, Jackson, buff Linnet Mule, well shaped, good size; hc, D. R. Jones, Greenfinch Mule. BRIT. GOLDFINCH: 1, Harris, nice Britisher, not looking his best to-day; 2, Pritchard, nice blaze and tanning; 3, Jackson, typical Finch, in best of colours and condition, rare big face, deep blaze, good tanning, moons well defined; hc, J. O. Williams, fine blaze and condition; c, Owens Bros., very typical Finch, good tans and buttons. HARDBILL: 1, Winnard, very big Bullie, fine shape, nice cap, lovely colour; 2, Owens Bros., grand Greenfinch, put down very fit; 3, Bell. SOFTBILL: 1, Brotherhood, really fine, well-conditioned Waxwing, well shown. FOR.: 1, Davies, Peruvian Lorry, very good third; 2, Miss M. Jones, very nice exhibit; 3, Bell. BRIT. THRUSH, ETC.: 1, D. Thomas, Glaslyn Stores, very nice Blackbird. A.O.V. BRIT.: 2, Bell, very good-sized, sound coloured Greenie, put down very fit.

BRIGHTON F. AND F.A.

Fifth monthly show held on May 5th, at the King and Queen Hotel Assembly Room, when there were a nice number of exhibits. Mr. Gravett placed the tickets to the general satisfaction. The awards were: NOR.: 1, Absalom. YORKS: 1 and 2, Dandridge. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, Absalom; 2, Riddles: 3, Dean. BRIT: 1, Pearson.—A. RIDDLES, Assist. Sec.

ALNWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Second table show of British song birds held at Kemp's Temperance Hotel, on April 28th. Thirty-six birds were displayed, and considerable interest was taken in the exhibition by the many people who visited the room. Mr. J. Robinson (Alnwick) officiated as judge, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

BULLFINCH, ETC.: 1, Staig; 2, Baxter; 3, Forster and Thain; vhc, Baxter. LINNETS: 1, 3, Baxter; 2, Knox; vhc, Forster and Thain; hc, Wake; c, Beswick. REDPOLLS: 1, Straughan; 2, 3, vhc, Baxter; hc, Staig; c, Forster and Thain. GREENFINCH, ETC.: 1, spl, for best bird in show, 2, vhc, hc, Baxter, Greenfinch, Chaffinch; 3, c, Knox, Bramblefinch. A.O.V.: 1, Forster and Thain; 2, Baxter; 3, Knox, Yellow Buntings; vhc, Staig; hc, Forster and Thain; c, Forster and Thain. The next show of the society in May will be confined to first nest feather Canaries.—W. A. BROADLEY, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW & W. COUNTIES CLUB

Usual monthly meeting held in Good Templars Hall, 122, Ingram Street, Mr. Pettigrew presiding. The first business was the date of our meetings. Mr. Malcolmson moved that we retain our old date, seconded by Mr. Connelly; carried unanimously. It was carried that we have a ramble on May 22nd, to Cadzow Forest. The judges for the monthly show are, Messrs. Renfrew, Knox, Shearer, and Reid. Awards of show were as follows:—REDPOLL: 1, 7, Malcolmson, 1st grand one, wins easily; 2, 3, Connelly, two good ones, staged in fine order; 4, 5, Pettigrew, two nice birds; 6, Thomson. MEALY REDPOLL, ETC.: 1, spl, Malcolmson, grand bird, in first-class order; 2, 4, spl, Pettigrew, 2nd nice bird in fine order, well staged; 3, spl, 5, Connelly, 3rd good bird, with another moult should win; 6, Small; 7, Thomson. CHAFFINCH: 1, Small, fine one; 2, 3, 5, 6, Pettigrew, team of grand ones, close on winner; 4, Thomson, staged in fine order. BRAMBLEFINCH: 1, 5, 6, Pettigrew, 1st grand bird, well tanned, staged in nice order; 2, spl, Small, fine bird, well up; 3, Connelly, good bird, staged in grand order; 4, Malcolmson, fine strong bird.—T. DRYSDALE, Sec.

LLANGEFNI.

Show held May 7th. Two classes were provided for Cage Birds for the first time, which no doubt will mean a bright future for the Society. There are many good all-round fanciers already in the island, and the Llangefni Show officials who have done such good work in previous years to improve stock and increase prize money, will undoubtedly do the same with regard to Cage Birds. The Drill Hall is well lighted and ventilated, and is one of the best places adapted for such a show. All was in apple pie order, under the supervision of the most willing and able Hon. Secretary (Mr. T. J. Pritchard), the President (A. C. Davies, Esq.), the Vice-President (Dr. G. Ll. Jones), and a good staff of stewards in all sections. The weather was very favourable. Mr. L. P. C. Astley (London) made the awards, which proved satisfactory. Some real good birds were shown, especially the winners.

BRIT. GOLDFINCH (4): 1, Owen, good size, fine blaze, tans, and buttons, shown in nice condition; 2, Jones, very good colour, nice tanning and blaze, bars and buttons, not looking his best; 3, J. O. Williams, Greypate, very promising all-round young bird, well up, rare face and condition; res. L. Roberts, Greypate, good colour. Can. (8): 1, J. O. Williams, very stylish and typical Yorks, wing mkd. buff, well up on legs, neat head, wings and tail as straight as a pencil, in tight condition, takes spl. for best bird; 2, W. H. Williams, wing mkd. dark Crest, fine all-round bird, well framed, well centred crest, A1 body; 3, vhc, Molan and Williams, 3rd another cl. yell. Yorks, slim and stylish, nice carriage, good condition, vhc same variety and colour; res. L. Jones, tkd. Yorks.; hc, R. Williams, Cinn., Nor. type; c, Owen, Green foul Yorks.

FIFE AND KINROSS NORWICH P.C.

Meeting held May 15, in Penman's Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath, when some more new members joined. The club's membership is steadily growing. The members gave a report of their breeding results, and those present had about 50 young birds between them. It was agreed to write to CAGE BIRDS stating that all societies in Fife and Kinross wishing the club's patronage should write to me for same before 30th July.—A. DICKSON, 37, Adam's Terrace, Kelty.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting held May 15th, at Fawcett Street Cafe. The Chairman, Mr. J. Farrar, presided. The Secretary placed before the members a letter from the secretary of the Northern Crest Club, intimating that the N.C.C. Club show would be held in conjunction with our annual show, November 19th and 20th. It was decided that the classification for the Crest section of our show be drawn up, and the following classes were decided upon:—Norwich dark Crested buff cock; Crested hen, any colour; yellow Crest-bred; Crest-bred cock, buff; Crest-bred hen, any colour; Norwich pairs for Crest breeding; Norwich Crest, bred 1909; Crest-bred, bred 1909; Crest, a.o.v. The rest of the evening was devoted to discussing various birdy matters, one very interesting item being wild birds and the feeding of their young. Fanciers are welcome to attend our meetings.—W. REID, Hon. Secretary.

MIDLAND COUNTIES YORKS. C.C.

General meeting held at the Crown Hotel, Birmingham, on May 13th, Mr. Paddock in the chair. First on the agenda was the framing of by-laws, of which seven were proposed, seconded and carried. The patronage of the M.C.Y.C.C. will stand over for consideration until next meeting, date of which will be published in due course in CAGE BIRDS. It was decided to give in addition to the specials already reported a trophy, conditions of which appear in by-laws. It was proposed that the condolence of the meeting be sent to the Revd. Coussmaker, a member of the club, in his bereavement. Applications have been received from several societies for the M.C.Y.C.C. patronage, all of which are under consideration. Specials were promised by the following: Mr. J. C. Cain (Birmingham), Mr. Uzzell, Sen. (Birmingham), and the Revd. Coussmaker (Rugeley). Will all fanciers wishing to join, please note that they can show at all shows where our patronage is given, without severing their connections from the societies to which they belong, as this is a specialist club. In my report of committee meeting, held April 22nd, it was stated that we had decided to add two additional classes for Cinnamon marked birds in the event of our securing a cup. We have been unable to meet the donors' conditions, so for this year this will have to stand in abeyance.—W. H. UZZELL, Hon. Secretary, 76, Drayton Road, Kingsheath, Birmingham.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

The executive sent out a considerable number more members' tickets this year, and the returns up-to-date are equal to previous years. Gentlemen who have hitherto supported the society, owing to circumstances over which they had no control for the present, have fallen out of the Fancy; against these new members have come forward. In the end it is to be hoped the executive will have the joy of having a substantial membership. I have to remind readers that the membership year closes on May 31st. I will take it as a favour if fanciers who do not intend to be in attendance at the half-yearly meeting will remit for sold tickets, and return the unsold on or before the 31st day of this month, to enable the roll to be completed in due course. Scotch Fancy Canary breeders have supported the National Derby Association substantially in the past, and Messrs. Hart (honorary president), Wright (president), Councillor Hogg (vice-president), and others, would like the current membership to exceed former years. Brother fanciers can, if they will, bring out 1909 as the record; it is required to maintain the supremacy of the graceful Scotch Fancy Canary. New members heartily welcome; they can have a membership ticket on dropping a postcard to the secretary.—THOMAS SMITH, Sec., 56, Minard-road, Crossmyloof, Glasgow.

HAMILTON (Cadzow Oaks) O.S.

Meeting held in the Town Hall on May 8th, Mr. D. Johnston in the chair; 14 present. The secretary announced that the lecture on "Birds I Have Kept," by Mr. Wm. Hamilton, was held over. Annual social: Will guarantors who have not yet paid up kindly do so, as the bills have to be met? Members are reminded that subscriptions are now due for membership, the half-year's rent of the Lesser Town Hall having to be met in May. Mr. Malcolmson moved, seconded by Mr. H. Forrest, that the portion of the March, 1909, minutes relating to confined show be deleted; carried. A discussion then ensued as to whether we should have a confined or open show. Proposed by G. Martin, seconded by A. Malcolmson, that we hold an open members' show, exhibitors at annual show to become members of the society on or before June, 1909, meeting, and members or their servants to accompany their birds to the show. Passed by nine votes. The 25th December was agreed upon, by nine votes, as the date. The classification approved contains: Norwich, 11; Borders, 10; Mule or Hybrid, 6; British and Foreign, 12 classes. It was proposed and carried, regarding the two selling classes, that the price of Norwich be 15s., Borders 10s., that sealed offers be made for birds, and that the highest offer before four p.m. on show date be accepted, and that all amounts realised above the selling prices go to the funds of the society. The secretary was instructed to write to one judge for each section, or three in all. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman. As the annual show is to be on new lines this year there will be a committee meeting on Saturday, May 22nd, at 48, Barrack-street, to discuss the best means of advertising it. Will all members who have not yet paid, and all intending exhibitors at the show, kindly forward their subscriptions to me at 48, Barrack-street, amount 2s. 6d., payable on or before June, 1909, meeting. The entry fees and prize money will be the same as at our last open show. If not accepted, the half-crowns of intending members will be returned to them after the June meeting. As this is the first show (so far as is known) giving open show prize money in a members' show, we are looking to the Fancy to support us. The June meeting should be held on the first Saturday, but as that is a holiday the secretary is endeavouring to obtain the Town Hall on the 19th June. The appointment of judges for annual show, and classification and judges for young bird show in July, will be brought before this meeting.—A. CANT, Hon. Sec.

Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. Prospects.

I am pleased to report that application for membership of the Cinnamon-marked Yorkshire C.C., has already been received from the following fanciers, who intend to take up this interesting variety, writes Mr. H. H. Towers, joint secretary, 8, Colne Road, Glusburn, Crosshills, near Keighley:—Messrs. E. Radley (Skelmanthorpe), W. Jones (East Ardsley), A. Huddleston (Manningham), F. Grange (Manningham), W. Batty (Shipley), B. E. Garbutt (Bingley), Shoesmith (Bradford), J. Pownall (Bradford), J. Bracewell (Leeds), and T. Booth (Brentcliff, near Leeds). Many others are "thinking it over," and there is every prospect the coming season will be a record in every respect. The introduction of separate novice classes in connection with the club has been most favourably received, and aroused great interest in a very large section who previously had no incentive to join us. Other changes in the rules have met with a mixed reception, which is not to be wondered at considering the many differences of opinion a club of this description is sure to bring forth. The feeling is pretty general, however, that private opinions will be put on one side, and that all will work together harmoniously for the benefit of the club and Fancy at large, and any points which can be improved will certainly receive attention from the members at the next general meeting. The excellent article which appeared in last weeks' issue of CAGE BIRDS by Mr. F. Hammond (to whom all praise is due), anent the entries at Yorkshire Shows, proves how popular this variety is, and those figures should easily be beaten next season. We have already had several applications for our patronage, including the following:—St. Helens, Sandy Lane, Bradford East, and Eccleshill. Applications should be sent as early as possible to me.

How to get Humming Birds.

Several times last year I was asked this question, and the only reply I have been able to give was: "Either go and get them yourself, or pay some reliable man to do it for you." And, as it may happen that some one has business in the States, it is worth mentioning that now is the time to get their local Humming-bird. This is the Ruby-throated species, a very tiny one, but fairly easy to keep, judging from the fact that many years ago Gould brought a pair to England—at least he got one of them to London, though the other died in the Channel. In those days, crossing the Atlantic was not so simple a matter as it is now, and this particular ship found herself obliged to cross the Newfoundland banks, where, owing to the cold, the Hummingbirds became torpid every night. This looks as if the Ruby-throat were a tough and hardy species, as indeed it must be to migrate as far north as Canada, where it is found in summer. It may be seen flying about in the grounds of the New York Zoo, so I am told, and any intending Humming-bird importer ought to get permission from the authorities of that institution to catch some and bring over some good British soft-bills for them in exchange.

The Method of Management.

The only real difficulty in keeping Humming-birds seems to be the provision of proper food, but the same thing applies to all small soft-bills, and Humming-birds are easier than most, because they are to a great extent honey-eaters, though they cannot live on nectar entirely, and some substitute for small insects and spiders must be provided. Gould fed his on syrup in which raw yolk of egg had been beaten up, and I have heard of a case in which some were kept for months in South America on condensed milk, and then released in the end. Those at the Zoo were fed on syrup fortified with "Marmite" a nitrogenous vegetable extract, and it must be remembered that a pair of these lived for a month, though the rest died soon. The pair that lived were Lampornis prevosti, and as only one other of this species was imported, it would seem to be a fairly hardy one. A cage for Humming-birds should have few perches, and these very thin, as the birds' feet are very small. There should be a little feeding-pot for each bird, and water for drinking needs to be provided as well as syrup. The greatest care should be taken to ensure cleanliness, as the birds cannot hop about, but only fly, and hence if their wings get sticky they are unable to get about.

A most important point is to have a large gauze or glass case ready for their arrival, well stocked with plants covered with greenfly, and with those any black spiders; once one has them here there ought to be no insuperable difficulty in keeping up a supply of insect food. The sort of food that Goldcrests will live on should also be mixed in their syrup, and if they can be got to take some of it the difficulty would be at an end. No birds would repay trouble better, as they get most charmingly tame, and their insect-like flight is most fascinating to watch.

The Venezuelan Cardinal.

Speaking of Venezuela reminds me that there are a lot of nice birds to be got there, judging from those the Zoo has been receiving from that quarter from Captain A. Pam. One of the best, if not the best, is a near relation of our old friend the Virginian Cardinal—the Venezuelan Scarlet Cardinal (Cardinalis phoeniceus). Beautiful as is the Virginian Cardinal, I think the Venezuelan is even more so; it is of a brighter red, and has the black mask reduced practically to nothing; its crest is longer, and carried in a most jaunty way, even curling forward, while the tail droops in a way that breaks the outline elegantly, as in some softbills; in fact, except for the bill, the bird has not at all the style of a Finch. The said bill, which is rather bulgy in shape, is blue-grey, like a Mannikin's, not red like the Virginian Cardinal's, and by this I know that I saw a bird of this species in the Paris Zoo about a dozen years ago, for I distinctly remember there a Red Cardinal with a blue bill, though I did not then know what the species was. Just now they have two of these beautiful birds at our Zoo, the only ones which have ever reached England, but unfortunately their colour has faded a good deal. This, however, is no doubt due to the circumstances under which they are kept indoors on the least well-lighted side of the house, for the Virginian Cardinal is also apt to lose its colour under such conditions. In Venezuela can also be obtained the Red Siskin I was mentioning recently, the Yellow-winged Sugar-bird, the Spotted Emerald Tanager, and other desirable birds.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given each week for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be children under sixteen years of age, and must state from where stories are taken.

*Revenge is Sweet.

Last summer a Swallow had built its nest outside of our house, and while it went for a fly round, a Sparrow came and took up its abode in the nest. Here it bred some young ones, but about two weeks afterwards I noticed a Swallow blocking up the entrance of the nest. Then it flew away, leaving the young Sparrows and their mother to be suffocated.—Sent by P. Topp (age 12), 39, Somerset Road, Portswood, Southampton.

*The Parrot Knew.

A Parrot that was kept in a kitchen was a great thief. One day, in trying to steal some pickled cockles she fell against a stove, and burned all the feathers off the top of her head. Of this she was greatly ashamed. Soon after, an old gentleman was brought into the parlour where Polly was. On taking off his hat it was seen that he was very bald, thereupon Polly, to the dismay of her mistress, called out, "Oh, he has been at the pickled cockles."—Extract, sent by F. W. Balls (age 14), Eastward Ho! College, Felixstowe, Suffolk.

Thrush Saved from Drowning.

A short time ago I saw an old Thrush limping about in a curious manner. I tried to catch it, but the poor bird, fearing me, tried to fly out of my way. It had something the matter with its one wing, so that it could not balance itself. In doing so it fell into a canal. I took off my cap and tried to draw it near the bank, but without success. It twirled around in the water like a cannon ball going through the air. The water was gurgling down its throat, and it was sinking. I could not see it drown, so I went into the water as I was, and got it out. I thought its end had come. I emptied a lot of water out of its stomach, and took it home and fed it, and kept it warm for the night. The next morning it flew as well as any other bird. It was surprising.—Charles Nicholls (15), 43, Windsor Road, Griffithstown, Mon.

Concerning the Cuckoo.

All our spring migrants have returned. The last of them, the Spotted Flycatcher, was seen on May 10th, but only a single specimen, although the district traversed was the usual summer haunt of these interesting birds. A fine pair of Red-Backed Shrikes have taken up their old quarters, and can be seen among the same trees and bushes, and even perched on the same dead boughs as last year. The love of old haunts appears to be an inherited instinct in most birds, more so, I think, with our summer visitors than our resident birds. But the Cuckoos must certainly be an exception, as last season they were almost as plentiful as Wood Pigeons, but this year not more than half a dozen birds have been heard. Not one man in a hundred knows this bird by sight, and yet his habit of constantly repeating his name, has made him the most popular of our summer visitors. To many he is a bird of mystery.

"O Cuckoo! shall I call thee bird,
Or but a wandering voice?"

This is because of the bird's wandering habits, for unlike others he has no home ties, nothing to keep him in a certain hedgerow or wood; and few learn to recognise this two-note songster. The Cuckoo arrives in April, and leaves us about the end of July, but young birds of the year may be seen during August and part of September, frequenting the district where they have been reared. The life history of the Cuckoo is one of the most extraordinary chapters in ornithology. These birds do not pair in the same manner as others; there appears a preponderance of males over females, so that every hen bird has generally two or three males constantly in attendance. It is these latter birds that utter the well-known call, the female's note being quite different, and apparently only used as a call to the males. It is supposed that the hen bird lays her eggs upon the ground, but whether this is done as a general rule, or simply when the selected nest is not large enough for her to deposit her egg direct, appears doubtful. She will carry the egg in her beak to the nest of the small birds she has selected to be the foster parents of her offspring.

Power of Flight.

Bird flight is one of the wonders of creation. A bird is capable of beating the fastest four-legged creature. The fleeing hare and deer have no chance with the lordly eagle. But although we daily see birds fly fast, we seldom see them at their best. The increased speed of the Wood Pigeon or Blue-rock, when the gunner has shot at, and missed it, must be considerably beyond its ordinary rate of progression.

Stormy Petrels.

Sailors have a superstitious dislike to the Stormy Petrels, or, as they are sometimes called, "Mother Carey's Chickens," believing that their appearance forebodes storms, with which they are in some way or other connected. That storms do frequently occur when, or soon after, these birds are seen, is certainly true; but the cause probably is that they instinctively feel the approach of the gale, and hover round the ship, which they imagine may shelter them.

The Sparrow in America.

The acclimatisation of the common Sparrow in America, which was nothing less than a tragedy, was the work of Senator Pike. He took with him a number of birds from England in 1850, but all of them died upon the journey. As he was determined to have some he imported more in 1853, and let them loose in Greenwood cemetery, where their surroundings, being all that could be desired, they flourished and multiplied, and have now become one of the greatest pests of a great country, and have at times been the cause of more bad language than all the skunks and rattlesnakes put together. Although the Sparrow is mischievous and destructive, one of the chief complaints against him is that he drives away other more interesting and beneficial birds.
